Although Great Britain has lost, we believe, nearly a million of inhabitants during the past three or four years, yet the population has been regularly advancing from one decennium to another during the present century. In 1801, the population of England and Wales was nine millions; in 1811 it has risen to ten; in 1821 it has risen to twelve; in 1831 to fourteen; in 1841 to sixteen; and in 1851, it amounted to eighteen millions. The rate of increase per cent, was greatest between 1811 and 1812, since which year it has been steadily diminishing, and the progression has, therefore, practically speaking, been arithmetical instead of geometrical.

The population tables, with which these volumes are chiefly occupied, are prefaced by a report illustrating of the general subject. This report furnishes a set of diagrams showing the density of the population in different parts of the kingdom—and it supplies ingenious illustrations calculated to assist the reader in realizing to his imagination the vast numbers which he has called upon to grasp. Few persons probably would suppose that all the men women and children in Great Britain might stand upon an area seven square miles in extent—and that too, without inconvenient crowding. A century ago, they would have occupied about one third of that space—half a century ago, one half

The report gives the following statements as the consequences which have grown out of the above mentioned increase of population: "Within the last fifty years the number of acres to each person living has fallen from 5,4 to 2,7 acres in Great Britain, and from four to two acres in England and Wales As a countervailing advantage, the people have been brought into each other's neighborhood, their average distance from each other being reduced in the ratio of 3 to 2 labor has been divided, industry has been organized in towns, and the quantity of produce, either consisting of, or exchangeable for the conveniences, elegancies, and necessaries of life, has in the mass largely increased, and is increasing at a more rapid rate than the population."

It is interesting to know in what particular localities and under what social and industrial circumstances population has made its greatest advances.

It appears from the report that the towns which have most rapidly increased during the last half century, are those engaged in the manufacture of straw plait—next come the watering places on the coast—and then the great seats of the cotton manufacture, which afford a home to about one-fifteenth of the whole population of England.

The number of persons absolutely houseless, and found dwelling in the open air, or seeking a temporary lodging for the night in barns and out houses, is 18,0 0. It will be observed that neither Scotland nor Ireland are included in these statistics

France, it appears, has advanced at a slower pace than England during the above period. In 1791 the population of France was somewhat short of 30,000 000. In 1848 it had not reached 36,000 000 Enghas been diminishing, Both nations have suffered from war, but not in an equal degree. It may be doubted, however, whether this inequality will account for the difference in their rate of advance in population.—Troy Whig.

CONCURRENT RESOLUTION PROPOSING AN AMENDMENT TO THE CONSTITUTION.

Resolved, (if the Senate concur,) That the following amendment be proposed to the constitution of this state and referred to the legislature to be chosen at the next general election of senators, and be published for three months previous to making such choice, in pursuance to the provisions of the first section of the thirteenth article, of said constitution.

Substitute for section three of article seven the following:

After paying the said expenses of collection, superintendence and repairs of the canals, and the sums appropriated by the first and second sections of this article, there shall be appropriated and set apart in each fiscal year out of the surplus revenues of the canals, as a sinking fund, a sum sufficient to pay the interest as it falls due, and extinguish the principal within eighteen years of any loan made under this section, and if the said sinking fund shall not be sufficient to redeem any part of the principal at the stipulated times of payment, or to pay any part of the interest of such loans as stipulated, the means to satisfy any such deficiency shall be procured on the credit of the said sinking fund. After complying with the foregoing provisions there shall be paid annually out of said revenues into the treasury of the state two hundred thousand dollars, to defray the necessary expenses of government. The remainder shall, in each fiscal year, be applied to meet appropriations for the enlargement and completion of the canals mentioned in this section, until the said canals shall be completed. In each fiscal year thereafter the remainder shall be disposed of in such manner as the legislature may direct, but shall at no time be anticipated or pledged for more than one year in advance. The legislature shall annually, during the next four years, appropriate to the enlargement of the Erie, the Oswego, the Cayuga and Seneca canals, and to the completion of the Black River and Genesee Valley canals, and for the enlargement of the locks of the Champlain canal, whenever from dilapidation or decay it shall be necessary to rebuild them, a sum not exceeding two millions two hundred and fifty thousand dollars. The remainder of the revenues of the canals for the current fiscal year in which such appropriation [illegible] shall be applied to meet such appropriation; and if the same shall be deemed insufficient, the legislature shall at the same session provide for the deficiency by loan. The legislature shall also borrow one million and five hundred thousand dollars to refund to the holders of the canal revenue certificates issued under the provisions of chapter four hundred and eighty five of the laws of the year one thousand eight hundred and fifty-one, the amount received into the treasury thereon. But no interest to accrue after July first, one thousand eight hundred and fifty five, shall be paid on such Certificates. The provisions of section twelve of this article requiring every law for borrowing money to be submitted to the people, shall not apply to the loans authorized by this section. No part of the revenues of the canals or of the funds borrowed under this section, shall be paid or applied upon or in consequence of any alleged contract made under chapter four hundred and eighty five of the laws of the year one thousand eight hundred and fifty one, except to pay for work done or materials furnished prior to the first day of June, one thousand eight hundred and fifty-two. The rates of toll on persons and property transported on the canal shall not be reduced below those for the year one thousand eight hundred and fifty-two, except by the canal board with the concurrence of the legislature.—All contracts for work or materials on any canal, shall be made with the person who shall offer to do or provide the same at the lowest price, with adequate security for their performance.

LIBERIA.—An intelligent correspondent of the Baltimore Sun, writing from Monrovia, the capital of the Republic of Liberia, makes some interesting statements relative to the rapid growth of that place, the great prosperity which has thus far marked its career, and the high position which it is destined to attain among the Republics of the earth. After speaking of the general prosperity, and universal contentment of the inhabitants and the large and handsome buildings of brick that are now in process of erection on almost every street, all indicating the development of the ample resources, both of mind and means, that seem to belong to the citizens, the writer says:

After gazing long upon the forms and bearing of these native children of Africa, I could not but admit that they were the finest specimens of men I had ever seen. They carried my thoughts back to the old Roman days, and I almost fancied that the heroes histories were before me. Cannot such men be civilized and trained to the arts of peace, and cannot their fine native intellects be taught to pursue the paths of science and to build up temples to Minerva on every green hill in the lovely land over which they now roam, a savage, unthinking, uncaring horde? And may not Liberia be the germ of a State that shall sway the sceptre of a high civilization over the whole continent of Africa?

Enlargement of the Weekly Tribune.

THE NEW YORK WEEKLY TRIBUNE enters on its thirteenth year on 3d of September, when it will in like manner be enlarged to the size of the Semi-Weekly and Daily, adding more than one fourth to its capacity—also without increase of price. The Enlargement adds at least $20,000 per annum to our expenses, in addition to the previous cost of our Daily Enlargement already effected. All our editions will, from the 1st of September next, appear in entirely new and beautiful type, now in course of preparation expressly for this paper. Our Steam Cylinder Presses are not surpassed by any in the world. Even though our Weekly Edition should be rapidly run up to 100,000 copies, we are prepared to print and mail every copy on the day (Thursday) that the form is put to press, without interrupting or retarding the regular issue of our three Daily editions, amounting to Twenty odd Thousand copies. We stand ready to adopt any improvements, however expensive, which will enable us to disseminate intelligence more freshly and effectively, and shall especially hail, as we labor to effect, a radical improvement in the celerity and reliability of the Mails.

Recent Elections.

Elections were held in N. C., Ky., Tenn, Ala., and Mo., the first of this month, but complete returns have not yet been received. In N. C. the election was only for members of Congress. The vote in some of the districts was very close, and the result can only be determined by the official count. In Ky. it was for the Legislature and Congress. The latter is the same as last year, while the whig majority in the former is largely increased.

In Tenn. it was for Gov., Legislature and Congress. The whigs carry the Legislature which elects a U. S. Senator, and a majority of members of Congress, while the democrats elect their Gov.

In Ala. there was strength enough to defeat the regular democratic ticket, but the opposition was not united. Ala. has hitherto been a benighted locofoco State, but light is breaking in there.

In Mo. the election was for 2 members of Congress in new districts. Whigs were elected in both. Mo. is a democratic state, but the delegation Congress stands 4 whigs, 2 dem., and 1 Ind. (Benton.)

Who says whigs are dead? They are alive and kicking at the South any way.

A MONSTER TROUT—A PRINCELY PRESENT!—We were taken by surprise early this week in the present of a trout from Col. Baker of the Saranac Lake House that would do honor to the table of a Prince.—It was the largest ever caught in those lakes, weighing when caught, 18 lbs! and the Col. with a heart equally as big, at once determined that it should be sent to the Editor. We measured it, and found it 35 inches in length and 22 inches in the largest circumferance! That was a noble fellow, and it makes ones nerves tingle to think of the excitement of hauling him in. He made the water fly and the line snap like a whale. Our sincerest acknowledgements are due to the Col. for this magnificent present, we never expect to match, but in our humble way, we are forever at his service. 'May his shadow never be less,' and if there is ever any more 'native weddings' at the Lake House, 'may we be there to see.'

Legislative Address of the Democratic Members.

Last week we gave the comments of the Argus on this production and now we give those of the National Democrat, of New York city, as follows:

"THE PSEUDO DEMOCRATIC ASSEMBLY ADDRESS.—This document, a history of which appeared in our columns yesterday, makes its first appearance under the auspices of the Albany Atlas, a sheet which has long since achieved a notoriety for the most unblushing boldness in the fabrication of untruth, to which its conduct in falsely appending the names of Democratic Assemblymen to an address conceived in fraud, circulated in secrecy, and characterized by weakness, subterfuge and falshood, only adds one more charge of shameful and barefaced villany to the category already accumulated."

Pertinent Questions.

"How long is the Democratic party in this State to be disgraced by such associations? Was there ever a more disreputable coalition any where than that known as 'the united Democracy of New York?'"—[Albany Argus.

We propose to keep the above pertinent questions at the mast head till after election. We have a little curiosity to see whether what is 'disgraceful' and 'disreputable' now will not be hand and glove at the polls next November. If that 'Coalition' be 'disgraceful' and disreputable' now, it will be none the less so then, and we want to see whether the people will sustain it. Stick a pin there.

Grand Chapter of Vermont.

The Grand Chapter of R. A. Masons of Vt., convened at Burlington on the 11th inst. There were seven secular Chapters represented, and from their reports it is evident this important branch of masonry is in a healthy and flourishing condition.

The M. E. PHILIP C. TUCKER, Grand High Priest, delivered an excellent business address, which was well received by the Companions, in the course of which he treated the several subjects that have commanded the attention of the different Grand Chapters, with signal ability and great comprehensiveness, among which were those of maimed candidates, appeals from the chair, &c. His opinions are characterized by deep research, patient study, and a sagacity that is seldom erroneous.

One subject broached by the Grand High Priest, is of lasting importance to the Fraternity, not only of that State, but to the brotherhood at large—that is, a truthful and well written history of the anti-masonic vandalism, that at one time threatened the extinction of the beautiful fabric of masonry, planted by our forefathers among the beautiful hills of Vt.—whose base is Faith, Hope & Charity. The faithful hearts who breasted the storm in those trying times, in the course of nature must soon pass away, and with them many of the important facts of those dark days.—Hence should immediate measures be taken to secure these important facts on the printed page, and we think the Fraternity of Vt. are too well aware of its great importance to let the subject slumber.

That masonic veteran, N. B HASWELL, Esq., was present, and his interest in the business of the Grand Chapter, over which he presided for many years, proved that the Temple of masonry has still a large space in his heart; although the snows of more than 40 winters have been succeeded by the fragrant flowers and refreshing breezes of spring, and the honorable blossoms of a well-spent life, warn him that he should seek that repose which his faithfulness to our beloved Institution, through "good report and through evil report," so justly entitles him. May his day of final rest be far removed, and his counsels long spared to his affectionate Companions.

Following are part of the officers elected for the ensuing year:

Great fellows, the new Post-Masters and Mail Agents on the cars. Under the Whig Administration we used to get Northern papers by the Northern Mail, and Southern papers by the Southern mail; but now we almost invariably receive the Northern papers, that should reach us by the morning mail, by the morning train from the South, and frequently Southern papers get here by the way of Whitehall and the North. Letters, also, occasionally go off on a tour. To be sure they do not charge anything extra for carrying the letters and papers about for two or three days or a week; nevertheless, we had much rather they would not do it.—[Saratoga Whig.

Well, we are all in the same boat. We receive our Southern papers by the overland route from Plattsburgh, from three to six days after they are printed. There have been instances of even longer detention, but we suppose it was owing to the Agents's waiting until he got a bag full! It is a disgrace to efficient Postmasters the way the mails are now managed by the chuckle heads in the employ of the government. They owe it to themselves and to their fellow-citizens to investigate this matter thoroughly, and have the faulty individual removed, or else made to perform his duty to the very letter, in order that the mails may be efficient and serviceable, instead of a reproach and useless, even if it interferes with his accustomed morning snooze. †

☞Later News from Europe does not confirm the final settlement of the Turkish question, and it would seem the prospect of peace is still dubious. The evacuation of the Danubian principalities by the Czar, is one of the articles of adjustment, but he has thus far shown no indications of doing so, but continues to strengthen his hold upon the country. An Egyptian fleet had arrived at Constantinople, with 14,000 men on board. †

SHIPWRECK.—An Irishman came from Burlington to Port Kent on Thursday last in a small sail boat, and got three kegs of the best 50 cent brandy! On his return, the wind blowing very fresh and he being very mellow, the boat was capsized, and the contraband lost, with the exception of one keg, to which he clung with singular tenacity. He was rescued from his perilous situation by the line boat from ☞Another extensive Rail Road murder occurred on the 12th inst., on the Worcester Railroad near the Boston junction, between the regular train from that city to Worcester and an excursion train coming down. There were fourteen killed and a large number wounded. Many of the wounded have since died. It is said the accident occurred by a variation of two minutes in different watches, but is more properly attributable to the foolhardiness and mulish stubborness of the conductor. It would seem that something should be done, ere long, to stop these wholesale murders by railroad attaches, who appear to have about as much regard for the lives of passengers in their charge as they would for so many sheep. We hope the day is not far distant when such culpable negligence as marks most of our railroad slaughters, will be rewarded with capital punishment.

We give the following from the N. Y. Hearld: †

Pierce's Appointees.

A disgrace to the administration and the country.

Mr. DANIEL E. SICKLES is the new Secretary of Legation to London, selected by Mr. Buchanan and appointed by President Pierce. There is no man in our City to whom we have been more uniformly and bitterly opposed in politics than Mr. S. and we have sometimes been constrained to believe that he would have been a sounder politician had he been a better man. His avowed and gloried-in robbery of one of the private Dispatch Post-Offices of our City last Fall, under a personal as well as a party impulse, was an act which ought to have consigned him to the Penitentiary instead of securing him a good office, as it probably did.—[Tribune.

The N. Y. Evening Post thus notices the appointment of Sickles:—

The appointment of Daniel E. Sickles as Secretary of the American Legation of the British Court has occasioned some surprise. It is not to be supposed that the Executive will make no mistakes in bestowing office, but the profligacy of Sickles is so notorious that we do not see any possible room for mistake in regard to it. His personal character is such that the appointment is a serious disgrace to the administration which makes it.

The 'Evening Post,' continues its attacks upon Mr. Sickles. The Editor now says:—

"We spoke the other day of the appointment of D, E Sickles as bringing scandal on the administration. A correspondent writes for publication in the Evening Post, that his character is such, that families who have any self respect, exclude him from their houses. This is true enough, but it is a fact which ought not to be given on the authority of an anonymous writer."

Great Battle between Indians on the Plains.

INDEPENDENCE, Mo. Aug, 12

Some returned Californians give the following account of a great battle between the Indians. The contest was between the Sioux tribe, aided by the Cheyennes, in all about 5000 strong, and the Paronies, aided by the Jawas, Sacs, Pottawotamies, numbering about 3000. The fight lasted all day, the killed on both sides numbering from 500 to 600. It took place within 50 miles of Fort Kearney, and the Sioux party were defeated.

A person just in from Fort Laramie, says the above account is greatly exaggerated, but nevertheless great demonstrations had been made, and had the Pottawotomies interfered, the Paronies would probably have been whipped. He states the numbers at probably hundreds instead of thousands, and the estimate of killed likewise exaggerated.

THE DAUPHIN AGAIN.—Rev. Eleazer Williams, in a recent conversation with the Editor of The Fon du lac Union, stated that evidences were being prepared for the press, which would put the question of his parentage at rest. Among other things, that the affidavit of his reputed mother, lately published, was a gross deception not by her, but by the interpreter, (bribed no doubt,) who falsely interpreted her language

He says that this woman does not understand the English language, and when the substance of the published affidavit was afterward told her, she denied ever having made it, and asserted to the contrary that she had made affidavit that he was not her son. Her statement will be contained in the forthcoming volume of evidence, soon to be published by the reverend gentleman's friends. It is stated that there are those now living in France, whose knowledge on this subject will be very important in the decision of the question, and among whom is the widow of Robespierre.—[Toledo Republican.

The National Administration.

"What do you think of our new administration?" writes a friend from Albany. We think the best thing we can do, is to think as little about it as possible. This is not the first time we have been humbugged, and probably will not be the last. Never did a man have a better opportunity to draw around him the best men of the country, and to secure the support of three fourths of his own party, and half of the opposition, than Franklin Pierce had on the fourth day of last March, and never did a man so foolishly and blindly throw away such an opportunity. At the opening of Congress he will have arrayed against him more than half of the Democratic party, and a stronger Whig force than any other President that ever occupied the White House. The great Whig party split into fragments by the nomination of Gen. Scott, and went in so large numbers over to the support of Gen. Pierce, the party that was so completely crushed last Fall, has been brought to life again by the course of this administration. Its fragments gathered together, and its deserters sent back to the old camp, all to gratify the old fogyism of Wm. L. Marcy, and to appease the rotten freesoilers, who had fallen off like decayed leaves from the great Democratic tree in this State. The truth is, Marcy has fought Whiggery all his life, and he can now in his old age, see nothing but Whiggery and the ghost of Whiggery to war against. He has set up the Whig party, and called in his freesoil friends to see him knock it down again. And he keeps setting it up and striving to knock it down. If he had let the freesoilers alone, or rather let General Pierce carry out the principles he has so long professed in New Hampshire and elsewhere; if he had given the offices—and thereby encouragement—to the National Democrats, and shown by his works that freesoilism—which is but another name for abolitionism—could receive no favor from this administration, full one half the Whigs would give it their hearty support.

But no; freesoilism must be appeased; the poor, weak, dying ally of anti-slavery must be resuscitated; the spoils must be divided; Van Burenism must have pap; Marcy must get into line for the succession; and Pierce and the national Whigs, who had so heartily supported him, must be kicked to the dogs. Well, the deed is done. This new Administration is a fizzle. Pierce is proved to be as near a nothing or nobody as you can guess.

The story that he mounted his horse, flourished his sword and called on his soldiers in Mexico to rush into battle, then fainted and fell at the first fire may not be true; but after the flourish of trumpets at his inauguration his bombastic address, his great profession and swell mob manner of talking and "pointing his finger over to where Fowler stood, and speaking out in thunder tones," if any appointee of mine advocate free-soilism, he'll march;" and his fainting and falling into the arms of Governor Marcy, we are ready to believe almost anything The democratic party, as things have turned out, could hardly have picked out a weaker or poorer statesman and politician than the one they have elected to the Presidency. Pierce either does not know anything, or is so bamboozled and bewildered that he can't see a hole through a ladder, or a cloud that hides the sun at noon day.—Dog Book.

Is the Whig Party Dead?

Whoever thinks so let him read and reflect upon the following figures. 1, 385,936 votes is certainly pretty good capital to begin on—a pretty respectable nucleus upon which to rally a party.

The vote of 1848 was—F. S. 291,613.
Loco 1,223 764. whig 1,362,242

That of 1852 was,

Pierce, democrat,	1,607,729
Scott, whig.	1,385,936
Webster, union,	7,433
Hale, free soil,	155,640
Goodell, abolition,	72
Troup, State Rights,	2,300
Broome, native.	2.470

Who says the whig party is dead?

We append the following from the Boston Atlas:

IS THE WHIG PARTY DEAD.

The Whig Party dead? When truth is forsaken,
And Reason, confounded, retires from her throne;
When the solid foundations of virtue are shaken,
And madness shall stalk forth in triumph alone;—
When Liberty's hosts in dismay are disbanded,
And the star-spangled banner no more be unfurled;
When freemen shall weep, for the ship of state stranded,
And freedom's last hope shall be banished the world;—
When anarchy dire shall reign through the nation,
And darkness shall hover o'er Freedom's last fires,
And Tyranny triumphs in wild exhultation,
Then, then, the Whig Party, with Freedom, expires.

The Elections.

SOMETHING WRONG.—The N. Y. Herald thinks that the late elections in Kentucky, Alabama, Tenessee, and North Carolina, indicate "that there is something wrong in the democratic machinery." It though the Whigs were dead, disbanded, and never to appear again. But the evidence is quite otherwise. The Herald concludes by saying:—"Therefore, we must conclude that the palpable manifestations which have broken out of returning life in the body of the whig party, have a practical meaning in them, which it would be well for the Administration to look into.

The time table of the R. and B. R. R. may be seen in another column. To many ANOTHER NEW TERRITORY—ALHARRA.—The Washington Union contains a communication from Henry R Schoolcraft, Esq., in which he describes a section of country which is known by the name of Alharra. He says it is an attractive, well timbered, and fertile area of country, lying immediately west of the Rocky Mountains, in mild temperate latitudes to which, for the purpose of distinct allusion, he applies the aboriginal term The area is about fifty miles broad, and lies parallel to the Rocky Mountains for a distance of several hundred miles. It gives rise to both of the main and numerous subsidiary of the Columbia river. It is a high plain which is cut through by these affluents, of a most fertile character, bearing trees, and in some places high grass, and while the streams create abundant water power for lumber and grain mills and machinery, they are free; or nearly free, from inundation of their banks. This district probably comprehends twenty five thousand square miles, and if its capacities of production have been correctly estimated, would sustain a population greater than some of the Eastern and Atlantic States.

One day during the present week, the cars on the Watertown Railroad were stopped, between that place and Cape Vincent, by the multitude of grasshoppers upon the track. Now don't, dear reader, suppose for a moment there was an embankment of the critters—neither set it down in your diary as an infernal newspaper lie. But to explain—the rails were so thickly covered with them, and the car wheels smashed them up so beautifully between a hop and a jump that it had the effect of grease on the rails making the wheels revolve swiftly, while the train remained stationary. This was witnessed by several gentlemen of the first respectability, and is true. 'In union there is strength.'

☞The Freeman's Journal announces that "a distinguished American statesman" has just become a convert to the Roman Catholic faith. The editor does not condescend to enter into any particulars, beyond the simple statement that the conversion in question took place at Rome on the 2d July, which conversion was "received by Cardinal Fransoni." Also, that said convert is an American Senator.

There is, we believe, but one "American Senator" abroad, and that is the chief of Young America the doughty Judge Douglass of Illinois Whether he is to take priest's order, retire to a convent, or simply come home and run for President, is not stated.—[Rochester American.

Of course he will be the next democratic candidate for the Presidency.

☞We learn that Lola Montez is about to be united to a gentleman who formerly kept a daguerreotype saloon on Washington street, in Boston. Lola and this gentleman are now in California; they both went from the States in the same steamer, where they formed an intimacy, and it is reported in that region that they are about to be united in the bonds of matrimony.

☞The Czar of Russia has, through his private Secretary, ordered eight blocks of the Vermont marble, weighing six tons each. They are designed for the erection of a monument to Lafleur, who is supposed to have been the originator of the movement for firing Moscow, on the advance of the French army.

It is currently reported, and believed to be quite authentic, that the mother of the celebrated French patriot, Lamartine, was a Massachusetts girl, named Wainstill Brigham. She married the father of the eminent statesman, Lamartine, when quite young, in Boston, and then went to France, where she remained during her life.

SOME of Pierce's appointments have produced so much disappointment in North Carolina, that the Administration recently appointed a very respectable mulatto, keeper of the Long Shoal Light Boat. We should have some hopes of the Administration did we no suppose there was some mistake about this appointment, which we find recorded in the Washington (N. C.) Whig as a fact and no mistake.

☞The body of an infant was found in the flume of Mr. Geo. M Sabin's saw mill, about one mile north of this village. There was probably foul play, connected with the affair somewhere. It had doubtless been cast into the river somewhere above the mill, to conceal shame, and had floated down to this place, where it was discovered on Saturday last.—Malone Palladium

A "FAST" COUPLE.—We find the following marriage notice in the Rochester Daily Advertiser, with a request for Syracuse papers to copy. If the happy couple don't "make good time," it won't be the fault of their names:—

MARRIED.—At Saratoga Springs, on the 28th ult., by Rev. A. Carter, C. H. TROTTER to Miss Eliza A. GALLOP, of East Avon.

The Post Office Department recently decided that under the law of 1852, a subscriber residing in the country in which a paper may be printed and published, is entitled to receive it through the mails free of postage from the Post Office within the delivery of which he may reside, even though that Post Office may be situated without the limits of the county aforesaid.

TACONY AND FLORA TEMPLE IN ROCHESTER.—Tacony Victorious.—These two famous trotters had a trial on the Rochester course on Tuesday last, best three and five. The following is the result;

Tacony won first heat, 2.30; do second heat, 2 31 1 2; Flora third heat, 2.30 1-2; Tacony fourth heat, 2 30 1 2.

☞A writer in Putnam's Magazine says, that "the man who will be President of the United States in 1900, is in all likelihood, running barefoot at this very moment among the huckleberry bushes of Oregon."

☞Young SPRING, who's noble conduct during the trial and imprisonment of his guilty father in Philadelphia excited so much attention, has been appointed a messenger in one of the public offices at Washington.

☞ We pronounce the Editor of the Northern Gazette a scoundrel and a liar! and from this date discontinue our exchange.

The Editor of the Northern Gazette is pleased to get our property and then try to cheat us out of it, and to steal our items and then abuse us for a general request to give credit! He now says that the authorship of the marriage notices is between a friend and us, choosing he says to believe the former.

We append the following affidavits:—

Essex County ss: John Nash, foreman in the office of the Essex County Republican, being duly sworn says that the notice accompanying the marriages at Baker's Lake House, published in this paper on the 2d. ult. were written by the Editor, as he knows of his own knowledge.

JOHN NASH.

Sworn before me } HARVEY CARTER,
August 18, 1853. } Justice Peace.

Essex County ss: Ira S. Smith, law clerk, being duly sworn says, that he was in the Republican Office about the 1st ult. and saw the Editor writing the notes to the marriages at Baker's Lake House, and when completed, the Editor read them to deponent. IRA S. SMITH.

Sworn before me } HARVY CARTER,
August 18, 1853. } Justice Peace.

Essex County ss: Jonathan Tarbell being duly sworn says that himself and no other person wrote the remarks accompanying the marriage notices at Baker's Lake House and published in this paper on the 2d. ult That the marriages and the particulars he gathered from heresay from several different persons residing in Keeseville and not from any person from Saranac Lake. J. TARBELL.

"Charge, Chester, charge!" is a good motto; but perhaps his ill luck in recovering certain other charges discourages him. —Northern Gazette.

☞ That is rather boldly "glorying in one's shame" truly. We were simple enough to "charge" bundles of paper to the Editor of the Gazette all through the last fall's campaign, though knowing he had neither money or credit to buy, or borrow elsewhere. Pay was provided from week to week so long as his friends wanted to use him, but election being over the case was altered. A bundle we then 'charged' we cannot collect as the Editor hints above —the constable can't find anything to 'level' on! The defence is, not that he did not have the paper, but that piracy upon a political opponent against whom he has a personal spite for favors in an hour of need, is lawful. If he can establish this law it will be a feather in his cap for which the democracy will of course give him another office. A man of honor in the old time would pay a bill, admitted to be correct altho' due to an enemy; but democracy is progressive. If Nelson is satisfied with trying to cheat us out of a bundle of paper, furnished as his was, we have no fault to find. We are content to leave these things to time. If Nelson don't get into State's Prison before the end of his 4 years it wont be because he won't deserve it.

CORRECTION.—The Editor of the N. G. says the Rep. is mortgaged to Thurlow Weed. We say nothing about the meanness of dragging private business into political discussions, especially when a falsehood is wilfully stated as in this case, because nothing is so low as to be beneath that Editor. We simply say that the Rep. is not mortgaged to Thurlow Weed, and never was, and this that Editor knows, or might have ascertained. We don't even owe Thurlow Weed a farthing, nor do any friends on our account. The Rep. is mortgaged to secure the purchase money, and to secure some friends in this County who endorsed for us to assist in the purchase. The Gazette is precisely similarly situated. The only difference between us is, that we have met our payments, which the Gazette has not, and saved our endorsers harmless, while the Gazette has notoriously lurched his. We have not been sued for our board and rum bill, nor tried to cheat any man out of his honest dues, while that Editor has.

Does that Editor wish to refer to private affairs again?

☞ "According to the same example so do I." Pierce extends to the Hunkers his "highest regards." The barnburner press in this State give them the benefit of Dickinson's 4th of July. Oration, tho' at the same time they give him "fits" in their editorials.

We have had some hopes of a split in that party, but we now give it up, for we cannot believe the Hunkers will be so ungrateful as to resist longer.

Accomplished.— We have driven our neighbor fairly into the ring of the democratic pugilists, and he is fighting away as hard as the hardest. Although at the expense of some personal retorts from that gentleman we have no regrets. A short time ago he flatly denied the state of things which he now proclaims and furiously battles. We are content.

TRUSS OFFICE

The largest and most approved Trusses; Female supporters, Do. with shoulder braces attached; spinal elevators for curvature of the spine, and projection of the shoulder blade. Simpkinson's shoulder brace. This instrument is so constructed that it not only acts the part of shoulder braces but carries the belt of the ladies' shirts on their shoulders; and, hence a needless evil done away in securing them on the hips and sides. For gentlemen it not only serves for a shoulder brace, but acts the part of suspenders.

As to the importance and use of the above named instruments, and their beneficial effects, their peculiar mechanism and superiority over their imitators of the same name, I need not say anything. They are so well known by physicians, and the multitude of persons that have had occasion to use them in this and the adjoining country, that I do not deem it out of place a long catalogue of certificates; yet I have abundant evidence in my possession to justify me in all I claim or affirm, and deem it a privilege to give reference to any who wish to make inquiries.

Or, Every One His Own Physician.

THE Fortieth Edition, with One Hundred Engravings, showing Diseases and Malformations of the Human System in every shape and form. To which is added a Treatise on the Diseases of Females being of the highest importance to married people, or those contemplating marriage. By WILLIAM YOUNG, M. D.

Let no father be ashamed to present a copy of the Æsculapius to his child. It may save him from an early grave. Let no young man or woman enter into the secret obligations of married life without reading the Pocket Æsculapius. Let no one suffering from a hacknied Cough, Pain in the Side, restless nights, nervous feelings, and the whole train of Dyspepsic sensations, and given up by their physician, be another moment without consulting the Æsculapius. Have the married, or those about to be married any impediment, read this truly useful book, as it has been the means of saving thousands of unfortunate creatures from the very jaws of death.

☞ Any person sending TWENTY-FIVE CENTS enclosed in a letter, will receive one copy of this work by mail, or five copies will be sent for One Dollar.

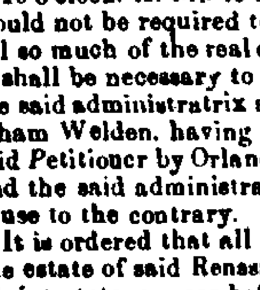
At a Surrogate Court held at the County Judge's Office in Elizabethtown, in and for the County of Essex, on the 20th day of June, A. D., 1853.
Present, J. E. McVine, Essex Co. Judge.

In the matter of the application of Charles Morhous, a creditor of Rensselaer Morhous, deceased, to have the real estate of the said deceased, mortgaged, leased or sold for the payment of debts.

An Order having been heretofore made on the application of Charles Morhous, a creditor of Rensselaer Morhous, late of the County of Essex, deceased, intestate, requiring Emeline Morhous, administratrix, and Abraham Welden and David W. Morhous, administrators of all and singular the goods, chattels, and credits of the said intestate, personally to be and appear before the County Judge and Surrogate of the county of Essex, at his office in Elizabethtown, on the 20th day of June ult., at 10 o'clock, A. M., to shew cause why they should not be required to mortgage, lease, or sell so much of the real estate of said deceased as shall be necessary to pay his debts. And the said administratrix and administrator Abraham Welden, having appeared, as also the said Petitioner by Orlando Kellogg his Proctor, and the said administrators having shown no cause to the contrary.



It is ordered that all persons interested in the estate of said Rensselaer Morhous deceased, intestate, appear before the county Judge of the county of Essex, at his office in the town of Elizabethtown, on the 15th day of August next, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon of that day, then and there to shew cause why authority should not be given to the said administrators and administratrix to mortgage, lease, or sell so much of the Real Estate of the said deceased as shall be necessary to pay his Debts.

"EVERY FAMILY SHOULD HAVE A COPY."

20,000 Copies sold in less than 5 months. A new edition, revised and improved, just issued.

Dr. Hunter's Medical Manual and Hand Book for the Afflicted—

Containing an outline of the origin, progress treatment and cure of every form of disease, contracted by promiscuous sexual intercourse, by self abuse or by sexual excess, with advice for their prevention, written in a familiar style, avoiding all medical technicalities, and everything that would offend the ear of decency, from the result of some twenty years successful practice, exclusively devoted to the cure of diseases of a delicate or private nature.

To which is added, receipts for the cure of the above diseases, and a treatise on the causes, symptoms and cure of the Fever and Ague.

Testimony of the Prof of Obstetrics in Penn College, Philadelphia.—"Dr. Hunter's Medical Manual."—The author of this work unlike the majority of those works who advertise to cure the diseases of which it treats, is a graduate of one of the best Colleges in the United States. It affords me pleasure to recommend him to the unfortunate, or to the victim of malpractice, as a successful and experienced practitioner, in whose honor and integrity they may place the greatest confidence.
JOSEPH LONGSHORE, M. D.

From A Woodward, M. D., of Penn. University, Philadelphia—It gives me pleasure to add my testimony to the professional ability of the author of the "Medical Manual." Numerous cases of diseases of the Genital Organs, some of them of long standing have come under my notice, in which his skill has been manifest in restoring to perfect health, in some instances where the patient has been considered beyond medical aid. In the treatment of Seminal weakness, or disarrangement of the functions produced by Self-abuse, or Excess of venery, I do not know his superior in the profession. I have been acquainted with the Author some thirty years, and deem it no more than justice to him as well as a kindness to the unfortunate victim of early indiscretion, to recommend him as one, in whose professional skill and integrity they may safely confide themselves. ALFRED WOODWARD, M D.

"This is, without exception, the most comprehensive and intelligible work published on the class of diseases of which it treats. Avoiding all technical terms, it addresses itself to the reason of its readers. It is free from all objectionable matter and no parent, however fastidious, can object to placing it in the hands of his sons. The author has devoted many years to the treatment of the various complaints treated of, and with too little breath to puff,' and 'too little presumption to impose,' he has offered to the world at the merely nominal price of 25 cents, the fruits of some 20 years most successful practice."—Herald.

"No teacher or parent should be without the knowledge imparted in this invaluable work. It would save years of pain, mortification and sorrow to the youth under their charge."—People's Advocate.

A Presbyterian clergyman in Ohio, in writing of "Hunter's Medical Manual," says "Thousands upon thousands of our youth, by evil example and influence of the passions have been led into the habit of self-pollution without realizing the sin and fearful consequences upon themselves and their posterity. The constitutions of thousands who are raising families have been enfeebled if not broken down, and the do not know the cause or the cure. Anything that can be done so to enlighten and influence the public mind as to check, and ultimately to remove this wide spread source of human wretchedness, would confer the greatest blessing next to the religion of Jesus Christ, on the present and coming generations. Intemperance (or the use of intoxicating drinks,) though it has slain thousands upon thousands, is not a greater scourge to the human race. Accept my thanks on behalf of the afflicted, and, believe me, your co-worker in the good work you are so actively engaged in."

One copy, (securely enveloped,) will be forwarded free of postage to any part of the United States for 25 cents, or 6 copies for $1.— Address (post paid) COSDEN & Co., publ... 478.

OLD ESTABLISHED HOSPITAL.

Quick Cures and Low prices. Private Diseases and their Antidote.

Dr. LISPENARD, author of the Marriage Guide, or Private Medical Treatise, Professor of Diseases of Women and Children, and Licentiate of the College of Physicians and Surgeons of the United States University, &c., &c., continues as heretofore to be confidentially and successfully consulted on all forms and varieties of

PRIVATE DISEASES.

at his old quarters, No. 5 Beaver-street, ALBANY, N. Y.

The great success attending the use of Doctor L.'s remedies in secret diseases, and the many remarkable cures daily effected by him in recent as well as old lingering attacks, is conclusive evidence that the well

SICK AND UNFORTUNATE

can do no better than consult the Doctor, whose whole time is devoted to the exclusive treatment of this much neglected branch of practice.

LOOK AT THIS.

Dr. Lispenard cures recent cases of disease in from three to six days, and chronic or long standing diseases in a very short period of time, without the use of Mercury, without the loss of time, change of diet, or attention from

DAILY EMPLOYMENT.

In Syphilis, Gonorrhœa, Gleet, Strictures, Enlargement of the Testicles and Cords, Bubo, Chancres, Pimples and Scaly Eruptions, Sore Throats and Noses, Chancres on the tongue, tender shin bones, and diseases of the skin, and impure blood, Dr. Lispenard's remedies are above all praise, and frequently cure when all others had failed

EVEN TO RELIEVE.

More than 5 000 patients have during the past year experienced the benefit of the Doctor's extraordinary skill in treating secret diseases—among which, diseases of the bladder and kidneys have formed a goodly proportion

YOUNG MEN,

who by indulging in secret habits have injured their health and prostrated their intellectual faculties, and thereby deprived themselves of the pleasure of married life, should consult Dr Lispenard without a moment's delay. Hundreds have been restored to health, society and friends, under my peculiar mode of treatment although vast sums of money had been sacrificed without any benefit. My remedy for this disease is pleasant to take, has no offensive smell and

CURES WITHOUT FAIL.

Persons so unfortunate as to be diseased, although they may have visited half a dozen Doctors and had medicine ten or a dozen times with no benefit, would exhibit wisdom by making their case known to that FRIEND OF THE SICK. Dr. Lispenard, who never charges for advice and warrants all his cures. The sick are often at a loss where to apply for relief, AND TIS NO WONDER, as hundreds stand ready to plunder the unfortunate victim of PRIVATE DISEASE, or secret habits with but one thought for his life and health. All thus deceived will find a friend, and moderate charges, in consulting the Doctor who uses no MERCURY and cures every time.

N. B.—Persons from a distance when visiting the city in search of a physician and friend will be fortunate if they succeed in escaping the many dens of imposition conducted by unprincipled men, destitute of character knowledge or name, who fleece the unfortunate victim of his hard earned money, and his remaining health. Patients who have no acquaintance in the city should make inquiry of some respectable citizen, or the editor or proprietor of any of the city papers, to ascertain who is the most reliable physician to apply to.

FEMALE DISEASES.

Dr. Lispenard from an experience seldom or never enjoyed by any other medical man, is enable to treat, with every hope of success, all and every variety of Female Complaints—with safe and pleasant remedies—and has without doubt cured within the past five years more than 3000 females afflicted with diseases of the Bladder Womb, &c. &c. Ladies afflicted with suppression or stoppage of their monthly turns, will recollect that Dr. Lispenard is still the sole American agent for,

DR. VICHOI'S

FEMALE MONTHLY PILLS.

The unprecedented sale of more than 15,000 boxes of these excellent Pills and the good results which always follow their use, is conclusive evidence of their utility in stoppages, &c. Caution—Married Ladies in certain delicate situations should not use them—for reasons see directions with each box. Price $1. Sent by mail to all parts of the world.

Married Persons and those about to Marry, should enclose 12½ cents post paid to Dr. Lispenard, and obtain a copy of his Marriage Guide or Private Treatise, a bewitching little work of nearly 100 pages, illustrated. Everything that married persons can desire or wish to know is hereexplained. Persons who from poverty or sickness have no desire to increase their family, will find necessary instruction in the Marriage Guide. One copy 12½ cents; 6 copies 50 cts; 12 copies $1—mailed free to any part of the world.

N. B.—Patients treated by letter and medicines sent with full directions for use, to the writer's address. All communications destroyed or returned.

No mercury used in any case and all cures warranted.

No boys or precocious students allowed: timed persons take notice.

Friends of Dr. L. when recommending patients to our care will recollect our number, 5 Beaver st., three doors from South Broadway.

Hospital open from 7 A. M., to 9 P. M., and on Sundays from 1 to 4 P. M.

No charge for advice, although no medicine may be desired.

Good board and private rooms for those who desire to remain in the city.

OUR CHILDREN:

How Shall we Save Them?

BY T. S. ARTHUR.

CHAPTER I.

Two beautiful children were playing on the floor in a elegantly furnished apartment.—one, a girl scarcely past her fifth summer, and the other, a sunny-haired boy, younger by at least two years. A living picture of happy innocence were those sportive children No wonder that, ever and anon, the mother's eyes were lifted from the book she was reading, and fixed with a loving earnestness upon them; nor, that, resting the volume in her lap, she murmured to herself—

"Precious ones!"

And remained gazing at them for many minutes, until, observing her, the children left their play, and, as if drawn to her side by the invisible power of her love, came and leaned upon her, and looked up tenderly in her face. Receiving each a kiss, the children bounded away, and the mother, after following their motions with her eyes lifted her book again and commenced reading. But, it was not long before the volume drooped in her hands, and, with a sigh so faint that it was scarcely audible, she leaned slightly forward and became lost in reverie. While she thus sat, the door opened, and a man, just in the prime of life, entered the room. Instantly the children sprang from the floor with cries of pleasure, and a smile went wreathing over the mother's face

With his boy on one knee and his little girl on the other, the man sat down close beside his wife, and said, tenderly—

"I thought you looked sober, as I came in, Ellen; or was it only my fancy?"

"I don't know that it was all fancy," returned the wife, with a quiet smile.

"Why should you be sober or thoughtful, dear? Have we not all that heart can wish? With sunny faces like these around you, how can a shadow fall upon your spirits?"

"I could not ask a change for the present, Edward. My cup is full. It is from the uncertain future that a shadow comes."

"The present only is ours. Let us be wise and enjoy the blessings it scatters about our feet."

"If these dear children could only remain as they are, innocent and happy, no thoughts would come to disturb the quiet of my heart. But that is not to be. Ah, Edward! To think of care and sorrow weighing down this head'—and the mother laid her small white hand among the curls that clustered about the head of her boy—'or evil affections finding a home in this dear child's heart! I cannot tell you how sad the thought sometimes makes me feel.'

"But how vain all this is, dear. We cannot know the future. All are not oppressed with care or sorrow—all hearts are not filled with evil—why, then, should such things be feared for our children? Surely their promise is fair!"

"Few, perhaps, have so fair a promise," said the wife. 'But, where we can know nothing certain, the heart will, at times, feel the pressure of a doubt."

Just at that moment the bell announced dinner. and turned their thoughts from the sober train into which they had fallen.

The parties here introduced were a wealthy merchant named Greenfield, his young wife, and their two beautiful children. Mr. Greenfield had married at the age of thirty-two, after having lived for ten or twelve years a life of pleasure and sensual gratification. Few men of his age had been through so much gayety and dissipation, and yet showed it as little; and there was none, except his wife, who knew that a single evil, of the many indulged in earlier life, was likely to flow from this habit, which showed itself, at times, in a too free use of intoxicating drinks.

Accustomed to take wine and spirits from youth upward, Mr. Greenfield's physical system gradualllly accommodated itself to the extra stimulant it was compelled to bear, and seemed not to be in the least injuriously affected by it. But, this was only an appearance. Undreamed of by the young man, a morbid change was taking place, and a habit forming itself, which, ere long. was to become in him a "second nature," and bear him onward as a stream bears the boat that is launched upon its surface. Long before his marriage, the impulses of this "second nature" were felt; but not in a way to create any doubt or alarm in his mind. On convivial occasions, and at "wine parties," he sometimes indulged in drinking, until reason's light grew dim, and the senses lost their nice discrimination. But saving a slight feeling of mortification, and a resolve to be more guarded in future, such occurrences did not produce any serious effect upon his mind.

At the age of twenty-five, Mr. Greenfield succeeded to a large and well-based mercantile business, which he continued with something of the intelligence, energy and industry that distinguished his father, who had founded it and built thereon a handsome fortune. Inheriting a love of accumulation, and inspired by an ambition to be among the wealthiest, he devoted himself to the duties of his counting room, during the hours of business, with untiring assiduity. But, when he left the atmosphere of trade, he entered that of pleasure, and sensualized his mind to a degree that would have startled him, had an image thereof been clearly reflected back upon his perceptions.

This life he led until the age of thirty-two, when he was united to a young and beautiful girl, the daughter of a merchant whose wealth quadrupled his own. Not solely by external considerations were the parties to this union influenced. A purer and stronger attraction drew them towards each other; and in joining their hands at the altar, their hearts acknowledged a deep and holy affection. And she who whispered her maiden vows was worthy of his love. A great change took place in Greenfield about the time he entered into a marriage engagement. Gay company was abandoned for the society of his betrothed; and youthful follies and vices no longer indulged, with the single exception of spirit and wine drinking, which he looked upon as nothing evil.

Tenderly did Mr. Greenfield love the gentle creature he had taken to his bosom; and when sweet children blessed their union that love became a deeper and purer passion.

It is impossible for any one to pass a long period in sensual indulgence, such as had marked the early years of Mr Greenfield's life, without having his mind debased in some degree, and the lower propensities stimulated beyond the limit of an easy rational control. A principle of integrity, strengthened by an earnest and sincere love for his wife and children, was all sufficient to keep Mr. Greenfield above unlawful self-indulgence, if the temptation to step aside into old paths assailed him. But, corporeal pleasure, checked in one direction, naturally turned in another with a stronger current; and, in the gratification of his palate, Mr. Greenfield sought to appease the cravings of an eager sensuality. He, therefore. took great delight in the table, and eat and drank, daily, far more than nature really demanded. Mere eating and drinking, for the sake of gratifying the taste, is an evil that grows, and the longer it is continued, the more power does appetite gain, and the weaker becomes the reason when it opposes itself to any self indulgence.

Very soon after the marriage of Mr. Greenfield, his thoughts began to minister to his appetite; and, from a deliberate purpose, without reflecting that such was the case, he so arranged his business, that, on returning home to dinner, he could dismiss all care from his mind. An hour was always spent at the table, at the end of which period a cup of strong coffee was taken to aid his stomach in the disposition of an over-plus of highly seasoned food, and a couple of hours spent in sleep to give time for the wine and brandy, taken with a most imprudent freedom, to pass from his confused brain. This was the history of every day, at the time we have introduced him to the reader, about six years subsequent to his marriage, and had been almost from the first.

To have said that Mr. Greenfield went to bed drunk every day after dinner, would have been felt, both by himself and wife, as a base and cruel slander. Yet, in sober truth, it was even so.

It may seem strange to some, yet the intemperance of her husband was not a source of anxiety to Mrs. Greenfield, for she did not know his daily self-indulgence by that startling and appalling name. He never came home to her in liquor. He did not act unreasonably His business was never neglected, nor were his evenings spent in clubs or convivial parties. But, when he indulged too freely, he concealed the fact under the mantle of sleep. Not only was his wife deceived; but Mr. Greenfield, by the very orderly way, so to speak, in which he indulged his appetite, remained half-ignorant of the fact that he drank to intoxication almost daily.

On the day in which we have introduced the merchant to our readers, he came home, as usual, with his thoughts more fully occupied with what he was to eat and drink than with any thing else. Slight expressions of impatience, made on more than one ner announced in as brief a space as possible after he came in from his business — But a few minutes, therefore, elapsed before the bell rang, and Mr. and Mrs Greenfield, each holding a child by the hand, descended to the dining room. A glass of brandy and water came first in order. by way of preparation for the viands that were to enter, successively, into Mr. Greenfield's stomach. Then he took his highly seasoned plate of soup, and eat it with the relish of an epicure. Between his soup and fish, came another glass of brandy and water; and with the meats, two or three kinds of which were on the table, sallads, condiments, and brandy, were mingled in liberal proportions. During the early part of the meal there was little conversation; but after the brandy and rich food had begun to stimulate the blood of Mr. Greenfield, his tongue became free, and he had much to say that was interesting and agreeable to both his wife and children. Before, however, the dessert had been eaten, conversation began to flag, for the merchant was losing the easy control of his vocal organs. With the dessert came a bottle of wine, a glass of which was taken by Mrs. Greenfield; her husband drank the rest.

When all the courses had passed, and while the merchant was sipping the last of his bottle of wine, a single cup of strong coffee, almost as black as ink, was brought in by a servant. Into this three or four large lumps of sugar were dissolved, making the liquid like syrup. After taking this, leisurely, with a spoon, Mr. Greenfield ascended to his chamber, with every sense confused, and really so much intoxicated. that, if he had ventured into the street, he would have reeled along the pavement — There, torpid as an anaconda after diuing upon a deer, he slept away the effects of his debauch —for such it really was.

Mrs. Greenfield, who had eaten, as she always did, lightly, passed the afternoon in reading, after having sent her two children out to take the air. They returned before their father came down. and were clambering about their mother and telling of all they had seen, when he joined them in the drawing-room, his face red and tumid, and his whole appearance that of one almost as much asleep as awake Not until after tea did he seem like himself again. Then, with a heart full of affection for his wife and children, and a mind clear and intelligent, he passed the evening in the enjoyment of true domestic happiness. He sported with his little ones, Henry and Florence, for an hour, until sleep weighed gently down their eyelids; and after they were laid to rest, he bent over them, and gazed upon their beautiful faces—more beautiful in sleep—with a feeling of tenderness not to be uttered in words. Deeply and fervently did he love these gentle ones. Their babes asleep, Mr. and Mrs. Greenfield spent the evening in reading and conversation, the time passing pleasantly with both. At the hour of retiring, Mr. Greenfield ordered a bottle of wine His wife took a single glass, as at dinner time, and he drank the rest.

On the next morning. Mr. Greenfield felt a nervous tremor and sinking; to subdue which he took, soon after rising, a glass of brandy. This made all right, and prepared him to enjoy his breakfast, and to go forth and enter upon the business of another day. At twelve o'clock a lunch was taken, and, with this, another glass of brandy; and at three o'clock, he returned home to deprave himself by the indulgence of a grovelling and inordinate appetite, as he had done the day before.

The history of one day in the life of Mr Greenfield, gives the history of years.—Thus he had gone on, almost since the time of his marriage, and the evil as a natural result, was increasing. Having presented this history of a day, in order to give a clearly discernible cause for results which we shall exhibit in the course of our narrative, we will now pass to a portrayal of the sad effects we design to present. Let the reader bear in mind, that the habit of drinking was formed at the time of Mr. Greenfield's marriage, and that this habit had daily confirmation from that period onward.

GIRLS WHO WANT HUSBANDS.—Girls, you want to get married, don't you? Ah, what a natural thing it is for young ladies who have such a hankering for the sterner sex! It is a weakness that woman has, and for this reason she is called the weaker sex! Well, if you want to get married, don't for conscience sake act like fools about it. Don't go into a fit of the nips every time you see a hat and a pair of whiskers. Don't get the idea into your heads that you must put yourself in the way of every young man in the neighborhood, in order to attract notice, for if you don't run after men they will after you. Mark that.

A husband hunter is the most detestable of all young ladies. She is full of starch and puckers, she puts on so many false airs, and she is so nice shat she appears ridiculous in the eyes of every decent person. She may generally be found at meeting, comming in, of course, about the last one, always at social parties, and invariably takes a front seat at concerts.—She tries to be the belle of the place, and thinks she is. Poor girl! You are fitting yourself for an old maid, just as sure as the Sabbath comes on Sunday. Men will flirt with you, and flatter you simply because they love to do it, but they have no more idea of making you a wife than they have of committing suicide. If I was a young man, I would have no more [illegible] such fancy women than I would rattlesnake.

Now girls let Nelly give you her advice, and she knows from a fair chance of getting respectable husbands. It is all well enough that you learn to finger the piano, work embroidery, study grammar, &c., but don't neglect letting grandma. or your dear mother teach you how to make bread and get a meal of victuals good enough for a king. No part of a housekeeper's duties should be neglected; if you do not marry a wealthy husband you will need to know how to do such work, and if you do it will be no disadvantage for you to know how to oversee a servant girl, and instruct her to do these things as you would have them done In the next place, don't pretend to be what you are not. Affectation is the most despicable of "accomplishments," and will only cause sensible, people to laugh at you. No one but a fool will be caught by affectation—it has a transparent skin. easily to be seen through. Dress plain, but neatly. Remember that nothing gives a girl so modest, becoming and lovely an appearance, as a neat and plain dress. All the flummery and tinsel work of the dress-maker and milliner are unnecessary. If you are really handsome, they do not add to your beauty one particle—if you are homely, they only make you look worse.—Gentlemen don't court your laces and jewelry, but your own dear selves.

Finger rings and folderols may do to look at, but they add nothing to the value of a wife—all young men know that. If you know how to talk, do it naturally, and not be so distressingly polite as to spoil all you say If your hair is straight don't put on the curling-tongs to make people believe you have negro blood in your veins. If your neck is very black, wear a lace collar, but don't be so foolish as to daub on paint, thinking that people are so blind as not to see it; and if your cheeks are not rosy, don't apply pink saucers, for the deception will be detected and become the gossip of the neighborhood.

Finally, girls, listen to the counsel of your mothers, and ask their advice in everything. Think less of fashion than you do of kitchen dutics—less of romances than you do of the realities of life—and instead of trying to catch beaux, strive to make yourse eves worth being caught by them.—NELLY GRAY.

Fourth of July in Georgetown.

THEY have some original whigs in Georgetown, in this State. At the late celebration of the 'glorious Independence,' in that town, an original Declaration was read; after which an oration 'as was an oration' was delivered, from which we publish the following extract:—

"Fellow-Citizens! I suppose you all know that previous to 1776 this country belonged to the British country, and, not withstanding the oppression to which wo were subjected, we soon began to be some. This made the Britishers mad, and they come over here with an army to put us down. Just at this eventful period in our history, Gineral Washington, Gineral Jefferson, Gineral Scott, Gineral Martin Van Buren, and a host of other patriots riz in their wrath, and shouted a war cry that shook the country from top to bottom and reverberated as far as the eye could reach—and, Fellow Citizens. what was the effect of this alarm? Why, in a day or two every hill-top was brustling with the shining baggernets of the sons of the Pilgrims, and every valley was crowded with the fair daughters of America, laden with doughnuts, apple sass, and sich things, to satisfy the demands of nater, while we fit for our country's glory.

"Our fust battle was fought at New Orleans, which was then in possession of the enemy. In consequence of our army being entirely destitute of arms and ammunition, we built an immense wall of cotton bales clean round the city, and kept the British in there until the whole army died of yaller fever.

"Fellow Citizens! Look at the battle of 'Tippecanoe and Tyler too,' where Gineral Ander Jackson with one company of Green Mountain Boys driv a hundred thousand foreigners out of the country at the pint of the baggernet.

"Look, too, at Waterloo, where Gineral Low captured a whole regiment of Tartars, had 'em skinned, and their hides tanned; and my granther that was out in that war had a pair of cowhide boots made out of some of the leather; and, Fellow Citizens, these boots that I've got on are the very identical boots.

"Think you, Fellow Citizens, our fathers would have thus destroyed the Britishers had they not sufficient cause? What man with an American heart in his bussom could stand still and see the enemy set fire to his wife and children, destroy his dwelling-house, and then enter his hen roost and steal his darling chick-a biddies?

"It is but a few years ago that it was considered very remarkable to have green peas and cowcumbers by the 4th of July. But how it is now? Why, the common people feed their hogs on 'em by the middle of June. In fact, all kinds of sass are more for'ard than they formerly used to be. Think of the luxuries we now enjoy that were never thought of before the Revolution. Ice creams, spruce gum, soda-water, pea-nuts. barberry sass, potater rot, erysipelas, and ready-made clothing."

TO MISS ——— * * *

BY "AMA."

Oh! dearest, why the sadness,
That shades thy fair, young brow;
Why is the voice once full of glee,
So tremulous and low?

Has some loved friend proved false to thee?
Does fate prove treacherous now;
Or why should sorrow spread his wing
Around thy cloudless brow?

Do'st know, my dearest—
That each and every one,
Hath a lesson stern but true, to learn
Ere "life's short race be run?"

All may not seem to be beset
With sorrow. pain and care;
Yet, each heart knows its bitterness,"
And has its griefs to bear.

But hast thou suffered wrongfully,
By some base defamer's words?
Has thy spirit pure been forced to bow,
Beneath the blighting scourge?

Yet, judge not of thy future days,
By the dark and shadowy past;
But strive to reap a just reward
In Heaven's high home, at last.

Grasshoppers—Their Morals and Habits.

Grasshoppers seem to be a "fixed fact."—They are no longer strangers, or even visitors. They have taken up their abode here and are residents. They have got their second papers, and are fully naturalized. It is time, therefore, to inquire into the character of this immigrant race and understand a little more about the morals of our new neighbors.

The first impression that one gets of them is, that they have not clear ideas of the rights of property. They do not seem to understand the difference between meum and tuum.—Indeed, according to our ethics, they are decidedly a thieving set of fellows. But according to the moral code of Grasshopper-dom this may be, and probably is a misapprehension of their character. They probably have all things in common among themselves, and regard the rights of other animals, including man, as subservient to theirs.

Of their propensities to violence and bloodshed, we have only a single illustration.—We never supposed them carnivorous till the other day, when we learned that a gentleman from an adjoining town was so badly bitten in the hand by one of these innocent yet venomous rascals, that he came near losing his arm, and in truth his life. We saw him a few days ago with his arm in a sling, slowly recovering, and it was rather ludicrous to hear him reply to the inquiry, what ailed him—"bitten by a Grasshopper." Our boyish recollection was that they were famous for eating jackets carelessly left in the haying or harvest field. We seem now to see that new jacket of ours, the pride of our boyish days, as it looked when, with sad countenance we picked it up, all riddled like a cullender. But we had no idea that a man or boy in the jacket was not safe.

We cannot say much as to the susceptibility of this numerous race to good impressions. Our opinion is that they are about as easily civilized and christianized as an Indian.—This is founded upon the well known fact that they are often seen attending church. Indeed there is one meek, demure looking fellow, that for three Sabbaths has occupied the pew in front of us. We are sorry to say that his behavior has not shown a correct appreciation of the place. His favorite place was on the tip top of a Lady's bonnet, and he diversified the exercises by gymnastic feats.—The last we saw of him, he actually jumped across the broad aisle, right in meetin.—We lost all confidence in him after this trick.

It is interesting to observe the habits of the Grasshopper race. It is noteworthy that they are inclined to some of the small vices, which distinguish animals with a less number of legs. They are particularly given to chewing. We noticed the other day a large patch of cucumbers by the road side, which had been completely stripped by them of leaves.—This evinced both gallantry and a classic taste, inasmuch as this plant derives its name from lovely HELEN of classic memory. But the most remarkable case on record, occurred in Vermont recently. We heard the story told only a few days ago by a Yankee, right from there. A farmer had a large and fine field of tobacco growing by the road side.—The Grasshoppers got a taste of it, and were so enamored with it, that they assembled from all the country round and held a, pro tempore meeting and soon converted the whole field into a 'weed' that it was pitiable to observe their misery when the crop was gone, and to see them climb upon the road fences and ask every passing traveller for "a chew of tobacco."

Reader we dont undertake to vouch for the truth of this anecdote: we simply tell it, as the Yankee told it, and can only say that he looked like a man of veracity.

This is the latest intelligence we have about Grasshoppers—unless there should be something in our telegraph report, which the reader will please examine under the appropriate head.—[N. Y. Farmer.

J. TARBELL, PROPRIETOR.

☞ Last November, the great Conservative Whig party of the Union, was defeated by the Democracy, and so badly beaten, that it was asserted by the sapient editors of the democratic press that it never could be organized again, with any prospect of success. How far their predictions have proved true, let Kentucky, Tennessee, Alabama and Missouri, answer. Democratic principles—economy in the expenditures of the government—state and national—enlargement of the canals—protection of American citizens abroad—steady and unflinching support of the great pacificatory measures of 1850, that crushed the head of disunion and anarchy, and were the offspring of the magnates of our political history, who sacrificed themselves for the good of the country they had so long and so faithfully served—these were the rallying cries of our arch enemy, and the result surprised themselves. Let us see how far they have redeemed those pledges made in the heat of the campaign.

At Washington they commenced their economy by increasing the salaries of the Cabinet officers, already equal to the demands of the officers of the economical Whig administration. In the administratinn of this State there has been a reckless disregard of the interests of the people, and money has been squandered without stint to gratify the malignity of the offsprings of the dishonorable democratic connections of '48, and to traduce and villify men of integrity and moral worth—a worth to which these political hybrids are strangers. The regular session of the Legislature was frittered away by these scamps—and a more precious set of scamps never got together for nefarious purposes—and not until the indignation of the people was so thoroughly aroused that they dare not resist, did they show any signs of fulfilling their promises made before election. They then made a virtue of necessity, called an extra session of the Legislature at a cost of a number of thousand dollars, and done what might have been accomplished in the first three weeks of the regular session; and are now prosecuting a faithful officer, because he would not be intimidated by these quack politicians, and because they wanted a "victim" to appease their lust for revenge and direct public attention from themselves, at an expense that would be a serious aid in prosecuting the enlargement of the Erie canal; but what care these tricksters for the people, provided they feed well and fat on the State treasury.

How has the National Administration at Washington sustained the Compromise Measures! By appointing the most virulent opposers of those measures to places of power and emolument, and ostracising its faithful supporters who upheld them amid the jeers and taunts of the very rabble that now denominate them as bolters, because their measure of right and principle happens—and happily too,—to be more exalted than their own. We are told that the President knew no distinction. If this is so, how does it happen that all—or nearly all—the important offices are filled with the curly clan that so violently oppose the measures he so bombastically endorsed in his Inaugural? How is it that Dickinson, Croswell and Schell with a great many other prominent and worthy democrats, are neglected by the government, and their actions and fair fame assailed by hireling presses who do their master's dirty work, and Lix, Marcy, Fowler and a host of others, luxuriating in the sunshine of government pap? These are questions it would be well for consistent democrats—in whom the fire of the Jacksonian era has not been no extinct—to have answered. If a man ever stultified himself by his actions than has Gen Pierce by his appointments.—They show that his assertions of Nationality when rusticating in the obscurity of the Granite Hills, from whom it was grievous error to ever draw him, were not indigenous, but the result of locality.

It is almost six months since the ostensible president thundered forth his sophomoric exhibition of the policy of his government, and cast the film from the eyes of his most ardent supporters, with the startling announcement that that traitor and incomparable soft, W. L. Marcy, was his Premier. In that time what has been done by the administration [illegible] the American name respected a[illegible] they did have sense enough to e[illegible] toned and chivalrous act of Ca[illegible] in the matter of Koszta, but as[illegible] in many places the crop will prove emanated to give dignity to our diplomacy, add lustre to our history! Marcy has sent out instructions to the Foreign ministers in relation to the cut of their coats, because he knew he was touching a chord in every American heart, that would vibrate with pleasure, thereby securing popularity for himself against a day that is coming, and for the success of which he is now laying his traps. The nullifying Secretary of War has given to the world an able paper in the shape of a permit to the soldiers to wear whiskers, provided they keep them neatly trimmed, the mental labor of which so impaired his health, that he is now rusticating among the changeable and delightful scenery of the White Mountains; and the President himself was safely delivered at the opening of the Crystal Palace of a mediocre production about an inch long that would have disgraced the most stupid Freshman; but then he was tired, he should be excused. Shades of Washington, and Jackson, and Hamilton, Clay and Webster, look with compassion on thy unworthy representatives!

A LICK AT DEMOCRACY.—The New Y. Mirror mentions the following:

"Curious Fact.—The men who profess to be "Democrats to the back bone," and who, for political ends, mingle and mix with the unwashed rowdies in rum holes, are always first and foremost in running after the "big bugs" of Foreign Aristocracy! Signal examples might be given in corroboration of this statement. But we simply call attention to the fact, and leave the reader to apply it and explain it."

Nothing curious about that. It has escaped the notice of few observing people that the American democracy is made up of the heads and tails of the American people. The heads, are your real aristocrats—would be in any other country—who run after the "big bugs" from foreign countries—designing, ambitious, unprincipled politicians—Ceasars—who ride into power, and rule with an iron sway, by flattering the masses. The tails, are the rag, tag, and bob-tail, found in all their purity around such places as the Five Points in N. Y. city—the ignorant, narrow-minded, envious, restless and dishonest everywhere. Hence, democracy tends inevitably to anarchy, or unlimited power.

Standing out in strong and beautiful contrast to this "curious" democracy, is the great body of the American people—the real Republicanism, the Conservatives, the pratical reformers, the friends of the Union and the laws, the friends of man, of rational and reasonable progress, the safety of the Republic, the yeomen, the pride and the great talent of the country—the whigs.

CAUCUS.—At a meeting of the democrats of this town on Wednesday, A. C. Nelson, A. H. Allen and John Nash, were appointed delegates to the county democratic County Convention to appoint a delegate to attend the Democratic State Convention at Syracuse on the 13th of September.

These delegates may be classified thus: the first is soft barnburner, the second soft shell hunker, the third hard shell hunker.

CHANGE.—Amasa Macomber, Esq., of this village lately succeeded Mr. Fair banks in the ownership of the Livery Stable opposite this office. We overlooked this fact in our items, but we none the less wish Mr. Macomber every success. His horses and carriages are first rate, and he is attentive and affable.

DOWN AMONG THE DEAD MEN.

From The Crescent, Aug. 11.

To verify the many horrible reports of the doings among the dead, we the other day visited the cemeteries. In every street were long processions, tramping to the solemn music of funeral marches. In the countenances of plodding passengers were the lines of anxiety and grief, and many a door was festooned with black and white hangings, the voiceless witnesses of wailing and of sorrow. On the one hand slowly swept the long cortege of the wealthy, nodding with plumes and drawn by prancing horses, rejoicing in their funeral vanities: on another, the hearse of the citizen-soldier, preceded by measured music, enveloped in warlike panoply, and followed by the noisy tread of men under arms: while there again the pauper was trundled to his long home on a ricketty cart, with a boy for a driver, who whistled as he went, and swore a careless oath as he urged his mule or spavined horse to a trot making haste with another mortal contributed to the grand banquet of death. Now among the steeples was heard the chiming of the bells, as of Ghoules up there, mingling their hoarse voices as in a chorus of gratulation over the ranks of fallen mortality. Anon from some lowly tenement thrilled the low wail of a mother for the child of her affections, while from the corner opposite burst the song of some low bacchanal, mingling ribaldry with sentiment, or swearing a prayer or two, as the humor moved him.

The skies wore a delusive aspect. Above was all cloudless sunshine, but little in keeping with the black melancholy that enveloped all below. Out along the highways that lead to the cities of the dead, and still the trains of funeral crowds knew no cessation. Up rolled the volumes of dust from the busy roads, and the plumes of the death carriages nodded in seeming sympathy to the swaying cypresses of the swamp, enveloped in their dun apparelling of weeping moss—fit garniture for such a scene.

At the gathering points carriages accumulated, and vulgar teamsters, as they jostled each other in the press, mingled the coarse jest with the ribald oath; no sound but of profane malediction and of riotous mirth, the clang of whip thongs and the rattle of wheels. At the gates, the winds brought intimation of the corruption working within. Not a puff but was laden with the rank atmosphere from rotting corpses—laside they were piled by fifties, exposed to the heat of the sun swollen with corruption, bursting their coffin lids, and sundering, as if by physical effort, the ligaments that bound their hands and feet, and extending their rigid limbs in every attitude. What a feast of horrors! Inside, corpses piled in pyramids, and without the gates, old and withered crones and fat huxter women, fretting in their own grease, dispensing ice creams and confections, and brushing away, with brooms made of bushes the green flies that hovered on their merchandise, and that anon buzzed away to drink daintily inhalations from the green and festering corpses. Mammon at the gates was making thrift on side by the hands of his black and sweating minions, that tendered sweetmeats and cooling beverages to the throngs of mourners or of idle spectators, who, inhaling the fumes of rotting bodies, already "heaved the gorge;" while within the "King of Terrors" held his Saturnalia, with a crowd of stolid laborers, who, as they tumbled the dead into ditches knocked them "about the mazzard" and swore dread oaths, intermingled with the more dreadful sounds of demoniac jollity.

Long ditches were dug across the great human charnal. Wide enough were they to entomb a legion, but only fourteen inches deep. Coffins laid in them showed their tops above the surface of the earth. On these was piled dirt to the depth of a foot or more, but so loosely, that the myriads of flies found entry between the loose clods, down to the cracked seams of the coffins, and buzzed and blew there their oraria, creating each hour their hatched swarms.

But no sound was there of sorrow within that wide Gehenna. Men used to the scent of dissolution had forgotten all touch of sympathy. Uncouth laborers, with their bare shock heads, stood under the broiling heat of the sun, digging in the earth; and as anon they would encounter an obstructing root or stump, would swear a hideous oath, remove to another spot, and go on digging as before. Now and then the mattock or the spade would disturb the bones of some former tenant of the mould, forgotten there amid the armies of the accumulated victims and the sturdy laborer with a give, would hurl the broken fragments on the sward growl forth an energetic damn, and chuckle in his excess of glee. Skulls bones were dug up from their long sepulture, with ghastliness staring out without eliciting an "Alas, poor Yorick," and with only an exclamation from the digger, of "room for your betters!"

"From each lack-lustre, eyeless hole,"

Economy of space was the source of cunning calculation in bestowing away the dead men. Side by side were laid two of gigantic proportions, bloated by corruption to the size of Titans. The central projections of their coffins, left spaces between them at their head and heels. This was too much room to be filled with earth.—How should the space be saved? Opportunely the material is at hand, for a cart comes lumbering in, with the corpses of a mother and her two children. Chuck the children in the spaces at the heads and heels of the Titans, and lay the mother by herself, cut there alone! A comrade for her will be found anon, and herself and babes will sleep not the less soundly, from the unwonted contact!

The fumes rise up in deathly exhalations from the accumulating hecatombs of fast coming corpses. Meanwhile at their noses bags of camphor and odorous spices—for there are crowds there who have no business but to look on and contemplate the vast congregation of the dead. They don't care if they die themselves—they have become so used to the reek of corruption.—They even laugh at the rottings of the skeleton Death and crack jokes in the horrid atmosphere where scarcely they can draw breath, or utter a cry.

The steel negroes, too, who are hired at five dollars per hour to assist in the work of interment, stagger under the stifling by deep and soul-inflamed potations of the "fire water." They gulph deep draughts of the stimulating fluid, and reeling to their tasks, hold their noses with one hand, while with the other they grasp the spade; heave on the mould, and rush back to the bottle to gulp again. It is a jolly time with these ebony laborers, and with their white co-workers—as thoughtless and as jolly, and full as much intoxicated as themselves.

And thus, what with the songs and obscene jests of the grave diggers, the buzzing of the flies, the sing song cries of the mourners vending their confections, the hoarse oaths of the men who drive the dead carts, the merry whistle of the boys, and the stiffing reek from scores of black-red corpses, the day wears apace the work of sepulture is done, and night draws the curtain.

DEAR READER:—Charity is said to be the first of virtues. Over whatever sins of omission or commission you may have discovered in our pages during the past two or three weeks, we ask you to extend the mantle of this precept. Sickness has confined us to our room and bed for nearly three weeks, and though now convalescent we are far from well and leave the paper this week to the sole care of the office "boss" and the tender mercies of our "imp." A few days absence, or some out-door labor we trust will restore us to wonted health, and also, we hope enable us to return to our pleasurable, weekly intercourse with you, renewed in body and mind.

In making an apology, we have one thing to cheer us, and that is, we have never yet been reduced to a half sheet, like our cotemporaries. We have always given you two pages, and when pressed with the land sales a year ago, we issued them in a "supplement," so that your rights might not be intruded upon.

We commence this week the publication, by request, of a tale of unusual interest and of particular and useful precepts which will be read with avidity and thankfulness by a large share of our readers. We have not indulged this portion of our readers in a story of fiction of any length in a long time nor scarcely in what might be called 'light reading,' choosing rather the useful, moral, practical and religious. We intend, however, to gratify all, and if we can keep our present resolutions we will try for a time to gratify 'the young, the gay, the fair.' In saying this, it must not be forgotten, that as a general rule we are opposed to reading works of fiction. To this rule, however, as to most, there are exceptions. We are indeed opposed to mere romance, sentimental love stories, tales of love and murder, but there are many works of fiction with a moral so distinct and palpable, that the danger to be apprehended from the fiction and romance is lost sight of. Indeed, great truths may thus be presented with an effect which could not otherwise be produced.

Buying and Selling Human Flesh.

We have never indulged in the practice of parading southern slave advertisements in our columns, but the following struck our eye in a Southern exchange, as presenting forcibly the wicked features of the institution,' What is wrong in heathen countries cannot be right in a Republic and a professed christian land.

Grasshoppers—Their Morals and Habits.

Grasshoppers seem to be a "fixed fact."—They are no longer strangers, or even visitors. They have taken up their abode here, and are residents. They have got their second papers, and are fully naturalized. It is time, therefore, to inquire into the character of this immigrant race, and understand a little more about the morals of our new neighbors.

The first impression that one gets of them is, that they have not clear ideas of the rights of property. They do not seem to understand the difference between meum and tuum."—Indeed, according to our ethics, they are decidedly a thieving set of fellows. But according to the moral code of Grasshopper-dom this may be, and probably is a misapprehension of their character. They probably have all things in common among themselves, and regard the rights of other animals, including man, as subservient to theirs

Of their propensities to violence and bloodshed, we have only a single illustration.—We never supposed them carniverous till the other day, when we learned that a gentleman from an adjoining town was so badly bitten in the hand by one of these innocent yet venomous rascals, that he came near losing his arm, and in truth his life. We saw him a few days ago with his arm in a sling, slowly recovering, and it was rather ludicrous to hear him reply to the inquiry, what ailed him—"bitten by a Grasshopper!" Our boyish recollection was that they were famous for eating jackets carelessly left in the haying or harvest field. We seem now to see that new jacket of ours, the pride of our boyish days, as it looked when, with sad countenance we picked it up, all riddled like a cullender. But we had no idea that a man or boy in the jacket was not safe.

We cannot say much as to the susceptibility of this numerous race to good impressions. Our opinion is that they are about as easily civilized and christianized as an Indian.—This is founded upon the well known fact that they are often seen attending church. Indeed there is one meek, demure looking fellow, that for three Sabbaths has occupied the pew in front of us. We are sorry to say that his behavior has not shown a correct appreciation of the place. His favorite place was on the tip top of a Lady's bonnet, and he diversified the exercises by gymnastic feats.—The last we saw of him, he actually jumped across the 'broad aisle,' right in meetin.—We lost all confidence in him after this trick.

It is interesting to observe the habits of the Grasshopper race. It is noteworthy that they are inclined to some of the small vices, which distinguish animals with a less number of legs. They are particularly given to chewing. We noticed the other day a large patch of decamanes by the road side, which had been completely stripped by them of leaves.—This evinced both gallantry and a classic taste, inasmuch as this plant derives its name from lovely HELEN of classic memory. But the most remarkable case on record, occurred in Vermont recently. We heard the story told only a few days ago by a Yankee right from there. A farmer had a large and fine field of tobacco growing by the road side.—The Grasshoppers got a taste of it, and were so enamored with it, that they assembled from all the country round and held a, protracted meeting and soon converted the whole field into spittle. They became so devoted to the 'weed' that it was pitiable to observe their disconsolate air after the crop was gone, and to see them climb upon the road fences, and ask every passing traveller for "a chew of tobacco."

Reader we dont undertake to vouch for the truth of this anecdote: we simply tell it, as the Yankee told it, and can only say that he looked like a man of veracity.

This is the latest intelligence we have about Grasshoppers—unless there should be something in our telegraph report, which the reader will please examine under the appropriate head.—[N. Y. Farmer.

J. TARBELL, PROPRIETOR.

Last November, the great Conservative Whig party of the Union, was defeated by the Democracy, and so badly beaten, that it was assorted by the sapient editors of the democratic press that it never could be organized again, with any prospect of success. How far their predictions have proved true, let Kentucky, Tennessee, Alabama and Missouri, answer. Democratic principles—economy in the expenditures of the government—state and national—enlargement of the canals—protection of American citizens abroad—steady and unflinching support of the great pacificatory measures of 1850, that crushed the head of disunion and anarchy, and were the offspring of the magnates of our political history, who sacrificed themselves for the good of the country they had so long and so faithfully served—these were the rallying cries of our arch enemy, and the result surprised themselves. Let us see how far they have redeemed those pledges made in the heat of the campaign.

At Washington they commenced their economy by increasing the salaries of the Cabinet officers, already equal to the demands of the officers of the economical Whig administration. In the administration of this State there has been a reckless disregard of the interests of the people, and money has been squandered without stint to gratify the malignity of the offsprings of the dishonorable democratic connections of '48, and to traduce and villify men of integrity and moral worth—a worth to which these political hybrids are strangers. The regular session of the Legislature was frittered away by those scamps—and a more precious set of scamps never got together for nefarious purposes—and not until the indignation of the people was so thoroughly aroused that they dare not resist, did they show any signs of fulfilling their promises made before election. They then made a virtue of necessity, called an extra session of the Legislature at a cost of a number of thousand dollars, and done what might have been accomplished in the first three weeks of the regular session; and are now prosecuting a faithful officer, because he would not be intimidated by these quack politicians, and because they wanted a "victim" to appease their lust for revenge and direct public attention from themselves, at an expense that would be a serious aid in prosecuting the enlargement of the Erie canal; but what care these tricksters for the people, provided they feed well and fatten on the State treasury.

How has the National Administration at Washington sustained the Compromise Measures? By appointing the most virulent opposers of those measures to places of power and emolument, and ostracising its faithful supporters who upheld them amid the jeers and taunts of the very rabble that now denominate them as bolters, because their measure of right and principle happens—and happily too,—to be more exalted than their own. We are told that the President knew no distinction. If this is so, how does it happen that all—or nearly all—the important offices are filled with the curly clan that so violently opposed the measures he so bombastically endorsed in his Inaugural? How is it that Dickinson, Croswell and Schell with a great many other prominent and worthy democrats, are neglected by the government, and their actions and fair fame assailed by hireling presses who do their master's dirty work, and Dix, Marcy, Fowler and a host of others, luxuriating in the sunshine of government pap? These are questions it would be well for consistent democrats—in whom the fire of the Jacksonian era has not been nor extinct—to have answered. If a man ever stultified himself by his actions than has Gen. Pierce by his appointments.—They show that his assertions of Nationality when rusticating in the obscurity of the Granite Hills, from whom it was grievous error to ever drew him, were not indigenous, but the result of locality.

It is almost six months since the ostensible president thundered forth his sophomoric exhibition of the policy of his government, and cast the film from the eyes of his most ardent supporters, with the startling announcement that that traitor and incomparable soft, W. L. Marcy, was his Premier. In that time what has been done by the administration to make the American name respected abroad? True, they did have sense enough to endorse the high toned and chivalrous act of Capt. Ingraham in the matter of Koszta, but aside from this what have they done? What state paper has emanated to give dignity to our history? Marcy has sent out instructions to the Foreign ministers in relation to the cut of their coats, because he knew he was touching a chord in every American heart, that would vibrate with pleasure, thereby securing popularity for himself against a day that is coming, and for the success of which he is now laying his traps. The nullifying Secretary of War has given to the world an able paper in the shape of a permit to the soldiers to wear whiskers, provided they keep them neatly trimmed; the mental labor of which so impaired his health, that he is now rusticating among the changeable and delightful scenery of the White Mountains, and the President himself was safely delivered at the opening of the Crystal Palace of a mediocre production about an inch long that would have disgraced the most stupid Freshman; but then he was tired, he should be excused. Shades of Washington, and Jackson, and Hamilton, Clay and Webster, look with compassion on thy unworthy representatives!

AULD LANG SYNE.—The following came to hand when confined to a sick bed and our readers may be assured it was a refreshing memento. We give it in no egotistical spirit, but as one of the many pleasant occurrances of an Editor's life. Accompanying the remittance was a Postage Stamp to pay the postage on the letter enclosing receipt! Can any Editor "brag" on that?

My Dear Colonel:

* * * I herewith enclose Three Dollars. Apply if you please 2-3 of this amount to make me "clear on the books." The remainder will call for a receipt in full for subscription to the ESSEX COUNTY REPUBLICAN for a year to come.

So bright the prospect still the grave defy,
Trust future ages and contented die;
Seek the loved spirits who have gone before,
Till bliss shall join—nor death shall part you more!

Such is the heart felt wish of the writer, and in conclusion he would pray—that when the last sand of your life has run, you may go

To his dungeon—but as one—"
Who wraps the drapery of his couch around him,
And lays down to pleasant dreams.

A LICK AT DEMOCRACY.—The New Y. Mirror mentions the following:

"Curious Fact.—The men who profess to be "Democrats to the back bone," and who, for political ends, mingle and mix with the unwashed rowdies in rum holes, are always first and foremost in running after the "big bugs" of Foreign Aristocracy! Similar examples might be given in corroboration of this statement. But we simply call attention to the fact, and leave the reader to apply it and explain it."

Nothing curious about that. It has escaped the notice of few observing people that the American democracy is made up of the heads and tails of the American people. The heads, are your real aristocrats—would be in any other country—who run after the "big bugs" from foreign countries—designing, ambitious, unprincipled politicians—Ceasars—who ride into power, and rule with an iron sway, by flattering the masses. The tails, are the rag, tag, and bob-tail, found in all their purity around such places as the Five Points in N. Y. city—the ignorant, narrow-minded, envious, restless and dishonest everywhere. Hence, democracy tends inevitably to anarchy, or unlimited power.

Standing out in strong and beautiful contrast to this "curious" democracy, is the great body of the American people—the real Republicanism, the Conservatives, the pratical reformers, the friends of the Union and the laws, the friends of man, of rational and reasonable progress, the safety of the Republic, the yeomen, the pride and the great talent of the country—the whigs.

DOWN AMONG THE DEAD MEN.

From The Crescent, Aug. 11.

To verify the many horrible reports of the doings among the dead, we the other day visited the cemeteries. In every street were long processions, tramping to the solemn music of funeral marches. In the countenances of plodding passengers were the lines of anxiety and grief, and many a door was festooned with black and white hangings, the voiceless witnesses of wailing and of sorrow. On the one hand slowly swept the long cortages of the wealthy, nodding with plumes and drawn by prancing horses, rejoicing in their funeral vanities: on another, the hearse of the citizen-soldier, preceded by measured music, enveloped in warlike panoply, and followed by the noisy tread of men under arms; while there again the pauper was trundled to his long home on a ricketty cart, with a boy for a driver, who whistled as he went, and swore a careless oath as he urged his mule or spavined horse to a trot making haste with another mortal contribution to the grand banquet of death. Now among the steeples was heard the chiming of the bells, as of Ghouls up there, mingling their hoarse voices as in a chorus of gratulation over the ranks of fallen mortality. Anon from some lowly tenement thrilled the low wail of a mother for the child of her affections, while from the corner opposite burst the song of some low bacchanal, mingling ribaldry with sentiment, or swearing a prayer or two, as the humor moved him.

The skies wore a delusive aspect. Above was all cloudless sunshine, but little in keeping with the black melancholy that enveloped all below. Out along the highways that lead to the cities of the dead, and still the trains of funeral crowds knew no cessation. Up rolled the volumes of dust from the busy roads, and the plumes of the death carriages nodded in seeming sympathy to the swaying cypresses of the swamp, enveloped in their dun apparelling of weeping moss—fit garniture for such a scene.

At the gathering points carriages accumulated, and vulgar teamsters, as they jostled each other in the press, mingled the coarse jest with the ribald oath; no sound but of profane malediction and of riotous mirth, the clang of whip thongs and the rattle of wheels. At the gates, the winds brought intimation of the corruption working within. Not a puff but was laden with the rank atmosphere from rotting corpses—Inside they were piled by fifties, exposed to the heat of the sun swollen with corruption, bursting their coffin lids, and sundering, as if by physical effort, the ligaments that bound their hands and feet, and extending their rigid limbs in every attitude. What a feast of horrors! Inside, corpses piled in pyramids, and without the gates old and withered crones and fat huxter women, fretting in their own grease, dispensing ice creams and confections, and brushing away, with brooms made of bushes the green flies that hovered on their merchandise, and that also buzzed away to drink dainty inhalations from the green and festering corpses. Mammon at the gates was making thrift on side by the hands of his black and sweating minions, that tendered sweet-meats and cooling beverages to the throngs of mourners or of idle spectators, who, inhaling the fumes of rotting bodies, already "heaved the gorge;" while within the "King of Terrors" held his Saturnalia, with a crowd of stolid laborers, who, as they tumbled the dead into ditches knocked them "about the mazzard" and swore dread oaths, intermingled with the more dreadful sounds of demoniac jollity.

Long ditches were dug across the great human charnal. Wide enough were they to entomb a legion, but only fourteen inches deep. Coffins laid in them showed their tops above the surface of the earth. On these was piled dirt to the depth of a foot or more, but so loosely, that the myriads of flies found entry between the loose clods down to the cracked seams of the coffins, and buzzed and blew there their oraria, creating each hour their hatched swarms.

But no sound was there of sorrow within that wide Gehenna. Men used to the scent of dissolution had forgotten all touch of sympathy. Uncouth laborers, with their bare shock heads, stood under the broiling heat of the sun, digging in the earth; and as anon they would encounter an obstructing root or stump, would swear a hideous oath, remove to another spot, and go on digging as before. Now and then the mattock or the spade would disturb the bones of some former tenant of the mould, forgotten there amid the armies of the accumulated victims and the sturdy laborer with a give, would hurl the broken fragments on the sward growl forth an onergetic damn, and chuckle in his excess of glee. Skull bones were dug up from their long sepulture, with ghastliness staring out without eliciting an "Alas, poor Yorick," and with only an exclamation from the digger, of "room for your betters!"

"From earth look-lustre, eyeless hole,"

Economy of space was the source of cunning calculation in bestowing away the dead men. Side by side were laid two of gigantic proportions, bloated by corruption to the size of Titans. The central portions of their coffins, left spaces between them at their head and heels. This was too much room to be filled with earth.—How should the space be saved? Opportunely the material is at hand, for a cart comes lumbering in, with the corpses of a mother and her two children. Chuck the children in the spaces at the heads and heels of the Titans, and lay the mother by herself, cut there alone! A comrade for her will be found anon, and herself and babes will sleep not the less soundly, from the unwonted contact!

The fumes rise up in deathly exhalations from the accumulating heaps of fast coming corpses. Meanwhile at their noses bags of camphor and odoriferous spices—for there are crowds there who have no business but to look on and do temporary service in the vast congregation of the dead. They don't care if they die themselves—they have become so used to the reek of corruption.—They even laugh at the rantings of the skeleton Death and crack jokes in the horrific atmosphere where scarcely they can draw breath or utterance.

The stout negroes, too, who are hired at five dollars per hour to assist in the work of interment, stagger under the stifling miasm, and can only be kept at their work coarse to the Fair.

Dear Reader:—Charity is said to be the first of virtues. Over whatever sins of omission or commission you may have discovered in our pages during the past two or three weeks, we ask you to extend the mantle of this precept. Sickness has confined us to our room and bed for nearly three weeks, and though now convalescent we are far from well and leave the paper this week to the sole care of the office "boss" and the tender mercies of our imp.' A few days absence, or some out-door labor we trust will restore us to wonted health, and also, we hope enable us to return to our pleasurable, weekly intercourse with you, renewed in body and mind.

In making an apology, we have one thing to cheer us, and that is, we have never yet been reduced to a half sheet, like our cotemporaries. We have always given you two pages, and when pressed with the land sales a year ago, we issued them in a "supplement," so that your rights might not be intruded upon.

We commence this week the publication, by request, of a tale of unusual interest and of particular and useful precepts which will be read with avidity and thankfulness by a large share of our readers. We have not indulged this portion of our readers in a story of fiction of any length, in a long time nor scarcely in what might be called 'light reading,' choosing rather the useful, moral, practical and religious. We intend, however, to gratify all, and if we can keep our present resolutions we will try for a time to gratify 'the young, the gay, the fair.' In saying this, it must not be forgotten, that as a general rule we are opposed to reading works of fiction. To this rule, however, as to most, there are exceptions. We are indeed opposed to mere romance, sentimental love stories, tales of love and murder, but there are many works of fiction with a moral so distinct and palpable, that the danger to be apprehended from the fiction and romance is lost sight of. Indeed, great truths may thus be presented with an effect which could not otherwise be produced.

Buying and Selling Human Flesh.

We have never indulged in the practice, of parading southern slave advertisements in our columns, but the following struck our eye in a Southern exchange, as presenting forcibly the wicked features of the institution.' What is wrong in heathen countries cannot be right in a Republic and a professed christian land.

THE MARRIAGE STATE;

Shall Happiness and Health, or Misery and Sickness, attend it?

MOST STARTLING CONSIDERATIONS!

Reflections for the Thoughtful.

Strange that countless human beings exist and drag through life as do the beasts of the field, or the insects of the earth, evincing no more thought or reflection than though the noble faculties of mind were not vouchsafed to them.

Many such are husbands and fathers, upon whom are dependent the health, the well-being, and the happiness of a confiding and affectionate wife, with perhaps a family of children.

HOW OFTEN IT HAPPENS THAT THE

WIFE LINGERS FROM YEAR TO YEAR

In that pitiable condition as not even for one day to feel the happy and exhilerating influence incident to the enjoyment of health.

She may not be an invalid confined to her bed, or even to her room; as her pride, ambition and energy induce and nerve her to take personal charge of her household, even when her health will not admit of it; but she is nevertheless perceptibly sinking from day to day, and always ailing.

Thus, day after day, and month after month transpire. Her health daily sinks, till finally even the hope of recovery no longer remains. And thus

THE BLOOMING BRIDE,

But a few years ago in the flush of health and youth, and buoyancy of spirits, rapidly, and apparently inexplicably, becomes a feeble, sickly, debilitated wife, with frame emaciated, nerves unstrung, spirits depressed, countenance bearing the impress of suffering, and an utter physical and mental prostration.

Sometimes this deplorable change may and does arise from organic or constitutional causes. But oftener, by far oftener, to gross and inexcusable ignorance of the simplest and plainest rules of health as connected with the marriage state, the violation of which entails disease, suffering and misery, not only to the wife, but often

Hereditary Complaints upon the Children

"UNTO THE THIRD AND FOURTH GENERATION,"

Transmitting CONSUMPTION, SCROFULA, HYPOCHONDRIA, INSANITY, GOUT, KING'S EVIL, and other diseases, as a

DREADFUL INHERITANCE

from the Parents.

And must this continue? Shall we be wise in all that concerns the cattle of our fields, our horses, our sheep, our cows, our oxen, the nature and character of the soil we possess, the texture and quality of our goods and merchandize; but in all that concerns ourselves as human beings, with human functions and passions, subject to great derangement, involving our future peace and happiness—in all that concerns the health and welfare of the wife of our affections, and the mother of our children; in all that concerns the mental and physical well being of those children, we should be immersed in the darkest and most

BENIGHTED IGNORANCE,

AS CULPABLE AS INEXCUSABLE!

How long shall this ignorance prevail so productive of its bitter fruits? How long shall the wife and mother be ignorant of the nature, character and causes of the various womb and sexual complaints, embittering her days by suffering—suffering often prolonged to years, eventuating in a complication of diseases utterly and hopelessly incurable! Shall we for ever close our eyes to the results of physiological science by which we may arrive at an understanding of ourselves as men and women, subject to serious life-long enduring diseases, and perpetuating them to our children.

LET EVERY WIFE AND HUSBAND PONDER!

No husband or wife need be ignorant of what concerns them most to know to secure their health and happiness. That knowledge is contained in a little work entitled

FRAUD!

ALL wary Axes of the real Collins & Co. make would be particular to notice the stamps, as there are various counterfeits and imitations stamped Collins and labelled much like ours, which are fraudulently sold in some parts of the United States as our manufacture. They are made in different parts of the country by various axe-makers and are generally their poorest quality. The genuine Collins axes which have acquired such an extensive reputation are invariably stamped "COLLINS & CO. HARTFORD," and each axe has a printed label with my signature.—It is now more than TWENTY-FIVE YEARS since I commenced the business with the stamp of "Collins & Co. Hartford," and I do not know of any other axe-maker by the name of Collins in the United States.

Resolved, (if the Senate concur,), That the following amendment be proposed to the constitution of this state and referred to the legislature to be chosen at the next general election of senators, and be published for three months previous to making such choice, in pursuance to the provisions of the first section of the thirteenth article, of said constitution.

Substitute for section three of article seven the following:

After paying the said expenses of collection, superintendence and repairs of the canals, and the sums appropriated by the first and second sections of this article, there shall be appropriated and set apart in each fiscal year out of the surplus revenues of the canals, as a sinking fund, a sum sufficient to pay the interest as it falls due, and extinguish the principal within eighteen years of any loan made under this section, and if the said sinking fund shall not be sufficient to redeem any part of the principal at the stipulated times of payment, or to pay any part of the interest of such loans as stipulated, the means to satisfy any such deficiency shall be procured on the credit of the said sinking fund. After complying with the foregoing provisions, there shall be paid annually out of said revenues into the treasury of the state two hundred thousand dollars, to defray the necessary expenses of government. The remainder shall, in each fiscal year, be applied to meet appropriations for the enlargement and completion of the canals mentioned in this section, until the said canals shall be completed. In each fiscal year thereafter the remainder shall be disposed of in such manner as the legislature may direct, but shall at no time be anticipated or pledged for more than one year in advance. Private Diseases and their Antidote.

Dr. LISPENARD, author of the Marriage Guide, or Private Medical Treatise, Professor of Diseases of Women and Children, and Licentiate of the College of Physicians and Surgeons of the United States University, &c., &c., continues as heretofore to be confidentially and successfully consulted on all forms and variety of

at his old quarters, No 5 Beaver-street, ALBANY, N. Y.

The great success attending the use of Doctor L.'s remedies in secret diseases, and the many remarkable cures daily effected by him in recent as well as old lingering attacks, is conclusive evidence that the well

SICK AND UNFORTUNATE

can do no better than consult the Doctor, whose whole time is devoted to the exclusive treatment of this much neglected branch of practice.

LOOK AT THIS.

Dr. Lispenard cures recent cases of disease in from three to six days, and chronic or long standing diseases in a very short period of time, without the use of Mercury, without the loss of time, change of diet, or detention from

DAILY EMPLOYMENT.

In Syphilis, Gonorrhœa, Gleet, Strictures, Enlargement of the Testicles and Cords, Bubo, Chancres Pimples and Scaly Eruptions, Sore Throats and Noses, Chancres on the tongue, tender shin bones, and diseases of the skin, and impure blood. Dr. Lispenard's remedies are above all praise, and frequently cure when all others had failed

EVEN TO RELIEVE.

More than 5,000 patients have during the past year experienced the benefit of the Doctor's extraordinary skill in treating se ret diseases—among which, diseases of the bladder and kidneys have formed a goodly proportion.

YOUNG MEN,

who by indulging in secret habits have injured their health and prostrated their intellectual faculties, and thereby deprived themselves of the pleasure of married life, should consult Dr. Lispenard without a moment's delay. Hundreds have been restored to health, society and friends, under my peculiar mode of treatment, although vast sums of money had been sacrificed without any benefit. My remedy for this disease is pleasant to take, has no offensive smell and

CURES WITHOUT FAIL.

☞ Persons so unfortunate as to be diseased, although they may have visited half a dozen Doctors, and had medicine sent them a dozen times with no benefit would exhibit wisdom by making their case known to that FRIEND OF THE SICK, Dr. Lispenard, who never charges for advice and warrants all his cures. The sick are often at a loss where to apply for relief, AND TIS NO WONDER, as hundreds stand ready to plunder the unfortunate victim of PRIVATE DISEASE, or secret habits with nt one thought for his life and health. All thus deceive' will find a friend, and moderate charges, in consulting the Doctor who uses no MERCURY and cures every time.

N. B.—Persons from a distance when visiting the city in search of a physician and friend will be fortunate if they succeed in escaping the many dens of imposition, conducted by unprincipled men, destitute of character knowledge or name, who fleece the unfortunate victim of disease of his hard earned money, and his remaining health. Patients who have no acquaintance in the city should make inquiry of some respectable citizen, or the editor or proprietor of any of the city papers, to ascertain who is the most reliable physician to apply to.

FEMALE DISEASES.

Dr. Lispenard from an experience seldom or never enjoyed by any other medical man, is enable to treat, with every hope of succes, all and every variety of Female Complaints—with safe and pleasant remedies—and has without doubt cured within the past five years more than 3000 females afflicted with diseases of the Bladder, Womb, &c. &c. Ladies afflicted with suppression or stoppage of their monthly turns, will recollect that Dr. Lispenard is still the sole American agent for.

FEMALE MONTHKY PILLS.

The unprecedented sale of more than 15,000 boxes of these excellent Pills, and the good results which always follow their use, is conclusive evidence of their utility in stoppages, &c. Caution—Married Ladies in certain delicate situations should not use them—for reasons see directions with each box. Price $1. Sent by mail to all parts of the world.

Married Persons and those about to Marry, should enclose 12½ cents post paid to Dr. Lispenard, and obtain a copy of his Marriage Guide, or Private Treatise, a bewitching little work of nearly 100 pages, illustrated. Every thing that married persons can desire or wish to know is here explained. Persons who from poverty or sickness have no desire to increase their family, will find necessary instruction in the Marriage Guide. One copy 12½ cents; 5 copies 50 cts.; 12 copies $1—mailed free to any part of the world.

N. B.—Patients treated by letter, and medicines sent, with full directions for use, to the writer's address, All communications destroyed or returned.

No mercury used in any case, and all cures warranted.

No boys or precocious students allowed: timed persons take notice.

"Man Know Thyself."

An Invaluable Book for 25 Cents.

"EVERY FAMILY SHOULD HAVE A COPY."

20,000 Copies sold in less than 5 months. A new edition, revised and improved, just issued.

Dr. Hunter's Medical Manual and Hand Book for the Afflicted—Containing an outline of the origin, progress, treatment and cure of every form of disease, contracted by promiscuous sexual intercourse, by self abuse or by sexual excess, with advice for their prevention, written in a familiar style, avoiding all medical technicalities, and everything that would offend the ear of decency, from the result of some twenty years successful practice, exclusively devoted to the cure of diseases of a delicate or private nature.

To which is added, receipts for the cure of the above diseases, and a treatise on the causes, symptoms and cure of the Fever and Ague.

Testimony of the Prof of Obstetrics in Penn. College, Philadelphia—"Dr. Hunter's Medical Manual."—The author of this work unlike the majority of those works who advertise to cure the diseases of which it treats, is a graduate of one of the best Colleges in the United States. It affords me pleasure to recommend him to the unfortunate, or to the victim of malpractice, as a successful and experienced practitioner, in whose honor and integrity they may place the greatest confidence.

JOSEPH LONGSHORE, M. D.

From A Woodward M. D., of Penn. University, Philadelphia—It gives me pleasure to add my testimony to the professional ability of the author of the "Medical Manual." Numerous cases of diseases of the Genital Organs, some of them of long standing have come under my notice, in which his skill has been manifest in restoring to perfect health, in some instances where the patient has been considered beyond medical aid. In the treatment of Seminal weakness, or disarrangement of the functions produced by Self-abuse, or Excess of venery, I do not know his superior in the profession. I have been acquainted with the Author some thirty years, and deem it no more than justice to him as well as a kindness to the unfortunate victim of early indiscretion, to recommend him as one, in whose professional skill and integrity they may safely confide themselves. ALFRED WOODWARD, M.D.

"This is, without exception, the most comprehensive and intelligible work published on the class of diseases of which it treats Avoiding all technical terms, it addresses itself to the reason of its readers. It is free from all objectionable matter and no parent, however fastidious, can object to placing it in the hands of his sons. The author has devoted many years to the treatment of the various complaints treated of, and with too little breath to puff,' and 'too little presumption to impose,' he has offered to the world at the merely nominal price of 25 cents, the fruits of some 20 years most successful practice."—Herald.

"No teacher or parent should be without the knowledge imparted in this invaluable work. It would save years of pain, mortification and sorrow to the youth under their charge."—People's Advocate.

A Presbyterian clergyman in Ohio, in writing of "Hunter's Medical Manual," says: "Thousands upon thousands of our youth, by evil example and influence of the passions, have been led into the habit of self-pollution without realising the sin and fearful consequences upon themselves and their posterity. The constitutions of thousands who are raising families have been enfeebled, if not broken down, and the do not know the cause or the cure. Anything that can be done so to enlighten and influence the public mind as to check, and ultimately to remove this widespread source of human wretchedness, would confer the greatest blessing next to the religion of Jesus Christ, on the present and coming generations. Intemperance (or the use of intoxicating drinks,) though it has slain thousands upon thousands, is not a greater scourge to the human race. Accept my thanks on behalf of the afflicted, and, believe me, your co-worker in the good work you are so actively engaged in."

One copy, (securely enveloped,) will be forwarded free of postage to any part of the United States for 25 cents, or 6 copies for $1.—Address (post paid) COSDEN & Co., publishers, Box 196. Philadelphia. 478y

THE WONDER OF THE WORLD.

DEVINES' COMPOUND

PITCH LOZENGE,

A sure and pleasant Remedy for Colds, Coughs, Croup, Whooping Cough, Asthma, and if lungs enough are left to sustain life, A CERTAIN CURE FOR CONSUMPTION, safe for the infant or the invalid, in any stage of weakness.

"The statements that consumption cannot be cured, has destroyed more lives than the disease itself. - [Dr Warren

Read the following, which to a candid mind places this "Great Remedy," like Cæsar's wife "above suspicion."

TO THE PUBLIC!

We, the undersigned, citizens of Lee, Mass., are acquainted with Mr. Devines, the proprietor and Manufacturer of Devines' Compound Pitch Lozenge and from what we know of it ourselves and have learned from others of its beneficial effects, in cases where it has been used, give it as our opinion that it is a valuable remedy in diseases for which it is recommended and is worthy of public confidence. A. G. Hulburt, Leonard Church, F. G. Taylor, Wm Taylor, E. A. Bliss, S. A. Hulburt, Josephus Crafts, T. P. Eldridge.

If any individual is to be pitied, and needs sympathy, it is the consumptive—always expecting to get well and yet the painful evidence of decay almost "makes the inner soul shrink with the outer flesh."

"Some bloom as roses bloom, and live as roses live,
A single morning space!"

While others in more mature life—by some imprudence and a slight cold neglected—in the hectic flush—the painful cough.

"The prints of their departing steps appears."

BUT HE EIS TOPPED! Mr Wm. Devines, the original tor and manufacturer of the Pitch Lozenge, under Providence, was raised to perfect health by the use of these Lozenges alone, after he was pronounced by his physician to be almost dying with consumption.

This fact is generally known in Berkshire County and is the neighborhood talk and wonder in Lee, and in Great Barrington, Mass.

From Dr. Brown, of Lee, Mass.

This certifies that I have made use of Devines' Compound Pitch Lozenge for cold and cough, and found immediate relief. Therefore I would recommend it to the public as being a safe and sovereign remedy. H. C. BROWN.

OUR CHILDREN:

How Shall we Save Them!

BY T. S. ARTHUR.

CHAPTER II.

Two lovelier children than those of Mr. and Mrs. Greenfield, are rarely seen. Florence grew daily like her mother; but Henry had every feature of his father, and there was a striking resemblance in their dispositions. As the boy's mind opened, this became more and more apparent. By both of their parents were these children tenderly loved; but, for Henry, a certain feeling of pride mingled with affection. As year after year went by, the boy's intellect expanded with wonderful rapidiy, and he gave promise of future eminence when manhood came to give maturity, force, and character to his mind.

The power of habit is very strong; even the habit of putting a limit on sensual indulgence. By this power of habit was Mr. Greenfield saved from becoming an abandoned drunkard. Buisness demanded a certain portion of his time, and, in order successfully to attend to this, he kept himself free from the disturbing effects of liquor during the buisness part of the day. True, he took a glass of brandy every morning, early; but this was to restore to his own stimulated and weakened nerves the artificial strength that had wasted itself during the night; and he took another glass with his luncheon at twelve o'clock, but that produced about the same effect as his morning glass, and did not, sensibly, cloud his mind. It was after the buisness of the day was over that he gave the reins to his appetite, and then he had leisure to sleep off the effects.

Thus it went on, day after day, and year after year, with but a small apparent increase, except to the eyes of his wife, who could see that the indulgence was freer than in former times, and the stupor that followed, deeper and more apoplectic. There came, too, a certain dulness of the perceptious, and an increasing sensuality, that, while it did not alarm her mind, for she hardly understood its meaning, sensibly oppressed her feelings. But the veil at last fell from her eyes, and fell suddenly; and the eyes of of her husband were opened at the same time,—not by any suddenly occurring event, but by the introduction into their minds, of a clearly seen truth.

Henry had grown up, in every thing meeting the expectations and whishes of his parents, until he had reached the age of eighteen, when a sudden fear in regard to him took hold of his parents' hearts.

A gentleman, well advanced in years, of much observation and reflection, dined with Mr. Greenfield about this time. An hour earlier than usuaal, the merchant came home with this gentleman, and while they sat conversing, something led to a remark on the power of habit, and the latter said—

"Well all acknowledge this power, as affecting ourselves, but how few of us think of its influence upon our children. And yet it is an undoubted fact, that we transmit to our offspring predisposition in exact agreement with any habits of good or evil that we may confirm in ourselves."

"Do you really think so?" enquired Mrs. Greenfield, with much interest apparent in her voice.

"There is not a question of it, madam," was replied. "Do we not see in children a uniform resemblance to their parents, both in body and mind? There could not be a more perfect likeness between two persons than there is between you and your daughter; and the same may be said of Henry and his father. You can best tell how nearly their mental qualities correspond with your own. Now, the mind is made up of affections, which take forms of thought, and by means of the body produce actions. It is not thought, nor is it action, that parents transmit to their children; but affections, and those must be similar to their own. These affections, as they gain strength, take to themselves appropriate thoughts; and, as the body matures, action in correspondence follows. Of course, the thought and action will be either good or evil, in agreement with the affections that produced them."

"There is force in that," said Mr. Greenfield, with a thoughful air. "But it is very wonderful! We do not give to our offspring a body fully formed; nor do we give thought, but only a mysterious spiritual organism, with power to take, from the higher elements of nature, materials with which to elaborate a body, in perfect conformity to its wants in the physical world; and with power to act by means of thought."

"Yes; that is all. It is our affections—our propensities or qualities of mind that we transmit to our children; and this is why their bodies resembles ours; for it is the soul that forms the body for its own use, and flows into and animates it with what is pecurliarly its own. Therefore, if we are in the love and practice of what is good and true, we give to our children inclinations to the same things; but, if we are selfish, sensual, and evil-minded, our children will be born with like propensities. By the forms of affection that we make to ourselves, we bless or curse our children. If good, we help them on to a higher regeneration; if evil, we retard this good work, and may be the means of their destruction. The law which governs in the natural as well as the spiritual world—in the body as well as the mind—is the law of similarity between cause and effect. A bitter fountain never has and never can send forth sweet water. An evil-minded father cannot give pure affections to his child. The history of the world's declension, since the fall of man, sadly corroborates this."

"What a momentous truth!" ejaculated, or rather sighed Mrs. Greenfield. "and yet, who thinks of it? Whose love of children leads to a denial of selfish impulses?"

"Alas! that it is so," returned the friend. "Men toil early and late to accumulate wealth to bless their children; but never think of restraining a selfish impulse or overcoming an evil desire, in order to lessen the transmissible force of evil."

"You spoke of habit affecting our children," said Mr. Greenfield. "Is that so to a great extent?"

"Undoubtedly. Whatever we do from long-continued habit, we make our own. Or, in other words, what is done from habit, impresses the mind permanently. The mind, you understand, of course, to be an organized spiritual substance, capable of receiving and retaining impression. Now, only what the mind possesses in regard to form and quality, can it transmit; and things habitually done by any one must come from a fixed state or quality of mind."

"Then all our habits wil be reproduced in our children?" remarked Mr. Greenfield, who felt a good deal of interest in what was said.

"All our habits will affect them: though all may never be fully reproduced in action, owing to counteracting forces. The habit of the father may be neutralized, so to speak, by a habit of the mother; or the inherited inclination may lay quiescent through lack of excitement. Still, as a general thing, in this sense, 'the sins of the fathers are visited upon the children unto the third and fourth generation.' The evil that any man does from a willing mind, gives to his children an inclination to do likewise. All sensual indulgences have a like effect."

"Then, the children of an habitual drunkard," said Mrs. Greenfield, "will be inclined to intemperance?"

"Most assuredly, if born after the father's fall from sobriety. Some have wondered why, in this age, there was, in the mass of the people, such an inclination to excessive drinking. The reason is found in a widely spread hereditary predisposition to intemperance. Our ancestors, through one or two generations back, drank habitually. At first, drinking to intoxication was rare. But it was found that the people of a second generation, had not the power to use wine or spirits within a sober limit; and the reason was, because they inherited a love for stimulating drinks. Drukenness then became, suddenly, a wide-spread evil, and at one time, almost threatened the ruin of society. It conquered the strongest intellects, and darkened the brightest genius. Everywhere appeared its ravages;—in the palace and hovel,—in the pulpit and at the bar,—in the physician's office and in the mechanic's shop. Like the locusts of Egypt, it covered the land. Various were the hostile attitudes assumed by the friends of temperence in order to meet and overcome this terrible foe. But, until, under Divine Providence, a principle of total abstinence from all stimulating drinks was adopted, resistance proved almost in vain. That met the evil, for it took away all excitement from the hereditary or acquired love of drink."

"It is plain, then," remarked Mr. Greenfield," that if a man indulge freely in drinking, he excites the hereditary love of liquor in himself, should he possess it, and transmits it with accumulated force to his children?"

"Without doubt this is so. And were it not that most children of drinking parents are born before their progenitors had indulged the degrading appetite to a serious extent, a state of things incomparably worse than we have ever seen would have existed."

Dinner was announced, at this stage of the conversation, and Mr. and Mrs. Greenfield conducted their guest to the dining room. Henry was at college and Florence at a boarding school. The dinner party consisted, therefore, of but three persons. Upon the table were two decanters, one containing brandy and the other old rye whiskey; and on a side table was a wine cooler containing four bottles of wine. After the first course had passed, Mr. Greenfield handed the brandy to his guest and said—

"Here is some fine old brandy from the London docks. Will you try some of it?"

The gentleman smiled and replied—

"Excuse me, if you please. It would be a dangerous experiment for me to put a glass of that to my lips."

"Indeed! Why, so?" returned Mr. Greenfield evincing some surprise.

"You remember the conversation which has just passed. I have a birthright fondness for all kinds of intoxicating drinks; and at one time of life, almost destroyed myself, body and soul, from its indulgence. But, by total abstinence I was saked. To taste again' would only excite and inflame the dormant appetite and for me to tempt myself by such an act, would be little less than insanity."

Mr. Greenfield took the decanter of brandy, which he had reached to his guest, and was about filling his own glass, when some thought, glancing through his mind, caused him to hesitate and replace it upon the table.

"How long is it since you gave up the use of brandy?" he enquired.

"Thirty years."

"So long?"

"Yes. I am now sixty-five, and have not tasted a drop of brandy for thirty years. But, I had drank long and deep before I abandoned the debasing habit; and alas, was afterwards doomed to see the consequences of my error visited upon my child. In the very prime of manhood, and when he gave promise of a brilliant, useful and honorable future, the accursed appetite which had come to him as an heir-loom through two generations, overmastered him, and he fell, never to rise again. My son fills a drunkard's grave."

The old man's voice trembled, and there was a flush of feeling on his face. But the signs of emotion passed quickly, and he added—

"Have I not good reasons for letting the cup pass me untasted?"

"Reasons, the most powerful," replied Mr. Greenfield, with much seriousness of manner.

A conversation so sober, did not suit a pleasant dinner occasion, and the guest changed it to a cheerful theme. One course followed another, and strange to tell, the brandy remained untasted, an occurence that had not taken place for nearly thirty years when Mr. Greenfield was at the table.

With the dessert came some choice wines, and the bottle was again handed to the guest. But he declined with graceful politeness, and said.—

"To a morbid appetite, even wine is a poision and stimulates the mind into a temporary insanity. I dare not taste it."

"Surely wine will not have that effect;" said Mr. Greenfield.

"It will, assuredly. There is no law for a man whose taste has been corrupted, but that of entire abstinence."

Mr. Greenfield filled his own glass and that of his wife; but the latter remained untouched. While taking the dessert, the merchant drank two or three glasses of wine, and then took his usual cup of strong coffee. For the first time in many years, he retired from his own table a sober man. He had strange feelings; for the singular conversation of his guest had turned his thoughts into an entirely new current. He could think of little else, save hereditary transmissions. The question forced itself upon him—"How far have I disturbed the equilibrium of my son's mind, by giving him some inordinate proponsity confirmed in myself, by habit?" And he trembled in spirit, as he remembered at how early a period in life he had indulged himself deeply in the pleasures of drinking.

Not far different from those, of her husband were the feelings of Mrs. Greenfield. The guest retired; but he left behind him troubled thoughts. He had brought in a light which revealed unimagined danger; and they who had been happy in their blind security, were now trembling with alarm.

A worthy deacon hired a journeyman farmer, from a neighboring town, for the summer, and indoced him, although he was unaccustomed to church going, to accompany the family to church on the first Sabbath of his stay. Upon their return to the Deacon's house, he asked his 'hired man' how he liked the preaching. He said that he didn't like to hear any minister 'preach politics.'

'I am sory sure you heard no politics today,' said the deacon.

"I am as sure that I did," said the man.

'Mention the passages,' said the Deacon.

"I will. He said 'if the righteous scarcely are saved, where will the democrats appear?'

'Ah,' said the Deacon, 'you mistake. These were the words 'if the righteous scarcely are saved, how will the ungodly and wicked appear.'

'Oh yes!' said the hired man, 'he might have used those words, but I know he meant what he meant.'

A Beautiful Estray.

We are unable to give the author of the following lines or tell whence they came, but we are sure our young female readers who have been taught to 'touch the Guitar lightly' will esteem it a gem, as it is said to be easily set to music.

SONG.

Meet me, love, by the moon's soft light,
When the cares of the day are o'er—
And while the stars are glist'ning bright,
List to the tale of love, once more!
By the trellised walk we've often met—
I'll meet thee there to-night—
For thy voice hath power to charm me yet
And thine eyes, to me, are bright!

Then meet me, love, &c.

I remember still, when first I heard
Thy lips thy warmest love confess;
That, as I caught thy faltering words,
I felt my heart was doubly blest,
The pleasing tale I'd fain repeat,
(As we've oftimes done before,)
When seated in our rustic seat—
We've rehears'd our love's rich store.

Then meet me, love, &c.

Hot Corn.

From the New York Tribune.

"Here's your nice Hot Corn. smoking hot, smoking hot, just from the pot!"—Hour after hour last evening as we sat over the desk, this cry came up in a soft, plaintive voice under our window, which told us of one of the ways of the poor to eke out means of subsistence in this over-burdened, ill-fed and worse lodged home of misery—of so many without means, who are constantly crowding into the dirtiest purlieus of this notoriously dirty City, where they are exposed to the daily chance of death from some sudden outbreaking epidemic like that now desolating the same kind of streets in New Orleans, and swallowing up its thousands of victims from the same class of poverty-stricken, uncomfortably provided for human beings, who know not how, or have not the power to flee to the healthy hills and green fields of the country.—Here they live—barely live—in holes almost as hot as the hot corn, the cry of which rung in our ears from dark till midnight.

'Hot corn! hot corn! here's your nice hot corn,' rose up in a faint, child-like voice, which seemed to have been aroused by the sound of our step as we were about entering the Park, while the City clock told the hour when ghosts go forth upon their midnight rambles. We started, as though a spirit had given us a rap, for the sound seemed to come out of one of the iron posts which stand as sentinels over the main entrance, forbidding all vehicles to enter, unless the driver takes the trouble to pull up and tumble out of the way, one of the aforesaid posts, which is not often done, because one of them often, if not always, is out of its place, giving free ingress to the court-yard, or livary stable grounds of the City Hall, which, in consideration of the growth of a few miserable dusty brown trees and doubtful colored grass-patches, we call 'the Park.'

Looking over the post we discovered the owner of the hot corn cry, in the person of an emaciated little girl about twelve years old, whose dirty frock was nearly the color of the rusty iron, and whose face, hands and feet, naturally white and delicate, were grimed with dirt until nearly of the same color. There were two white streaks running down from the soft blue eyes, that told of the hot scalding tears that were coursing their way over the naturally beautiful face.

"Some corn, Sir," lisped the little sufferer, as she saw we had stopped to look at her, hardly daring to speak to one who did not address her in rough tones of command, such as 'give me some corn, you little wolf's whelp,' or a name still more opprobrious both to herself and mother. Seeing we had no look of contempt for her she said piteously, 'please buy some corn, sir.'

"No, my dear, I do not wish any; it is not very healthy in such warm weather as this, and especially so late at night."

"Oh dear, then, what shall I do?"

"Why, go home. It is past midnight, and such little girls as you ought not to be in the streets of this bad city at this time of night."

"I can't go home—and I am so tired and sleepy. Oh, dear."

"Cannot go home. Why not?"

"Oh, Sir, my mother will whip me if I go home without selling all my corn. Oh, sir, do buy one ear, and then I shall have only two left, and I am sure she might let little siss and me eat them, for I have not had anything to eat since morning, only one apple the man gave me, and one part of one he threw away. I could have stole a turnip at the grocery when I went to get—to get something in the pitcher for mother, but I dare not. I did use to steal but Mr. Pease says it is naughty to steal, and I don't want to be naughty, indeed I don't; and I don't want to be a bad girl, like Lizzy Smith, and she is only two years older than me, if she does dress fine. 'cause Mr. Pease says she will be just like old drunken Kate, one of these days. Oh, dear, now there goes a man and I did not cry hot corn, what shall I do?"

"Do! There, that is what you shall do," as we dashed the corn in the gutter. "Go home; tell your mother you have sold it all, and here is the money."

"Won't that be a lie, Sir?" Mr. Pease says we must not tell lies."

"Well, my dear, that won't be a lie, because I have bought it and thrown it away, instead of eating it. But if you don't [illegible] ir, may I get it from if you don't

To the Voters of Galveston County:—I have been strongly urged by my numerous friends (who are all A No. 1,) to become a candidate to represent you in the next Legislature. Like a true patriot, I have consented to sacrifice my private interests to the public good. Without vanity, I may say, and all who knew me will admit, that, if elected, I will originate and execute many acts in Austin, that no one of the candidates before you will attempt. I pledge myself that I will keep a watchful eye over the morals of legislation and legislators. No one who knows me will doubt if I choose to exercise the power, that members will be compelled to observe the rules of propriety, instead of indulging, as I fear is too often the case, in nocturnal revels, at improper places and unseemly hours.—Reform is necessary, I am the man to effect it—in fact the only man that can and will do it.

I am a Jeffersonian, Jackson Democrat. In truth, I was born.

I am progressive. I may say a fast one.

I go for the greatest good to the greatest number.

I am in favor of giving homes to the homeless, and houses to the houseless.

I advocate the education of the masses, by a tax upon wealth.

I believe that Earth, Air and Water is a gift of the good God to all. That all are entitled to as much as is necessary for their use. More than this is a monopoly, and I oppose all monopolies.

I am in favor of Banks, if a plan can be invented to establish one to loan money to the poor, industrious, honest man, without security.

I am a "Young American." I adopt their boundary—East by the rising, and West by the setting sun; North by the Artic expedition, and South—as far as we please. This is a great country, and less than this would not suit our purposes. I abhor old fogies, whether as politicians, warriors, husbands or lovers. I wish this distinctly understood.

I disavow the creed of 'all things unto all men,' but adopt it decidedly as regards the ladies.

I am for women's rights on the largest scale. If we do not yield them equality, I fear they will refuse to multiply and replenish the earth, as they have threatened to do. And every unprejudiced mind must admit that they become our wives not to pleasure themselves, but us. I am too modest to enumerate all my good qualities and qualifications. I think, however, without vanity, I may say that, if elected, I will be more distinguished than any representative you have had. You will be proud of me. My name will be familiar to all, and daily seen in the public prints.

I am an old Texan, one of the founders of Galveston. I have shed much blood for the good of the people. I have done the State some service. I ask, in return your votes. I will see most of you before the election, and will address you before the public.

I am opposed to the practice of treating, but when invited, will be happy to take a glass with any one. In this particular, I make no distinction in politics.

JOHN MILLS.

P. S. I forgot to say that I am in favor of the next war.

WESTERN MUSIC.—We learn from a Western paper, that a western chap who went to New York to purchase goods, &c. was invited to one of those fashionable parties so common in large cities.

He was clearly a western original—but said very little, until he found that the party was not to close without an attempt to corner him. At length, a bevy of laughing girls, by the merest accident in the world, found themselves grouped about said western green one, in a most animated discourse upon music, and city playing.—When all this had progressed just far enough, one of the damsels, with head more adorned without than within, and in that peculiar parlor drawl, which fortunately no type can represent, accosted the observed of all, with,

"Do the ladies play music at the West, sir?"

Original saw the game and so he resolved to win.

"O very universally, Miss." was the cool reply.

"Indeed, why I was not aware of that; pray do they use the piano, mostly?"

"Never, Miss, the only instrument out our way, is the Swinette, and the girls all play it."

"Oh dear, I am sure I never heard of that before; do tell us what it is, and how they play it."

"Well; the instrument is a small pig; and each girl takes one of these under her arm, and chews the end of its long tail, and that brings the music."

The preconcerted "come," made no further progress; and for the balance of the evening our western 'green' was the only lion of the show.

THE REASON WHY "BRUDDER DICKSON" LEFT THE CHURCH.—Mr. Dickson, a colored barber in one of our large New England towns, was shaving one of his customers, a respectable citizean, one morning, when a conversation occurred between them respecting Mr. Dickson's former connection with a colored church in the place.

"I believe you are connected with the church in Elm st. Mr. Dickson," said the customer.

'No, sah, not at all.'

'What are you not a member of the African church?'

'Not dish year, sah.'

'Why did you leave their communion, Mr. Dickson? if I may be permitted to ask.'

'Why, I tell you, sah,' said Mr. Dickson strapping a concave razor on the palm of his hand. 'It was jess like diss—I jined dat church in good faif. I gib ten dollars toward de stated preachin' of the gospil, de fus year, and de peepil all call me brudder Dickson. De second year my business not good, an' I only gib five dollars. Dat year de church peepil call me Mister Dickson. Dish razor hurt you, sah?'

'No, razor goes tol'but well.'

'Well, sah, de tird year I feel berry poor—sickness in my family—and I didn't nuffin for preachin.' Well, sah, arter dat day, call me ole nigger Dickson an' I left 'em!'

So saying, Mr. Dickson brushed his customer's hair, and the gentleman departed, well satisfied with the reason why Mr. Dickson left his church.

The land that can make a pie is a continual feast to the husband that marries it.

—'Don't act so, Isaac, dear,' said Mrs. Partington, as he was raising particular about the kitchen, and throwing everything into confusion in a vain attempt to find his ball. 'People by'n by will say you are non compus mentis, as they did about poor Mr. Smith—the doctor says you are of the rebellious sanguinary temperature, and heaven knows what you would do, if it should have a tendency to the head—perhaps, you'd die of a suggestion of the brain.'

—'Speaking of speed,' said a wag the other day, 'I reckon they travel on the Hudson river railroad.' I stepped in the cars at Albany, got fairly seated at Hudson, lighted my cigar at Poughkeepsie, spit it out at Peekskill, and it hit a man at Sing Sing.'

THE NEW YORK TRIBUNE.

WEEKLY ENLARGED.

ON the 11th of last April, THE DAILY TRIBUNE, having completed its twelfth year, was enlarged more than one-fourth, or to the size of The London Times, making it considerably larger than any other cheap Daily published in this country or in the world. No change in price was made in consequnce of this Enlargement—the paper being still afforded to Mail Subscribers at $5 per annum, and sold to Carriers and to Agents ordering it by Express or Mail for distant sale at $1 50 for one hundred copies, or $15 per thousand copies, payable in advance. At these prices, our aggregate receipts for our entire Daily edition do not exceed the sums we pay for Paper and Ink, leaving all other expenses to be defrayed from our receipts for Advertising. In other words, we return to each purchaser of our paper from us his money's worth in the naked sheet we send him, looking for the reward of our own labor and the heavy expenses of Telegraphing, Correspondence, Reporting, Composition, Printing, Mailing, Book-keeping, Rent, &c. to our Advertisers alone. We do not think it now possible to cheapen news papers beyond this point; if it ever shall be hereafter, we intend to be even with the foremost in demonstrating the fact.

Our SEMI-WEEKLY, EUROPEAN and CALIFORNIA editions were enlarged simultaneously and equally with the Daily, and also without any increase of price. We respectfully solicit a comparison of our Semi-Weekly at $3 per annum, (two copies sent a full year for $5, and ten copies for $20,) with any $4 or $5 Semi-Weekly, and will cheerfully send copies for this purpose upon direct or post-paid application.

THE NEW YORK WEEKLY TRIBUNE enters on its thirteenth year on the 3rd of September, when it will in like manner be enlarged to the size of the Semi Weekly and Daily, adding more thad one-fourth to its capacity—also without increase of price. This Enlargement adds at least $20,000 per annum to our expenses, in addition to the previous cost of our Daily Enlargement already effected. All our editions will, from the 1st of September next, appear in entirely new and beautiful type, now in course of preparation expressly for this paper. Our Steam Cylinder Presses are not surpassed in by any the world. Even though our Weekly Edition should be rapidly run up to 100,000 copies, we are prepared to print and mail every copy on the day (Thursday) that the form is put to press, without interrupting or retarding the regular issue of our three Daily editions, amounting to Twenty-odd Thousand copies. We stand ready to adopt any improvements, however expensive, which will enable us to disseminate intelligence more freshly and effectively, and shall especially hail as we labor to effect, a radical improvement in the celerity and reliability of the Mails.

THE TRIBUNE has not now its character to make or proclaim. It has not been and never can be a mere party organ. It has supported the Whig party because the distinctive principles of that party appeared to favor the great ends which it has labored to subserve: it never advocated a measure because it was proposed or sustained by the Whig party. It holds itself at all times as free to condemn unsound principle, unwise measures or corrupt acts should the two former be propounded or the latter perpetrated by Whigs as though they had emanated from the hostile camp. In so far as Peace, Liberty, Education, Temperance, Internal Improvement and Industrial Development may be subserved by acting with the Whig party, it must continue to be, as it has been, Whig.

Though never acting with any Abolition or other one-idea party, THE TRIBUNE is and must be the relentless foe foe of Human Slavery, as of whatever else tends to degrade Labor and obstruct the intellectual and social development of any portion of mankind. Were it able to perceive that a vote in New York could abolish Slavery in Carolina, it might attach itself to some one of the expressly Anti-Slavery parties: lacking that light, it declines to abandon the substance for the shadow of political good But, while it does not see its way clear to any effective Political action against Slavery in the States which now cherish it, it regards the defeat of whatever effort to extend the giant wrong under the flag of our Union, or to obstruct by its power the progress of Abolition in other lands, as among the most urgent and sacred of public duties, not to be subordinated to any party consideration whatever, And, while it does not propose to make Anti-Slavery the basis of Political action, other than defensive, it will neglect no opportunity, remit no effort, so to diffuse Light and Truth as to render the continuance of Slavery impossible in a land irradiated by the Sun of Christianity and boasting itself the great exemplar of Political Justice and law-guarded Freedom.

For Temperance in all things, but especially the disuse of Intoxicating Beverages and the legal suppression of the Liquor Traffic, we shall struggle, as we have struggled, unflinchingly and untiringly. We regard the Maine Law as essentially the most beneficent statute of our day, and confidently hope to see it soon prevail universally.

The Congressional Reports and Washington Correspondence will, as heretofore, be both reliable and satisfactory.

The Markets for Grain, Cattle, Cotton and other products of the country, will receive proper attention and be reliably reported in THE TRIBUNE.

On our correspondence with the most important points throughout the world we need not here dilate. Of the fact that our Associate BAYARD TAYLOR is now on the other side of the globe, sending us advices from the seat of war in China, and expecting to depict for our readers the physical, moral and social characteristics of jealousy-guarded Japan, the public is already aware. He will probably return by way of Australia and California, in both of which we have several correspondents Briefly—we shall spare no expense to keep our readers well advised on every subject of interest, and doubt not that the same generous measure of patronage hitherto accorded to us will continue to repay all our exertions.

We rarely employ Travelling Agents, as so many imposters are habitually prowling in the assumed capacity of solicitors for journals. We prefer that our subscribers shall pay their money to persons they know and of whose integrity they are assured. Any friend who believes he will do good by increasing the circulation of THE TRIBUNE is authorized to solicit and receive subscriptions; and, on due proof that money has been mailed and post-paid to our address, we take the responsibility of its safe transmission. Specimen Copies will promptly be sent without charge to those requiring them, and we trust many friends will be moved to ask their neighbors and acquaintances to join in making up a Club to commence with our Enlarged Sheet and New Type on the first of September, or at any time thereafter.

☞ A limited amount of space in THE WEEKLY TRIBUNE will be appropriated to Advertising.

Essex County Fair.

We take pleasure in calling the attention of our readers to the admirable note of Mr. Simmons to the President of the Society, which is published in this paper. In our comments on the prospect of the Fair. last week, we urged as we had been requested, the attention of our manufacturers to this Exhibition.

The officers of the Society are very anxious for an extensive show of our various Iron fabrics, such an one as shall be adequate to the resources of the county, and exhibit fully the progress of its manufacture. Let there be an ample exhibition of our nails, blooms, bars, and every description of our Iron manufactures, that strangers may witness and appreciate the perfectness of these materials as produced by our workshops and forges. Such a display will exert an important influence upon the business reputation of the county.

It is hoped that our various other manufactures will be represented at the Fair. Where can be produced finer specimens of wagons, cabinet and joiner work, sash, blinds, and wooden ware? Let us see an animated competition in the various branches of our industrial pursuits. In what other manner can our manufacturers so widely diffuse a knowledge of the superiority of their fabrics? We mean to be there with a sample of superior printing of our friend and foreman, John Nash that can't be excelled.

☞ S. H. HAMMOND, Esq., the able and gentlemanly Editor of the Albany Register, spent the Sabbath in our village. He took his departure on Monday for the Saranac Lakes, where he has gone to indulge in the piscatory sports of that celebrated region and to quicken the vitality of a frame that looks as though it was still capable of doing the "state some service."—Mr. HAMMOND is a strong and vigorous writer, and his vivid and glowing descriptions of scenery and forest life are seldom surpassed. We shall look with renewed interest for the succeeding numbers of the Register.

☞ The Fall Term of Keeseville Academy commenced on Thursday last, with 102 scholars, a fact unparalleled in its history since its foundation.

Notice.

Those of our Subscribers who have heretofore received the Republican at the Post-Office in this village, will perceive by the subjoined note that they can no longer do so They will hereafter receive their papers at our Office, or at such other places in the village as will be most convenient to themselves. Those who reside in the village can have them by the carrier if they choose.

In regard to this we are only disappointed that we have not sooner received such a notice. We only regret that the inconvenience which this will occasion will fall entirely upon our innocent subscribers. It is no inconvenience to ourself whatever. If the inconvenience could be reversed, we would not care. As it is our good whig friends must put up with it for little less than four years, when they will be relieved. It is only a piece of petty annoyance thro' an accidental official position, which only small, mean minds stoop to. It is from the same mint where the effort to defraud us of a bill of paper, by way of revenge for newspaper quarrels, was coined. As such we pass it by, "like the idle winds which we heed not."

Official—A. C. Nelson, P.M.

Publisher Essex County Republican:

DOTTINGS OF THE EDITOR IN PURSUIT OF HEALTH.—TROY Aug. 27, 1853.—A ride up the lake, tho' on the splendid Steamer Canada, and waited upon in the kindest manner by Capt. Foster and his polite steward, affords no incidents of interest to the reader, as they would be but musings and murmurings of a restless and nervous invalid. The same may be said of a ride on the cars, but having arrived at Troy, we must make a few notes during a brief stop for rest, preparatory to a rush for the great metropolis:

TROY.—The enterprise of the citizens of this city is proverbial. A feeling of rivalry between Troy and Albany has incited them to far greater exertions doubtless than otherwise would have been called out. The result has been a multiplicity of rail roads running into and through this city, and of course at great cost. Indeed, subscriptions in aid of these enterprises have been disproportionate to their means, and for a time hung heavily. And indeed, as facilities increased, business seemed to dissappear, and business men for a long time despaired of the prosperity of the city. Several merchants impelled by these fears removed to N. Y. But these dark days have passed. The present season has witnessed a great change. The tide has again set in favor of Troy. Every department of business has flourished beyond precedent.—The rail road operations of the citizens, tho' dubious for a time, are being crowned with success. The great Union Depot, of all the roads passing into, or through the city, is to be located here. The location was for some time in doubt, Albany and Troy being rival claimants for the benefits, and the honor. When completed it will be one of the most magnificent structures in the U. S. covering an area of 600 by 500 feet. It is located on 6th st. and but a step from the American Hotel kept by Shepard and Miller formerly of Essex county. To meet this advantage a large addition, 4 stories high, and about 120 feet by 60 feet, with 42 parlors and bed rooms, and a dining room 100 feet by 60 feet, has been added to the American. It will then be in fact the largest and best house in the city, capable of accommodating, any amount, and any kind of company. Shepard and Miller have already got rich here, and the constant 'up town' tendency of business indicates that their success has but just begun.

Not to enter into too many particulars, lest we make this article too lengthy, we will conclude by calling the attention of our readers to the establishment of G. V. S. Quackenbush, whose advertisement may be seen in another column, more particularly to the department of rugs, carpets, and oil cloths These can be had at any price from the lowest to the highest, at wholesale, or retail, or made up to fit any room, to suit the purchaser. What is worthy of especial note is, that any person in the country furnishing a house, or a single room can order by letter either of these articles made up of any pattern, and rely upon the integrity of Mr. Quackenbush with the utmost confidence.

We would be glad to say something of the improved appearance and rapidly improving prospects of the Post and Whig, and of the splendid crockery establishment of Messrs. Pierce & Southwick and some other establishments, as well as many objects of curiosity in and about the [illegible] we must defer them to another time.

MEM.—Mrs. Scholey, the fat [illegible] weighing 761 lbs. is on exhibition here.—We have been to see her, of course, and 'oh, my.' such a sight! We went in a 'right merrie mood,' but so much fat, such a deformity, rendering her life almost insupportable, was painful, and so we almost regret the gratification of our curiosity.

ROUTE TO N. Y.—Having a choice between the rail roads and the boats, we chose the latter. The Oregon and the Rip Van Winkle form the line now between Troy and N. Y. It was our fortune to take the Rip Van Winkle, and to the politeness of Capt. Farnham, her commander, W. R. Champlin, clerk, and to Mr. Worden, steward, we were indebted for a delightful trip down the noble Hudson. In pleasant weather with starlight evenings this ride is one which can hardly be excelled. The myriads of vessels, the hills and mountains covered with rich green verdure, interspersed with white dwellings, the numerous villages on the hill sides, with sociable company, a splendid boat with comfortable staterooms, an elegant saloon, and a sumptuous table, make this certainly a most agreable and comfortable route.

N. Y. AND THE CRYSTAL PALACE.—We have not time to make any remarks this week. We only wish to acknowledge our obligations to Wm. McDonald, one of our city newspaper agents, who thrust a free pass to the Palace into our hands before we had been in his office five minutes.—May his shadow never be less, and his business go on increasing. He is a gentleman, and deserving. We shall remember him another time.

SARATOGA SPRINGS.—Wishing to see life as it is' at this celebrated watering, place we stopt at the U. S. Hotel. This is an immense establishment, the buildings and grounds embracing an era of about ten acres and capable of accommodating 1500 visitors. Of course we were all eyes and ears. Here were every possible variety of the human species from fools to the wisest, from the poorest to the most wealthy, from blacklegs to the pure and virtuous, boors, gentlemen, earls, lords, counts, senators, governors, &c., &c. all crowded to' gether, and crowding each other. We came to the most decided opinion that it was no place to learn good breeding, to seek health, or to improve in morals. The morning is spent in dressing for dinner and the dissipations of the night. Dinner comes at 3 o'clock, and lasts about 2 hours. After dinner a drive. At 9 oclock, the ball room is lighted, and the music commences for those who wish to dance. We saw women with dresses below the lowest bounds of modesty. We saw a young 'blood,' a member of a family that looked high, dressed in the highth of fashion, heavily loaded with jewelry, and a splendid mustache, while at the table open his mouth wide, and use his finger nail as a tooth pick! Bah, it was like looking into a swill pail, and we looked the other way in disgust. On the Hotel Registry we saw an elderly minister and a young lady booked for the same room, and not far from our own. The minister we know but we are unknown to him. He passes for a respectable man at home, tho partial to the ladies, but we never thought him any too pious.—We shall never mention any names, for it may be all right. The parties do not reside in this state. But enough. We might continue, these sayings and doings but these will suffice.

Lake Champlain.—We only wish to say here that no where during our short absence did we sit down to a better dinner, or find more attentive waiters than on board the Canada, Capt. Foster. His boat too, in all that is neat, comfortable, and substantial, will compare favorably with the best, of which the residents on the borders of the lake may feel justly proud.

HOME,—'Home, sweet home, be it ever so humble, there's no place like home.'

THE MAILS.—Never before in our recollection have complaints of the mails been so universal and so just. We notice them in all our exchanges from Maine to Louisianna. Our own experience during the past few weeks has been extremely annoying. We can place no reliance whatever on the southern mails. Sometimes we get our southern papers from the south, sometimes from the north, with an intermission of a few days, then several at a time. We have lately been two weeks in getting a letter from Elizabethtown. A short time ago we mailed a letter of importance to that place on Saturday, and it should have reached its destination on Monday, via Westport, by due course of mail, but it did not arrive until Wednesday, as we were informed. A few weeks since we wrote three letters in one week to a town in Washington Co. just below Whitehall, and they should have been received in about 18 hours, tho' we could go there by rail road in six. We were there the next week, and they had not arrived then. Complaints are made in regard to the reception of some of our bundles of papers, but we are unable at present to fix the blame upon any particular person, if indeed, the fault lies at the door of any one in particular. There is to say the least, the most gross neglect and mismanagement throughout the Post Office department, which call loudly for reform. The people will not long put up with these irregularities quietly. They are unnecessary, because the department is in weak hands, and therefore the more inexcusable. The truth of it is, the democratic rabblement—the rowdies and the ninnies—have possession of the government to the exclusion of the talent of the party. There is nothing of this administration from highest to lowest, and it will only be growing [illegible] to the end, when it will be hurled [illegible] in utter detestation as the meanest which has ever disgraced [illegible] of Washington.

☞ John Morrissey has been matched to fight with Yankee Sullivan, about the first of October, for $5,000 a side. The knowing ones are betting freely on Morrissey.

The match to day (Aug. 26,) between Flora Temple and Tacony was won in three straight heats by the former. Time—2:29—2;34, and 2,34.

☞ The Masonic fraternity of Cincinnati have forwarded $700 to the New Orleans sufferers—the amount contributed by members of the different Masonic lodges in that city.

☞ GEO W. BENEDICT, editor of the Burlington (Vt.) Free Press, has received the nomination for Senator in Chittenden county. We presume to be nominated is equivalent to an election, among the stirring whigs of that county.

☞ A running match came off between the Jersey Eclipse and Jenny Riley, on the Ausabie course, on Saturday last, for a purse of $100. One 1 mile heat. The race was well contested, Eclipse coming out about four rods ahead.

☞ STEPHEN FINCH, an old and respected resident of Moores, while engaged in chopping wood at his residence, on Wednesday last, fell dead to the ground, in a fit of appoplexy. He was 76 years of age.—[C. C, Whig.

WEALTH.—The greatest pleasure connected with wealth consists in acquiring it Two months after a man comes into a fortune, he feels just as prosy and fretful as he did when he worked for "four and six" a day.

—Bayard Taylor, one of the editors of the New York Tribune, has joined the Japan Expedition, having been assigned a place in the corps of artists, with the rank of Master Mate, on board the steamer Susquehanna.

☞ The potato rot is prevailing in all directions. Near Newburyport, Mass., whole fields are lost. On Long Island one third of the ground planted will not be dug. Those in rich soil are the worst. In Central New York there is the same complaint.

☞ At a Fourth July celebration in Marion county, Illinois, a young lady offered the following toast:

"The Young men of America—Their arms our support; Our arms their reward. Fall in,—men, fall in."

'John, who was the wisest man?'

'Don't know, sir.'

'Yes you do, tell me.'

'Well, I guess it was uncle, for father says he was cunnin' enough to get every body to trust him, and wasn't fool enough to pay nobody.'

A clergyman of our acquaintance was rebuked by a brother of the cloth a few days ago, for smoking. The culprit replied that he used the weed in moderation.—'What do you call moderation?' inquired the other. 'Why, sir,' said the offender, 'one cigar at a time.'—Boston Post.

MAN KILLED.—A Mr. Farmington, of Peru, in this county. took passage on a freight train, on the 20th inst., on the Ogdensburgh road and when 7 or 8 miles west of Mooers Junction, one of the wheels of the car on which he was riding, broke and precipitated Mr. F., who was on the top of the car, to the ground, who was instantly killed.—C. C. Whig.

ACCIDENT.—A sad accident occurred at the Old Sanford ore bed in Moriah on the 24th inst. by the premature discharge of a blast, by which Pat McGinn had a hand blown off, an eye out and otherwise so badly bruised that his life is seriously endangered. If he lives he is so badly maimed as to make life almost a burthen.

☞ We call the attention of our readers to the advertisement of the Menagerie and Circus, which is to exhibit here on Wednesday next. Their performances are spoken of as being highly creditable, and the men connected with the concern as courteous and well conducted citizens. Herr Driesbach with his performing animals will be a great treat for the little folks.

BEAR FIGHT.—A Bear weighing between 400 and 500 lbs, was killed in the Saranac River, about two miles above Baker's one day last week. The victors were F. C. Moody and wife, who secured the 'varmint' after a sharp contest, during which they fired seven shots, all of which took effect. We don't know whether this was the one Allon had the fight with up in Keene or not, but report says the 'critter's' teeth were all knocked out.

☞ The Albany Knickerbocker gives an account of a wonderful dog belonging to one of its carriers. The carrier falling sick; sent out a boy to deliver the papers, who being unacquainted with the round, was followed by the dog, who stopped at the door of every subscriber and wagged his tail, never missing one in a list of six hundred. At the door of all subscribers who had not paid in a long time, the dog was heard to howl.

The order is reported to be in a flourishing condition. Some 464 lodges are working under this Grand Lodge.

The Travel to the State Fair.

Our railroad folks are determined that people shall not be kept from here during the State Fair for want of travelling facilities, as they are making extraordinary exertions to accommodate every one. Their roads are now in good order, and are fully equipped for doing what may reasonably be expected; yet more cars will be provided, and every precaution taken to deliver passengers in safety and with due despatch. Mr. Van Reusselaer is particularly active in arranging to accommodate the Northern and Eastern travellers, so that we may expect a larger representation from that portion of the State than have been present at any previous Fair. Excursion trains may also be expected from the East, as far as Boston during the week.

Rooms have been taken at our Hotels by several Southern gentlemen, who have announced their intention of visiting the Fair, for the purpose of purchasing some of the fine horses for which Vermont and the Northern portion of this State are so justly celebrated, and we accordingly call upon all those having fine horses for sale to be on hand with them.—[Saratoga Daily Whig.

PORT HENRY FURNACES.—The upper furnace is now in complete order and in successful operation, making about 20 tons of pig iron a day, and will soon be making 25 tons. It is working in most beautiful style, carried by water. The wheel which drives it is 35 feet in diameter, and 12 feet wide, and one of the most perfect specimens of mechanicism we have seen in a long time. The mason work too in which it is set is a piece of superior work of the kind. The lower furnace will be in blast about the first of November, and when completed these furnaces will be in far superior order than ever before. Pennsylvania coal is used of which there are probably 10,000, or more tons on the wharf.—Myron Brintnall is founder, Daniel Taylor boss mechanic, and Hiram Gibbs master mason.

A GUILTY CONSCIENCE.—When Dr Donne afterwards Dean of St Paul's took possession of his parish, as he walked into the churchyaad, he took up a skull thrown by the sexton out of the grave, and in it found a small headless nail, which he drew out secretly, and wrapped it in the corner of his handkerchief. He then asked the grave digger if he knew whose the skull was. He replied that it was the skull of a man who kept a spirit shop, and who, having gone to bed intoxicated, was found dead in his bed in the morning.

'Had he a wife?' asked the doctor.

'Yes.'

'What character did she bear?'

'A very good one; only the neighbors reflect on her because she married the day after her husband's burial.'

A few days afterwads the doctor payed her a visit as if by accident; asked her some questions, and at last, of what sickness her former husband died. As she was telling him the same story as the sexton, he opened his handkerchief, and cried, in an authoritative voice:

"Woman do you know this nail?"

Struck with horror, she instantly confessed the murder.

State Fair.

We are authorized to say that the steamers Canada and America will carry freight and passengers to and from the Fair at Saratoga which occurs on the 20th, 21st, 22nd, and 23d Sept. inst., at fare one way. The able and indefatigable Secretary of the State Society, Mr. JOHNSON, manifests great anxiety that Northern New York should be fully represented at the Exhibition. Objections, he says, were raised to locating the Fair at Saratoga upon the ground that this section of the State embraced nothing worthy of exhibition. Deep interest would be created at the Fair if our Iron manufacturers would individually present samples of their nails, blooms, bars, pigs, &c. We might with a little exertion, present such a display of Iron fabrics as no other district of the State can exhibit. Our stoves, machinery, and implements can compete with any articles in those classes, and altho' there appears a paucity of premiums offered for other Iron fabrics, these would doubtless be embraced in the range of discretionary premiums. Let that be as it may, the exhibition of our choice fabrics, where thousands will examine them, would afford the most extensive and effectual advertisement to the manufacturers.

Will not some competent person form and exhibit at the Fair, a full collection of specimens of our ores?

We cannot doubt that the Black Hawks will be abundantly represented. We have sheep and cattle equal to any in the State. In other departments, and in our dairy products, we have already at other State Fairs, triumphantly competed and borne off numerous trophies. For our individual interests, and personal pride, for the honor of Northern New York, let a vigorous effort be made to vindicate our fame, from the aspersions which have been attached to us as the "Siberian Region" of the State.

SERVED HIM RIGHT—SHOCKING AFFAIR—Last night, a lady, the wife of a broker of this city, on returning from a party, where she had spent the evening, to her home, in the Third Ward, found that her sleeping apartments had been invaded by a stranger, who had taken possession of her bed, and who commenced a very unprovoked and wanton attack upon her. Having no weapons of defence near her, she seized a bucket of scalding water and dashed it upon him, completely saturating him from head to foot. Finding that he had mistaken his game, he then endeavored to escape, but the effects of his bath were too severe, and he was easily captured. His sufferings are said to be "intolerable," the flesh in many places peeling from his body. There are no hopes of his recovery. So unprovoked an attack, at so early an hour in the evening, upon a quiet and respectable family, is something new in our criminal calendar. He is a stranger in the neighborhood, though we understand he has given his name as B. Bugg, and says that his native place is Louisville, Ky. It is not known how he entered the house, the doors being all locked, unless he entered there during the day and remained secreted until night. At the request of the lady, from motives of delicacy we suppress the name of the family. If such villains always meet with such a reception, we should hear less of midnight marauders.—Cincinnati Times.

[Written for the Republican]

"I Ask no Loud Funeral Knell."

I ask no lofty towering stone
Raised o'er my head;
No monument to mark the spot
Where I am laid.

I would my grave were far removed
From life's gay scene—
Far, 'neath some lordly spreading tree
'Mid forest's green.

There, when the breeze of morn
Its leaflets wave,
T'will shed its cool, refreshing dews
Upon my grave.

Yes, lay me there, and let its leaves sigh forth
My dirge alone;
There make my grave and let it be,
Like me unknown."

But may my memory live
Till after years—
And, from some kindred heart, call forth
Affection's tears.

THE MARRIAGE STATE;

Shall Happiness and Health, or Misery and Sickness, attend it?

MOST STARTLING CONSIDERATIONS!

Reflections for the Thoughtful.

Strange that countless human beings exist and drag through life as do the beasts of the field, or the insects of the earth, evincing no more thought or reflection than though the noble faculties of mind were not vouchsafed to them.

Many such are husbands and fathers, upon whom are dependent the health, the well-being, and the happiness of a confiding and affectionate wife, with perhaps a family of children.

HOW OFTEN IT HAPPENS THAT THE

WIFE LINGERS FROM YEAR TO YEAR

In that pitiable condition as not even for one day to feel the happy and exhilerating influence incident to the enjoyment of health.

She may not be an invalid confined to her bed, or even to her room; as her pride, ambition and energy induce and nerve her to take personal charge of her household, even when her health will not admit of it; but she is nevertheless perceptibly sinking from day to day, and always ailing.

Thus, day after day, and month after month transpire. Her health daily sinks, till finally oven the hope of recovery no longer remains. And thus

THE BLOOMING BRIDE,

But a few years ago in the flush of health and youth, and buoyancy of spirits, rapidly, and apparently inexplicably, becomes a feeble, sickly, debilitated wife, with frame emaciated, nerves unstrung, spirits depressed, countenance bearing the impress of suffering, and an utter physical and mental prostration.

Sometimes this deplorable change may and does arise from organic or constitutional causes. But oftener, by far oftener, to gross and inexcusable ignorance of the simplest and plainest rules of health as connected with the marriage state, the violation of which entails disease, suffering and misery, not only to the wife, but often as a

from the Parents.

And must this continue? Shall we be wise in all that concerns the cattle of our fields, our horses, our sheep, our cows, our oxen, the nature and character of the soil we possess, the texture and quality of our goods and merchandise; but in all that concerns ourselves as human beings, with human functions and passions, subject to great derangement, involving our future peace and happiness—in all that concerns the health and welfare of the wife of our affections, and the mother of our children; in all that concerns the mental and physical well being of these children, we should be immersed in the darkest and most

BENIGHTED IGNORANCE,

AS CULPABLE AS INEXCUSABLE!

How long shall this ignorance prevail so productive of its bitter fruits? How long shall the wife and mother be ignorant of the nature, character and causes of the various womb and sexual complaints, embittering her days by suffering—suffering often prolonged to years, eventuating in a complication of diseases utterly and hopelessly incurable? Shall we for ever close our eyes to the results of physiological science by which we may arrive at an understanding of ourselves as men and women, subject to serious life-long enduring diseases, and perpetuating them to our children.

LET EVERY WIFE AND HUSBAND PONDER!

No husband or wife need be ignorant of what concerns them most to know to secure their health and happiness. That knowledge is contained in a little work entitled

FRAUD!

ALL who want AXES of the real COLLINS & Co. make should be particular to notice the stamps, as there are various counterfeits and imitations stamped Collins and labelled much like ours, which are fraudulently sold in some parts of the United States as our manufacture. They are made in different parts of the country by various axe-makers, and are generally their poorest quality. The genuine Collins axes, which have acquired such an extensive reputation, are invariably stamped "COLLINS & CO. HARTFORD," and each axe has a printed label with my signature.—It is now more than TWENTY-FIVE YEARS since we commenced the business with the stamp of "Collins & Co. Hartford," and I do not know of any other axe-maker by the name of Collins in the United States.

LEANDER BABBIT'S

TRUSS OFFICE

The latest and most approved Trusses; Female Supporters; Do. with shoulder braces attached; spinal elevators for curvature of the spine and projection of the shoulder blade. Suspensory shoulder braces. This instrument is so constructed that it not only meets the part of shoulder braces but carries the heft of the ladies' shirts on their shoulders; and, hence remedies the evil consequent to carrying them on the hips and sides. For gentlemen it not only serves for a shoulder brace, but acts the part of suspenders.

As to the importance and usefulness of the above named instruments, and their beneficial effects, their peculiar mechanism and superiority over other instruments of the same name, I need not say anything. They are so well known by physicians, and the multitude of persons that have had occasion to test them in this northern section of country, that I deem it not important to introduce a long catalogue of certificates; yet I have abundant evidence in my possession to justify me in all I claim or affirm, and deem it a privilege to give references to any who wish to make inquiries.

Office at Keeseville in the building on the corner of Main and Front street, opposite the Bank, up stairs.

Ladies will be waited on at my dwelling by Mrs. Babbit whose experience in adjusting braces and supporters qualifies her to give perfect satisfaction. 422—3m

CONCURRENT RESOLUTION PROPOSING AN AMENDMENT TO THE CONSTITUTION.

Resolved, (if the Senate concur,) That the following amendment be proposed to the constitution of this state and referred to the legislature to be chosen at the next general election of senators, and be published for three months previous to making such choice, in pursuance to the provisions of the first section of the thirteenth article, of said constitution.

Substitute for section three of article seven the following:

After paying the said expenses of collection, superintendence and repairs of the canals, and the sums appropriated by the first and second sections of this article, there shall be appropriated and set apart in each fiscal year out of the surplus revenues of the canals, as a sinking fund, a sum sufficient to pay the interest as it falls due, and extinguish the principal within eighteen years of any loan made under this section, and if the said sinking fund shall not be sufficient to redeem any part of the principal at the stipulated times of payment, or to pay any part of the interest of such loans as stipulated, the means to satisfy any such deficiency shall be procured on the credit of the said sinking fund. After complying with the foregoing provisions, there shall be paid annually out of said revenues into the treasury of the state two hundred thousand dollars, to defray the necessary expenses of government. The remainder shall, in each fiscal year, be applied to meet appropriations for the enlargement and completion of the canals mentioned in this section, until the said canals shall be completed. In each fiscal year thereafter the remainder shall be disposed of in such manner as the legislature may direct, but shall at no time be anticipated or pledged for more than one year in advance. The legislature shall annually, during the next four years, appropriate to the enlargement of the Erie, the Oswego, the Cayuga and Seneca canals, and to the completion of the Black River and Genesee Valley canals, and for the enlargement of the locks of the Champlain canal, whenever from dilapidation or decay it shall be necessary to rebuild them, a sum not exceeding two millions two hundred and fifty thousand dollars. The remainder of the revenues of the canals for the current fiscal year in which such appropriation is made, shall be applied to meet such appropriation; and if the same shall be deemed insufficient, the legislature shall at the same session provide for the deficiency by loan. The legislature shall also borrow one million and five hundred thousand dollars to refund to the holders of the canal revenue certificates issued under the provisions of chapter four hundred and eighty-five of the laws of the year one thousand eight hundred and fifty-one, the amount received into the treasury thereon. But no interest to accrue after July first, one thousand eight hundred and fifty-five, shall be paid on such Certificates. The provisions of section twelve of this article requiring every law for borrowing money to be submitted to the people, shall not apply to the loans authorized by this section. No part of the revenues of the canals or of the funds borrowed under this section, shall be paid or applied upon or in consequence of any alleged contract made under chapter four hundred and eighty-five of the laws of the year one thousand eight hundred and fifty one, except to pay for work done or materials furnished prior to the first day of June, one thousand eight hundred and fifty-two. The rates of toll on persons and property transported on the canal shall not be reduced below those for the year one thousand eight hundred and fifty-two, except by the canal board, with the concurrence of the legislature.—All contracts for work or materials on any canal, shall be made with the person who shall offer to do or provide the same at the lowest price, with adequate security for their performance.

OLD ESTABLISHED HOSPITAL.

Quick Cures and Low prices. Private Diseases and their Antidote.

Dr. LISPENARD, author of the Marriage Guide, or Private Medical Treatise, Professor of Diseases of Women and Children, and Licentiate of the College of Physicians and Surgeons of the United States University, &c., &c., continues as heretofore to be confidentially and successfully consulted on all forms and variety of

at his old quarters, No 5 Beaver-street, ALBANY, N. Y.

The great success attending the use of Doctor L.'s remedies in secret diseases, and the many remarkable cures daily effected by him in recent as well as old lingering attacks, is conclusive evidence that the well SICK AND UNFORTUNATE can do no better than consult the Doctor, whose whole time is devoted to the exclusive treatment of this much neglected branch of practice.

LOOK AT THIS.

Dr. Lispenard cures recent cases of disease in from three to six days, and chronic or long standing diseases in a very short period of time, without the use of Mercury; without the loss of time, change of diet, or detention from

DAILY EMPLOYMENT.

In Syphilis, Gonorrhœa, Gleet, Strictures, Enlargement of the Testicles and Cords, Bubo, Chancres Pimples and Scaly Eruptions, Sore Throat and Nose, Chancres on the tongue, tender shin bones, and diseases of the skin, and impure blood. Dr. Lispenard's remedies are above all praise, and frequently cure when all others had failed

EVEN TO RELIEVE,

More than 5,000 patients have during the past year experienced the benefit of the Doctor's extraordinary skill in treating secret diseases—among which, disease of the bladder and kidneys have formed a goodly proportion.

YOUNG MEN,

who by indulging in secret habits have injured their health and prostrated their intellectual faculties, and thereby deprived themselves of the pleasure of married life, should consult Dr. Lispenard without a moment's delay. Hundreds have been restored to health, society and friends, under my peculiar mode of treatment, although vast sums of money had been sacrificed without any benefit. My remedy for this disease is pleasant to take, has no offensive smell and

CURES WITHOUT FAIL

☞ Persons so unfortunate as to be diseased, although they may have visited half a dozen Doctors, and had medicine sent them a dozen times with no benefit, would exhibit wisdom by making their case known to that FRIEND OF THE SICK, Dr. Lispenard, who never charges for advice and warrants all his cures. The sick are often at a loss where to apply for relief, AND 'TIS NO WONDER, as hundreds stand ready to plunder the unfortunate victim of PRIVATE DISEASE, or secret habits, without one thought for his life and health. All thus deceived will find a friend, and moderate charges, in consulting the Doctor who USES NO MERCURY and cures every time.

N. B.—Persons from a distance when visiting the city in search of a physician and friend will be fortunate if they succeed in escaping the many dens of imposition, conducted by unprincipled men, destitute of character knowledge or name, who fleece the unfortunate victim of disease of his hard earned money, and his remaining health. Patients who have no acquaintance in the city should make inquiry of some respectable citizen, or the editor or proprietor of any of the city papers, to ascertain who is the most reliable physician to apply to.

FEMALE DISEASES.

Dr. Lispenard, from an experience seldom or never enjoyed by any other medical man, is enable to treat, with every hope of succes, all and every variety of Female Complaints—with safe and pleasant remedies—and has without doubt cured within the past five years more than 3000 females afflicted with diseases of the Bladder, Womb, &c. &c. Ladies afflicted with suppression or stoppage of their monthly turns, will recollect that Dr. Lispenard is still the sole American agent for.

DR. VICHOI'S

FEMALE MONTHLY PILLS.

The unprecedented sale of more than 15,000 boxes of these excellent Pills, and the good results which always follow their use, is conclusive evidence of their utility in stoppages, &c. Caution—Married Ladies in certain delicate situations should not use them—for reasons see directions with each box. Price $1. Sent by mail to all parts of the world.

Married Persons and those about to Marry, should enclose 12½ cents post paid to Dr. Lispenard, and obtain a copy of his Marriage Guide, or Private Treatise, a bewitching little work of nearly 100 pages, illustrated. Every thing that married persons can desire or wish to know, is here explained. Persons who from poverty or sickness have no desire to increase their family, will find necessary instruction in the Marriage Guide. One copy 12½ cents; 5 copies 50 cts; 12 copies $1—mailed free to any part of the world.

N. B.—Patients treated by letter, and medicines sent, with full directions for use, to the writer's address. All communications strictly confidential.

No mercury used in any case, and all cures warranted.

No boys or precocious students allowed: timid persons take notice.

Friends of Dr. L. when recommending patients to our care will recollect our number, 5 Beaver st., three doors from South Broadway.

Hospital open from 7 A. M., to 9 P. M., and on Sundays from 1 to 4 P. M.

No charge for advice, although no medicine may be desired.

Dr. Hunter's Medical Manual and Hand Book for the Afflicted—

Containing an outline of the origin, progress, treatment and cure of every form of disease, contracted by promiscuous sexual intercourse, by self abuse or by sexual excess, with advice for their prevention, written in a familiar style, avoiding all medical technicalities, and everything that would offend the ear of decency, from the result of some twenty years successful practice, exclusively devoted to the cure of diseases of a delicate or private nature.

To which is added, receipts for the cure of the above diseases, and a treatise on the causes, symptoms and cure of the Fever and Ague.

Testimony of the Prof. of Obstetrics in Penn. College, Philadelphia.—"Dr. Hunter's Medical Manual."—The author of this work unlike the majority of those works who advertise to cure the diseases of which it treats, is a graduate of one of the best Colleges in the United States. It affords me pleasure to recommend him to the unfortunate, or to the victim of malpractice, as a successful and experienced practitioner, in whose honor and integrity they may place the greatest confidence.

JOSEPH LONGSHORE M. D.

From A Woodward, M. D., of Penn. University, Philadelphia—It gives me pleasure to add my testimony to the professional ability of the author of the "Medical Manual." Numerous cases of diseases of the Genital Organs, some of them of long standing have come under my notice, in which his skill has been manifest in restoring to perfect health, in some instances where the patient has been considered beyond medical aid. In the treatment of Seminal weakness, or disarrangement of the functions produced by Self-abuse, or Excess of venery, I do not know his superior in the profession. I have been acquainted with the Author some thirty years, and deem it no more than justice to him as well as a kindness to the unfortunate victim of early indiscretion, to recommend him as one, in whose professional skill and integrity they may safely confide themselves. ALFRED WOODWARD, M.D.

"This is, without exception, the most comprehensive and intelligible work published on the class of diseases of which it treats. Avoiding all technical terms, it addresses itself to the reason of its readers. It is free from all objectionable matter, and no parent, however fastidious, can object to placing it in the hands of his sons. The author has devoted many years to the treatment of the various complaints treated of, and 'with too little breath to puff,' and 'too little presumption to impose,' he has offered to the world at the merely nominal price of 25 cents, the fruits of some 20 years most successful practice."—Herald.

"No teacher or parent should be without the knowledge imparted in this invaluable work It would save years of pain, mortification and sorrow to the youth under their charge."—People's Advocate.

A Presbyterian clergyman in Ohio, in writing of "Hunter's Medical Manual," says: "Thousands upon thousands of our youth, by evil example and influence of the passions, have been led into the habit of self-pollution without realizing the sin and fearful consequences upon themselves and their posterity. The constitutions of thousands who are raising families have been enfeebled, if not broken down, and the do not know the cause or the cure. Anything that can be done so to enlighten and influence the public mind as to check, and ultimately to remove this widespread source of human wretchedness, would confer the greatest blessing next to the religion of Jesus Christ, on the present and coming generations. Intemperance (or the use of intoxicating drinks,) though it has slain thousands upon thousands, is not a greater scourge to the human race. Accept my thanks on behalf of the afflicted, and, believe me, your co-worker in the good work you are so actively engaged in."

A single morning space!"

While others, in more mature life—by some imprudence and a slight cold neglected—in the hectic flush—the painful cough.

"The prints of their departing steps appears."

BUT HERE IS HOPE! Mr Wm. Devines, the originator and manufacturer of the Pitch Lozenge, under Providence, was raised to perfect health by the use of these Lozenges alone, after he was pronounced by his physician to be almost dying with consumption.

This fact is generally known in Berkshire County and is the neighborhood talk, and wonder in Lee, and in Great Barrington, Mass.

From Dr. Brown, of Lee, Mass.

This certifies that I have made use of Devines' Compound Pitch Lozenge for cold and cough, and found immediate relief. Therefore I would recommend it to the public as being a safe and sovereign remedy. H. C. BROWN.

OUR CHILDREN:

How Shall we Save Them?

BY T. S. ARTHUR.

CHPTER III.

The words of their guest did not grow silent in the ears of Mr. and Mrs. Greenfield, but were ever repeated to them as by another and more solemn voice. Not, however, until Mr. Greenfield made some effort to break through a habit of long confirmation, did he fully comprehend their import. While he went on in the old way, he was like a vessel gliding along with the current of a downward flowing river. All was smooth and calm. He was scarcely conscious of the progress he made or the force of the stream upon which he was moving so quitely. But, the moment an anchor was cast, there came a rush of waters, and, for the first time, the power of the current was felt.

It seemed but a little thing in the eyes of Mr. Greenfield, when the subject first presented itself to his mind, for him to give up the free indulgence of his appetite for stimulating drinks. But when he made the trial, he discovered, alas! his error. The slumbering giant he had been nourishing for years, awoke within him, and demanded the old supply, and he had not sufficient resolution to refuse the demand. Conscious, however, of danger, where he had, before, feared no evil, Mr. Greenfield endeavored to lay restrictions upon himself—to drink within a certain limit. But after the first few glasses, he forgot his good resolutions, and when he arose from the dinner table, he groped his way as usual, up to his own chamber, and there slept off the effects of his sensual indulgence.

But, when a man like Mr. Greenfield, in whom some virtues and good impulses remain, is at once made sensible that danger lurks in a favorite path, all sense of security and pleasure in that path, though it may still be trod, is forever gone. When, therefore, the fumes of wine and brandy exaled from his brain, and thought became, once more clear, a troubled feeling was left behind. He felt that he was in bondage, and too weak to break the chords that were around him.

The first time that Henry came home from college to spend a vacation, after his parents had been startled from their false security, both saw, with feelings of indescribable pain, that he showed a fondness for eating and drinking, especially the latter beyond what young men of his age usually exibit. A week's observation and reflection increased, rather than diminished their anxiety, which rose to a pitch of anguish on receipt of the following letter by Mr. Greenfield, from the President of the College:—

My Dear Sir: I have observed with regret, that your son exibits a fondness for stimulating drinks beyond what is usual in persons of his age. If I did not think him in danger, I would not awaken your fears by this communication; but, having seen so many promising young men fall by the hands of intemperance and become lost to themselves and society, I deem it but my duty to give you timely warning. I understand that he keeps a case of wine in his room, and uses it daily, with immoderate freedom. Every week, I am told, he joins about a dozen of his fellow students in a convivial party in the town, and usually returns to the college buildings at midnight, in a state little short of intoxication. I have, on two occasions, conversed with him on the subject; but he considered my allusion to his weakness as altogether uncalled for, and met my kind remonstrances with anger. One of our Professors has, also, talked with him, but with no better result. It pains me, my dear ——, to be the medium of such communications; but a regard for the well-being of your son must be my apology.

Yours, with respect, &c.

For a few days Mr. Greenfield kept this communication to himself, but unable, in the bewilderment and distress it occasioned, to decide what steps to take, he placed the letter in the hands of his wife. The shock to Mrs. Greenfield was terrible. For a short time it completely prostrated her in body and mind. The anxiety and alarm shown by Henry on account of the sudden indisposition of his mother, led his father to suppose that a knowledge of the cause might produce the most beneficial result. Under this view, he said to him, in answer to his earnest enquiries regarding his mother's sudden illness—

"The cause, Henry, is with yourself."

"With me!" exclaimed the young man, turning pale.

"Yes, Henry, with you," replied Mr. Greenfield, his voice and countenance reflecting the troubled state of his feelings. "Read that. It will explain all." And he handed to the young man the letter he had received from the President of the College.

Henry read the letter over twice, before he looked up or made a remark. His father's eyes were fixed upon him intently, in order to observe every shade of the effect produced.

"The malignant scoundrel!" at length fell from the young man's lips, as he crushed the letter in his hands. He arose as he spoke, and commenced moving about the floor. His face was flushed, and his eyes shot forth glances of anger.

"Henry, is that letter true?" asked Mr. Greenfield.

"It is not true in the sense he would have it understood. He makes it appear that I am on the high road to ruin."

"You may be, my son," said Mr. Greenfield, calmly, "if the facts stated are true. A case of wine in your room? You are too young for that, Henry."

"I can't see, father, what harm the wine being in my room is going to do. I don't drink any more than I would if it were not there. The President has only made it the plea for a most cruel and uncalled for communication. And to think that mother should have seen it!"

'I do not believe, Henry, that he had any thing in view but your good. The letter bears that upon its face. Your convivial parties in town, and consequent late hours, were wrong. Such things are exceedingly dangerous, and yearly led hundreds into ruinous courses of life.'

'They will never lead me into ruinous courses,' said the young man, who still walked the floor and manifested a good deel of angry excitement.

'Not if you give them up in future.—But, if you continue them, your destruction is certain.'

'Oh, father! Why will you talk so!—Why you will make out of a little thing like this a matter of so much importance!' exclaimed Henry, throwing himself with an air of abandonment into the chair from which he had, a few moments before, arisen.

'It is no light matter, my son.'

'Cannot a young man drink a glass of wine without being in danger? I have always seen wine and brandy on our table at home, and have always been permitted to take them.'

'But it is plain, Henry, from what I have learned, that you now use these articles with a freedom that must inevitably lead to bad consequences.'

'I don't think so, father. I am sure it is not so.'

And to this position the young man firmly adhered; at the same time that he manifested the most bitter resentment towards the President of the College, and did not hesitate to avow it as his intention to call him to an account for what he had done on his return, should he go back to the Institution.

For the distress and prostration of his mother, Henry manifested the liveliest sympathy—but he would not admit, for a moment, that the slightest ground existed for the unhappy effect produced on her mind by the communication which had been received. That was, he averred, a highly exaggerated statement, and dictated by no friendly feelings.

For two or three days Mrs. Greenfield kept her room, and then, looking pale and troubled, she once more resumed her usual place in her family. The effect upon Henry was, not to cause an abandonment of the pleasures of drinking, but to excite a constant feeling of anger towards the President of the College. He never saw his mother that he did not inwardly execrate the person who, by throwing a gleam of light upon his path, had shown to his parents the dangerous course it was taking. As for himself, he believed not in the alleged danger, and could not comprehend why his father and mother should so causelessly distress themselves. His father always used liquors freely, and still continued to do so; and he was not a drunkard. So he reasoned with himself.

Every day, the brandy and wine were upon the table as usual; Mr. Greenfield did not see how he could make a dinner without them. He partook freely, and it was not wonderful that Henry did the same. As for Mrs. Greenfield, the single glass that was filled for her, remained untasted, and could her husband and son have realized her feelings, when she saw the sparkling liquor pass their lips, they would have dashed their glasses to the floor.

It did not escape the observation of Mr. Greenfield, that Henry enjoyed his wine even more highly than he did his food; and that he filled his glass far too often.

'Is it right to place this temptation before him?' was a question that arose, naturally, in the father's mind, and he could not answer it in the affirmative. While he was debating the subject, Mrs. Greenfield said to him—

'I'm afraid we do wrong in placing either wine or brandy on our table, while Henry is at home. What do you think?'

'I don't know,' returned Mr. Greenfiled, in a serious voice. He was not fully prepared to give up his favorite indulgence without an argument in its favor. 'I'm afraid he does drink rather to much.'

'It makes me very unhappy. And he is so unconscious of danger. I tried to speak to him yesterday about it, but he became impatient at my allusion to the subject, and said it was all on account of that letter.—If something is not done to turn him from the way in which he has commenced walking, his ruin is inevitable. Oh! husband, we should stop at no sacrifice in order to save him.'

The thought that this love of drink manifesting itself at so early an age, was hereditary in his child, came flashing over the mind of Mr. Greenfield, and he said, with a despondency of tone that well expressed his feelings—

'What will save him?'

'We know not,' replied his wife; 'but now that we are aware of his danger, let us do all in our power to withdraw him from temptation. So long as he sees you partaking freely, counsel and warning will be useless; for, he will say, if these things do not hurt you, they cannot hurt him.'

'True, true. Though I am not hurt by them, yet they shall be banished from my table.'

A light glanced over the face of Mrs. Greenfield, and she said—

'I hope much for this change.'

More was meant by this than her husband understood.

Accordingly; on the next day, when the family assembled for dinner, neither wine nor brandy was on the table. The first impulse of Henry, who perceived this almost as soon as he sat down, was to remind his father of the omission; but the true reason suggested itself to his mind, he remained silent and observant. Both his father and mother tried to introduce and carry on a cheerful conversation; but he could not join in it, except by a forced word now and then, for the wine bottle was before his imagination, and his thoughts were busy with the supposed reason for its banishment. Neither Mr. Greenfield nor his son, enjoyed the rich and dainty food that was spread with an epicurean hand before them. One thing was lacking—an appetite stimulated by wine. Scarcely half the usual time was passed at the table, and soon after they arose, both left the house.

Henry muttered to himself as he walked along the hall to the street door.

'This is too much! To be treated as if that letter was true in the broadest sense!'

But, he did not reflect, that the very reason why he had little appetite for his dinner, and why he was now leaving the house, proved the truth of the President's inferences and fears. Young as he was, the first barrier placed between his hereditary and acquired taste for stimulating drink, showed the movement of a strong current that was bearing him towards a coast upon which hundreds and thousands had already been shipwrecked.

On leaving the house, Henry went to a fashionable drinking establishment, and seated himself at a table covered with newspapers, ordered a waiter to bring him some brandy-punch. Ten minutes afterwards, on raising his eyes suddenly, he encountered those of his father. Mr. Greenfield was sitting in an alcove, before a table, on which was a bottle of wine. A draft of air had blown aside the curtain that hid him from general observation, and on looking up, he saw his son with an empty glass beside him and Henry saw his father indulging in the pleasures of which both had been deprived at dinner. Another movement, and the curtain fluttered back to its place, and the elder Mr. Greenfield was alone again.—Neither the father nor son felt very pleasant at this mutual discovery. The former had taken about a fourth of his bottle of wine. When, a quarter of an hour afterwards, he came slowly and half stealthily from his hiding place, he left behind him more than half the bottle he had hoped to enjoy. Henry was gone.

The young man was not home at tea-time; and did not come in until towards ten o'clock, when, instead of joining his parents in the family sitting room, he went direct to his chamber. It would not have made their sleep any sweeter had they seen him.

CHAPTER IV.

Henry Greenfield did not return to College. He expressed his unwillingness to meet the President again, after what had occurred, and his parents were equally unwilling, under the circumstances, to have him go back, and remain for a year longer removed from the sphere of their observation and influence. The mental loss to the young man they deeply deplored; but that was a small consideration placed against the moral injury he was likely to sustain among his old associations. The design had always been to educate Henry for a merchant; and, accordingly, on leaving college, he entered his father's counting room, where, by his quickness, intelligence, and the interest he took in business, he inspired the liveliest hopes for the future. But ever these hopes hung over, a threatening cloud.

The meeting of Henry and his father in the refectory, was, to the latter, a most painful and mortifying incident; but it produced a salutary change, for it awoke a train of reflections that ended in this pointed question—

"If this habit is so strong in transmit to my child an inordinate desire for stimulating drinks, am I not also in danger?"

Mr. Greenfield could not answer in the negative. He was in danger, and he felt it.

"For my own sake and for the sake of my boy," he said, "I must break through this habit."

This, he clearly understood to be no easy matter for, in the temporary opposition already made, he had discovered that he was grasped in the hands of a giant, and that freedom would only come as the result of a resistant force, almost superhuman. But, once fully sensible of his position, and clearly alive to the danger of his son, he resolved upon a desperate struggle for liberty. And, as he had a strong will, strengthened by a natural pride of consistency, he was successful. Wine nor brandy never came back to his table—ward never again seen in his house. Nor did he, under any pretence, use them.

Thus free himself, he could, with more consistency and hope of success, seek to work out the freedom of his son. But, alas! he found it utterly impossible to awaken in the mind of Henry a sense of danger. When he sought to induce him not to drink any intoxicating liquor, the young man would answer—

"I am conscious of no danger, father. I do not drink more freely than other young men. You seem to imagine that I have really become intemperate."

"Not intemperate, Henry; but in danger of becoming so; and my warning is meant to be timely. I know, far better than it is possible for you to know, the peril you are in. Believe me, it is great."

"Did you not use these things at my age, father?"

"Yes; I own that I did."

"And you have used them ever since. But you have never become their slave."

Mr. Greenfied could not confess his weakness to his son; neither could he tell him the whole truth touching the real ground of danger. That would have been too humilliating.

"I have given up their use entirely," was the simple reply.

"Not because you think it wrong for you to drink wine or strong liquors, but in the hope that I would follow your example. I am sorry for this, father. You deprive yourself of a stimulant necessary at your age, as well as from long habit; without influencing me in the least, because I see no reason for doing what you propose."

"No, Henry. It is not necessary for me. I am better without it. I feel satisfied of this every day. Heaven knows I wish I had never tasted any beverage stronger than water!"

The reader can imagine how sincerely these last words were uttered.

But, argument and persuasion were alike useless. Henry's appetite was too deeply seated in the very substance of his life. He loved the taste of liquor too well to think of giving it up. But, with this love, which was not so freely indulged after his return to New-York as it had been during the last year he spent at college, was a total unconsciousness of danger, notwithstanding the alarm sounded by his parents. Other young men, with whom he associated, drank as occasion offered; wine flowed like water in many companies into which he was thrown; yet no one thought himself in the way to intemperance. No, it was only a chimera conjured up by his parents, in consequence of the letter they had received from the President of the College!

The banishment of all intoxicating drinks from the table of Mr. Greenfield, and their entire expulsion from his house, had the effect to deceive him in regard to the extent to which they were used by his son, who was regularly at his post in the counting-room, and active in the discharge of all the duties that devolved upon him in the business. It was in the evenings that Henry indulged himself most freely. But a long time did not go by before the effects of these evening indulgences were visible to the mother's anxiously observing eyes, in the changed expression of his face. She could do nothing, however, but look on, and wait with trembling for the result. Fully alive to his real danger, yet without the power to ward it off, her daily life was of intense anxiety and fear.

As time moved on, it seemed to Mr. and Mrs. Greenfield, that the evil so dreaded was delayed, or, indeed, might not visit them. Two or three years had gone by, and yet no very alarming symptoms were manifested.

"It may be," said the mother, one day, "that the stand we have taken towards Henry has saved him."

"I have hoped as much," returned Mr. Greenfield; "yet I tremble while I hope. Until he cut himself entirely from indulgence in drink, there is great danger."

"A year or two may give his reason more control."

"Or confirm an overmastering evil habit."

"Let us hope for the best," said the mother, while mild star rising into sense degree of confidence. "There was a time when my heart was sick with fear. I do not feel so now. Something tells me that my son will not fall into the gulf that seemed opening at his feet."

Mr. Greenfield saw more than did the mother, for his observation was wider in circumstance, and therefore, more in confidence But he did not seek to throw a cloud over her feelings.

On that very evening Henry was absent at tea-time, and to the mother's enquiries, Mr. Greenfield said but little; though her train of reflections evidently made him even more pointed question—

"Where is Henry?"

"He went out this afternoon?" asked Mrs Greenfield, after they had retired from the tea-table.

"Yes, until about five o'clock."

"Where did he go then?"

"Two young men called to see him, and he went away with them."

"Who were they?"

"I don't know."

"Did you ever see them before?"

"Yes. They called to see him last week."

No more was said. Mrs Greenfield sat down to read, and Mrs. Greenfield and her daughter Florence, now a young lady, went up stairs and spent the evening in some light employment. Ten o'clock at length came, and Florence retiring to her own chamber, Mrs. Greenfield came down to the sitting-room.

"Has Henry come yet?" she asked.

"No—not yet," replied her husband. "It is more than probable that he has gone to the opera, and will not be home before eleven o'clock. He goes frequently, you know."

"Yes. But he does not take Florence with him as often as he should. Indeed, he shows her very few attentions of this kind. His neglect of her pains me."

"She is attached to him."

"Oh yes! Tenderly. She would do almost any thing to gratify him. I wish he were equally considerate of her.

For half an hour they continued to converse about the young man, when the street door bell was rung violently. Without waiting for a servant to answer the summons, Mr. Greenfield stepped quickly into the hall, and, going to the door, opened it. As he did so, the body of a man fell in heavily against him, and rolled upon the floor. Mrs. Greenfield had followed her husband, for there was a misgiving at her heart. As the man struck the floor, the light of the halll lamp fell on his face, and showed the flushed and disfigured countenance of Henry Greenfield!

A cry of pain was uttered by the mother as she clasped her hands together and sprang forward. The moment Mr. Greenfield understood that it was his son, in a state of drunken insensibility, he returned to the door, which yet stood partly open. But no one was there. Those who had brought him home had hastily retired.

But few can realize what was suffered during that almost sleepless night by the father and mother of the unhappy young man.—From the lips of Mrs. Greenfield, the cup, out of which she had begun to sip a draught of hope, was dashed to the ground; and she felt, in the keenness of her despair, as if the very life would fail in her heart. But, to the sterner grief of Mr. Greenfield was added a weight of self reproaches that almost madened him at times. If his son were lost, it would be, he felt, in consequence of his own sensual indulgence, whereby he had transmitted a life tainted by a vicious inclination. He had cursed his son with legacy of evil instead of good. The words of the old man, who had been his guest, came back with a distinctness so clear that it seemed as if he were but just uttering them. Once he tried to negate the whole theory advanced; and for a short time, argued strongly against it as absurd. But his own perceptions of truth swept away the arguments he advanced; for they were light as gossamer.

The dawn found both weary with thought and sorrow. Nature then gave way, and they sunk into a brief, but troubled sleep. All except Henry met at the breakfast-table, half an hour later than usual.

"What keeps Henry?" asked Florence, looking earnestly first at her father and then at her mother, wondering as she did so why their faces wore so troubled an aspect.

Mrs. Greenfield turned to the waiter, and directed him to go and call Henry. When the waiter came down, he said that the young man did not feel very well, and wished a cup of coffee sent up to him. This was done. The meal was finished in silence, and Mr. Greenfield went off to his store.

Henry made his appearance about twelve o'clock, with all the evidences of his evening's debauch about him. Mr. Greenfield felt it to be his duty to allude to the matter; but the allusion was met on the part of his son in such an impatient spirit, that his lips trembled on the words of remonstance he was uttering, and then became silent.

In the afternoon the young man went away again and was absent at tea-time. It was after twelve o'clock when he came home; and he was so much intoxicated that he could just stagger up to his room, where he threw himself upon the bed, and remained all night without removing his clothes. Daylight found him sober, both physically and mentally. He had been deeply mortified in consequence of what had occurred on the evening before the last and although signs of impatience were manifested when his father alluded to the subject, in his shame and repentance he had resolved never again to let his appetite lead him astray from sobriety. How little force there was in this resolution, became sadly apparent even to his mind; for scarcely twenty-four hours elapsed, ere he had again fallen. The groan that issued from his lips, as he arose and clasped his hands tightly against his throbbing temples, attested the anguish of his spirit.

"To degrade and debase myself in this way!" he murmured. 'Oh! it maddens me to think of it. Others can enjoy a glass of wine without running into excess. But the moment I put the generous draught to my lips, a feverish, delightful excitement runs through my veins, tempting me to indulgence, until I pass the bounds of moderation. Why is this so? I have a vigorous constitution—and, I believe, a strong mind. I do not understand it.'

And, with his hands still bound upon his temples, he sat questioning himself as to his weakness; but, without obtaining the true answer. That this weakness was constitutional, or derived by inheritance—an heirloom of evil—was a truth beyond the ability of his mind to conceive, for there was nothing to lead him to such a conclusion. That his father had indulged a habit of drinking to excess, was something he did not know—something of which he had not dreamed. And as to the doctrine of hereditary transmissions, he had never heard of it; or, if it had chanced to gleam across his mind in any of his miscellaneous readings, it had never presented itself to him in the real light as a truth of most vital and practical importance. In a word he did not know that he was in more imminent danger than many others because of a natural inclination to over-indulgence derived from his father. Had this truth been then made clear to his mind, it might have saved him. But who was there, beside his father and mother, that understood his real danger? Who but they knew the painful secret? And their lips were sealed. The father could not tell his shame, and the mother's heart shrunk from uncovering it before her child. He was walking, therefore, in a perilous way, yet all unconscious of impending evil.

At breakfast time, Henry Greenfield met the family as usual. He had little appetite for food, but he forced himself to eat in order not to attract more observation than he felt was already directed towards him.

On leaving the house, he went to a noted drinking establishment, and called for brandy and water. This act did not arise from a purpose of the mind, but was the result of mere inclination; or, more properly speaking, a desire for the stimulant he had accustomed himself to take. This brought back his already weakened nerves to their lost tension, and he felt, in consequence, much better, and in a condition to attend to business as usual.

Having lost the control of himself two evenings in succession, Henry was more upon his guard when he went into drinking company; and months elapsed before he again fell into the disgraceful condition of absolute drunkenness. Yet, he indulged, every day, freely, thus giving strength to his natural appetite, and weakening the force of his good resolutions.

Neither Mr. nor Mrs. Greenfield had said a word of the instant conclusion to which their minds had come, from the position laid down by the old friend to whom we have referred. The former believed his wife unconscious of danger to Henry from this cause; and she with natural delicacy of one bearing her relation, avoided, with the most scrupulous care, the utterance of a word which would lead her husband to imagine that she believed their son in peril from hereditary taint. The consequence was, that the fear of each was locked in its own bosom, and was more constantly present to the mind, because it was unuttered.

How deep was their anxiety, few can imagine; for a few have realized, so fully as they did, the perilous way their child was treading. They saw him progressing, step by step; and yet, could not sound in his ears an adequate warning. Gradually, and to the eyes of his father and mother, apparently, the arms of the foul demon of intemperance were clasped more and more tightly around him. In his twenty-fifth year, they saw, if others did not, most appalling indications of a speedy breaking away of all the barriers of restraint. Scarcely a week elapsed that he did not come home in a state little removed from drunken insensibility.

But there occurred, about this time, a change that filled the hearts of Mr. and Mrs. Greenfield with a trembling hope.—Henry became enamored of a beautiful young lady, whose character was lovely as her person; and, for her society, he forsook, almost entirely, the company of young men with whom he had led a gay life of pleasure and dissipation. He seemed, too, to have become aware of his danger, for it was evident that he drank far less freely than before. His face lost, to some extent its florid appearance, and his complexion became clearer, and his countenance more elevated.

Agnes Loring, the young lady whose beauty had captivated Henry Greenfield, felt her breast warm with a sentiment kindred to that with which his own was inspired. She received his advances with favor, and when he offered his hand was prepared to accept it.

From the proposed union, the parents of Henry hoped much; and yet they looked forward to the new relation he was to assume with many misgivings of heart, and much fear and trembling.

'A member of the last Connecticut legislature, from one of the rural districts not a hundred miles from New London, who was less remarkable for the profundity of his knowledge than for the overweening confidence with which he advanced his opinions upon any and all subjects, was once asked by a fellow-member of a somewhat quizzical turn of mind, what he deemed the proper punishment for arson. 'Well,' said he with an air of profound deliberation, 'I have thought on that subject a good deal, and have come to the conclusion that he should pay a fine of five hundred dollars and marry the girl!'

Experiments with Charcoal.

We have been favored with the following extract from the forthcoming Report of the Survey of Essex County, by W. C. WATSON, Esq., which will be read with interest:

Enormous masses of dust or debris of the charcoal, accumulate about the iron works of the county, and create incumbrances and deformities. It has been annually spread in vast quantities along the highways, constituting an admirable material for roads. An incalculable amount has been cast into the streams. The attention of men of observation and sagacity has been, within a few years, drawn to the use of this ingredient as a fertilizer. Experience has established its exceeding utility. In the midst of the disastrous drouth of last summer, while crossing a field in Moriah, occupied by Mr. RICHMOND, in pursuit of some Durham cattle I wished to examine, I observed a lot with its surface deeply and singularly blackened. Upon inspection I found it thickly strewn with pulverized charcoal. The field presented a rich verdure, strongly contrasting with the parched and blighted aspect of the ajacent country.

The following detail of this experiment, supplied at my request, attests the value of this material as a fertilizing principle. "The soil is loamy. The charcoal was applied on four acres of dry land, and one acre of moist soil, by top dressing. The amount used was about one thousand bushels to the acre, spread on so as to make the surface look black, but not to incumber or obstruct vegetation. It was applied in September and October, 1850, at an expense by contract, of forty dollars. It was procured at a furnace, from a mass of pulverised charcoal left as useless, and was drawn one mile and a half. The effect was immediate. The grass freshened, and continued green and luxuriant after the surrounding fields were blackened by the early frosts. Although the last season had been so unfavorable for vegetation, Mr. Richmond realized one-third more hay than the ordinary yield of hay, and sufficient to repay the whole outlay. He thinks that he cut nearly double the quantity of grass upon this lot, that he did upon any similar meadow on his farm, and that the quantity of the hay is improved." *

The Hon. J. S. WHALLON has made the most decisive and valuable experiments on this subject. His operations were extended through several seasons, and were observed with great intelligence and discrimination. The result amply sustains the conclusion derived from the preceeding experiment. I may add that a similar application has been made under Mr. WHALLON'S supervison, upon another tract in Elizabethtown on a soil of lighter texture and with entire success. In this instance the charcoal was applied chiefly to a crop of oats. The action of this substance seems to be effected by its physical combinations and its chemical affinities. It attracts the rays of the sun and unites with the fertilizing gasses of the atmosphere; it absorbs moisture, and combines as a new constituent in the formation of the soil. Almost imperishable, it must remain indefinitely, with no exhaustion of its properties, a perpetual invigorating agent in the earth.

The succeeding extract from a communication of Mr. WHALLON, elucidates his experiments and views on this very important subject: "I began the use of it in the year of 1846, and first employed it as a top-dressing on a strong clay soil, which was plowed in the fall of 1845. I spread on about fifteen wagon loads of the dust to the acre, after the wheat had been sowed and harrowed one way. I was surprised to find my crop a heavy one, compared with my neighbor's, raised on the same kind of land. The wheat was of better quality and yielded four or five bushels extra to the acre. I have since used it on similar land, sometimes mixed with barn-yard manure, and sometimes alone, but always as a top-dressing, usually on land seeded for meadow. The results were always the most favorable. I find my land, thus seeded, produces more than an average crop of hay and always of the finest quality.

"I have also used the dust on loamy and interval land, with the potato crop. During the series of years in which the rot almost ruined the potato crop, I scarcely lost any potatoes from that cause, and supposed it was owing to the coal dust I used. My manner has been to drop the seed and cover it with a small shovel-full of the dust, and then cover with earth. In this way I have used all the coal dust I have been able to save from the coal consumed in a forge of five fires, and which amounts to about 250 loads per year."

In the colder regions of the Adirondacs, charcoal dust has been used with great advantage. The note of Mr. Ralph presents the experiment in the following language: "As a top-dressing for meadows, charcoal dust and the accumulation of ashes and burnt earth left on old charcoal pit bottoms have been used here with remarkable results, and I judge from the trials which have been made, that this application has added at least one third to the hay crop, where it has been used. It was remarked during the past very dry season, when vegetation was almost burnt up by the long continued drouth, that those fields which had been dressed with this substance were easily distinguished by the rich green color of their herbage."—Country Gentleman.

LET HER RIP.—This is a very meaning, favorite American expression. Some fellow, not having the fear of the wrath to come before his eyes, and not many conscientious scruples about shooting a Mexican, fired some of his long rifle shots across the Rio Grande, near Matamoras whereupon General Alvalos, then in command of that post wrote to Judge Mc Lane of Brownsville, that if any more such shots were fired, he would bombard the town. Whereupon the Judge addressed him in answer the following "let her rip" note:

"BROWNSVILLE, Jan. 11, 1853.

"DEAR GENERAL: We have received your appreciated note of this date.

Whig State Convention.

In publishing the call for the assemblage of this body it is proper to make a few remarks. In doing so, we shall state only what we believe the whigs of this section of the state will endorse—what we think they expect—and what they will cordially respond to. We premise that there is a goodly feeling among whigs, the bitterness and disappointments of the past are passing away, or at least are forgotten for the present, there is an eagerness for the coming fight, a disposition 'never to give up the ship.' One old veteran who has been on duty for half a century said to us the other day, that after the defeat of last fall he had determined to retire, but such had been the utter faithlessness of Pierce, and such the abominations of the late legislature, he panted once more for the battle, and he believed God would give us the victory.' Amen to that. Again, the recent outbreak among the leading journals of the State, has not disturbed the great body of the party in the least. They are considered as having descended to questions of merely a personal character, and the mass of the party are unaffected—totally so, and in the coming contest will disregard, and override them, and those who take part in them too if they dont get out of the way. So much for this branch of our remarks.—Now for the action of the state convention.

1. The very best men should be selected—men of ability and character, the very mention of whose names will give strength to the ticket, and will be a guaranty of reform in state legislation, and the most immediate prosecution of the canal enlargement.

They should be men above the influences of factions, or cliques, who will look only for the welfare of the state, and the success of the party. 'Stripe,' or 'faction' should not be known; save to overlook mere 'politicians,' demagogues, and members of this or that clique. To illustrate our views by names, we should say, take such a man as Washington Hunt for comptroller. He needs no eulogy at our hands,—his name and fame are as familiar to whigs as household words. Or Genl. Ross of Essex for the same or any other office. Altho' a Silver Grey of the most decided character, Essex Co. would give him 1200 majority for any office he would consent to take. This is because all have the most unbounded confidence in his integrity. Whigs know that tho' a Silver Grey, he is one of those candid, discreet, honorable men who in his action would be only a whig, recognizing no distinctions in the party. So much for men.

2. Questions which have heretofore divided the party should not be introduced into the convention. Bygones should be bygones. The Baltimore Platform should no more be made a bone of contention than the justice of the Mexican War, or the policy of Henry Clay's tariff compromise, nor the fugitive slave law, any more than the Missouri compromise. Neither should the course of Gov. Seward, or Mr. Fillmore be called up for approval. The opinion of a single individual is not to be changed by resolutions. Their fame is not to be thus affected. The formality of a resolution on either of these subjects is not worth the ink and paper it would cost, to either, but its consequences would be the disruption of the party. There is a time for all things. The time for resolutions on these subjects is not now. Let whigs continue to enjoy the freedom of private judgement, and the freedom of speech for a while longer.

But, 3.1 and last. Whigs agree in the great and paramount importance of the immediate enlargement of the canals, and that the country, and the state were never cursed, with such imbecile, corrupt, mongrel administrations as the present. Let the Platform and the watchwords be, 'THE CANALS AND REFORM' only, and victory will be ours.

ELIZABETHTOWN, N. Y.
Aug. 27th, 1853.

DEAR SIR:—The Essex County Agricultural Fair is to be held at this place on the 15th & 16th days of September next. It is earnestly hoped that the attendance will be such as to enhance the proposed benefits to the citizens of the county, from the Agricultural Fair; and the officers of the Society hereby respectfully solicit your countenance and presence.

Resp'y Yours, &c.
G. S. Nicholson, Sec'y.

We publish the above for the purpose of a few remarks: In 1851 there was no press at Elizabethtown, and the printing for the Essex Co. Ag. So, was ordered to be given to the lowest bidder, and it was done less than cost. In 1852 there was a press at that place. We asked the executive committee in person and by letter to give us a chance to bid, or cast lots for the printing as in 1851. We were unequivocally promised by the then Secretary that the prices of the several presses should be taken. No such thing was ever done, but the executive committee residing at Elizabethtown gave the printing to their own press because they had power.

We then asked that in 1853 they should extend their favors to us, as they had done to the Post in 1852. To this no attention was paid whatever, save to laugh, at our credulity, and the printing was again given to their own press.

We are now asked to give the Fair our "countenance and presence." All who have watched the columns of the several papers in this county are aware that we have kept this Society before the people more than all the other papers together, and we intend to do so in future. We are not swayed by their treatment of us, but want all to understand that we shall not be imposed upon in silence, and the members of the Society to consider whether their organization is to be run for the benefit of a few or not. We ask and demand fair play and equal rights.

"Recognizing no distinctions, and espousing no faction in the Democratic party—regarding all who stand upon the common platform as disciples of a common faith, and repudiating the narrow and proscriptive bigotry of sect—in his just and impartial arrangement he has embraced all who are honestly attached to the principles of which he is the chosen representative and champion."

Such is the policy of Pierce as foreshadowed by the Washington Union. Acting upon this sentiment the drooping spirits of the Secessionists have been revived and partizans of that faction have been placed in positions of the greatest honor and trust, thus keeping alive, and giving strength to the avowed enemies of the Union. Nay, so far has this policy been carried, that the early friends of Union, who first met and vanquished the traitors whom Pierce hugs to his bosom, have been made to stand back. Lacking ability to originate measures, and the courage to avow them when suggested, he occupies the pitiful position of begging support from factions with public plunder. O, shame! Shades of Jackson forgive.

The Past and Future of Political Parties.

The past has been one of frequent changes, disruptions, and alliances. The future is not likely to be different. Indeed, the present future seems to indicate new arrangements. In the south union whigs and union democrats are hand and glove. In Maine, the democrats of nearly every county in the state have presented two tickets. The result must be a fusion of whigs and one of those factions. In this state the whigs and hunkers are exactly agreed on the canal question and they are rapidly approaching on national affairs.—Should there be an organized opposition to Pierce, as according to present appearances there will be, it requires no great stretch of fancy to perceive that the whigs and that organization will unite. It would be the conservative party, and whether as whig, or democratic, it would matter not. It would be the successful party too in 1856. The Hunkers have the talent of that party, and as managers they are unequalled.—As wholly as we are charged to be, we should have no hesitation to training in the ranks of such a party.

"EVERY DAY BRINGS SOMETHING NEW."—We have just received a lot of new job type from New York. We want our friends to be assured that we are prepared for any kind of job that will be [illegible]

New York & the Crystal Palace.

We shall not enter into any description of the Crystal Palace, for the simple reason that we don't know anything about it, nor of the City of N. Y., because it is so immense we do not know where to begin, nor where to leave off. We wish only to offer a little advice to our readers, more particularly to that portion who desire to see the city and the Palace, and being able to do so, are yet compelled to count the cost. To such we say, the Palace and its contents are alone worth a visit, but time should also be taken to view the city, its public buildings, the numerous institutions in and about the city, the wealth and poverty, the glory and shame of the great metropolis. To do this will take a little time, so don't go in a hurry. It will cost something too, so don't lay out all you can afford in new clothes before you leave home. Don't be afraid to wear plain, cheap garments. It is a mistake to suppose that because you are going to the city you must "dress up." Those who dress in the city are either blacklegs, numbskulls, or fops, and unworthy of notice. The real wealth and worth of the city dress plainly, and will treat you, not according to your dress, but according to your behaviour. The last time we went down we wore our every day suit, and never felt more comfortable, and never were better treated.

Dont be too proud to wear coarse boots, with heavy soles. You will thus save sore feet from walking on the side-walks, and you will be surprised to find that not one will even look at your feet! You will soon find that you are as unnoticed and unknown in the city as in the dense forests of the Adirondacs.

Again, don't be afraid to put up at a good, and respectable, but cheap Hotel. Keep away from mock auctions, drinking saloons, and all wicked places! If you wish to stroll, have a competent and reliable guide. Mind your own business, avoid strangers who wish to be familiar, and our word for it, you will have no trouble, you will see and hear a vast deal that will be new and useful, and you will never regret your excursion.

Lastly, there is no hurry. The goods in the Palace are not all distributed yet. The city is overrun with strangers and will be for two months to come. It is no matter if you don't go till November, and you will find it warm enough in the city then.

—"Many enemies, know not
Why they are so; but like the village curs,
Bark when their fellows do."

How true that is. It has an illustration in every neighborhood. The natural enmity of the heart inclines the ear to injurious reports, and one unbridled tongue, or a single malicious and unscrupulous foe may poison the minds of many against an innocent, high-minded, noble and virtuous individual. Many, without stopping to investigate evil reports, and perhaps but too willing to have them true—their prejudices pre-engaged by their associations, profess to believe, and repeat the grossest falsehoods, seemingly indifferent to their truth or falsity. How true it is that, let but one of a little coterie start a bit of scandal, and at once the whole circle blindly spread the tale true or false, it matters not. If one takes an enmity, all at once share in the dislike. Let one but indulge in suspicions and the whole squad are ready to swear to their truth. It is said that men are but children of a larger growth. So far as toys, likes and dislikes, joys and sorrows are concerned, this is essentially true. But in the propagation of scandal, in traducing the virtuous, in villifying those who never injured them, in the wilful, malicious, wholesale destruction of character, children are utterly out of the question. To those who regard character this is a question of seriousness. We say to these and to all, give no heed to scandal—refuse to hear it—rebuke the retailer—set your face against such a person, as against a demon, or a wild beast. In this way, and this way only, can the evil be cured.

DEAR SIR:—In reply to your note in relation to articles of Iron manufacture from your region, please publish a notice that, these articles will be received and examined carefully by the committee appointed on "Discretionary Premiums on metal composition," and that every proper notice will be given them, and such awards as they may be deserving will be conferred.

Communications.

DEAR COZ:—A friend, who fought at the "Wind Mill" for Canadian Liberty, was telling me the other day a few anecdotes of the actors in that affair, a couple of which I take this occasion to send you, knowing that you will appreciate them.

There was engaged in that contest a man by the name of Winger, an elderly man, in fact the oldest in the company—he was very pious, and was constantly engaged in religious exercises and in prayer:—it happened that he was praying with more than usual energy, in one of the lower rooms of the stone tavern,—then held by the patriots, which, was built of round cobble stone, when a ball from the only piece of heavy ordinance which the British had, tore through the apartment leaving in its progress a large hole in the outer wall.—Winger, stopped his devotions for a moment, opened one of his eyes, took a squint at the impromtu port hole, satisfied by the look, he sprang up from his knees, without saying amen, and seizing a heavy table he dragged it beneath the breach, mounted and looked out for a moment upon the hostile ranks then turning said to his Comrades "Boys they have fixed this just right; hand me that rifle!" and until the falling building compelled them to flee to the 'Windmill' he continued steadily to fire upon the enemy.

You are aware that when the party crossed to the British side a couple of large schooners conveyed the ill fated members of the enterprize.

Among the prisoners taken, when the garrison was starved out of the 'Windmill' was a fellow that went by the name of Hy Loop. Hy was about nineteen years of age, chewed tobacco and stood on parade about six feet four inches in his cowhides; but at other times he was about five feet nine. Hy had accustomed himself to carry his head on a level with his companions, and of course, as his legs grew in length they compelled his back to take the form of a bow, he enlisted in the expedition, partly, because they told him there would be some fun; but principally, because at that time 'he was not hired out.' After laying in prison over night each of the prisoners were called up and interrogated by a government officer as to their nativity, how they came engaged in the expedition &c., and their answers were taken down for the purpose of being used against them upon their trial. The reason of the examination began to be smoked by the prisoners, when it came Hy's turn to pass the ordeal. 'Well sir' said the officer looking sternly on Hy's countenance, to which the fatigues of the fight and 'want of provender' had not added charms and down the sides of which the tobacco juce was trickling, 'well sir, where were you born?' 'At hum I guess' said Hy with a steady countenance as though he had fully enlightened the querist on that point. The spectators tittered but the officer went on without heeding it. 'How came you at the Windmill?' 'How come I at the windmill' said Hy repeating the question. 'Yes sir' said the officer 'How came you at the Windmill,' 'Wal,' said Hy straightening the bow of his back and standing his entire length while he ejected from his mouth a huge quid whose day of usefulness was over, 'wal, du you really want to know?' 'Yes sir' said the officer. 'Wal then I'll tell you. They brought me there in the skuners'

The fact is that our regular army is too small; it is difficult to talk of it—we hardly know how, to begin, to discuss the various propositions that have, form time to time, been made relative to its strength. Of its character and merits we can speak with infinite delight; of its importance to our country in time of peace as well as in time of war, we could expatiate at length; and yet, like the Navy, it is entirely inadequate to the exigencies of the country, in consequence of its slender numerical strength. We hope the present Chief Magistrate of the United States will call attention most pointedly to the actual necessity of augmenting both branches of the service.—[United Service Journal.

The United Service Journal is a useful paper to those belonging to the military, as they will learn from it much of military etiquet of the drill &c. which cannot be found in common books of tactics. The "army" is not "too small," but too large already in our opinion. Its present size is only a plea for augmentation. We should depend upon the militia for all purposes save for the science of war and soldiers sufficient to take care of the public property. Such a thing as a "standing army" ought not to be known in this country. Hence, we most earnestly hope the "present chief Magistrate of the U. S." will not recommend an increase of the Army. Of the Navy we have no fears, and this branch of the service we hope will receive his favorable, nay, his most pointed notice. A 'standing army' is a thing to be feared, and shunned, and in no country more than in a Republic, and at no time in our own, more than at the present.

Communications.

DEAR COZ:—A friend, who fought at the "Wind Mill" for Canadian Liberty, was telling me the other day a few anecdotes of the actors in that affair, a couple of which I take this occasion to send you, knowing that you will appreciate them.

There was engaged in that contest a man by the name of Winger, an elderly man, in fact the oldest in the company—he was very pious, and was constantly engaged in religious exercises and in prayer:—it happened that he was praying with more than usual energy, in one of the lower rooms of the stone tavern,—then held by the patriots, which, was built of round cobble stone, when a ball from the only piece of heavy ordinance which the British had, tore through the apartment leaving in its progress a large hole in the outer wall.—Winger, stopped his devotions for a moment, opened one of his eyes, took a squint at the impromtu port hole, satisfied by the look, he sprang up from his knees, without saying amen, and seizing a heavy table he dragged it beneath the breach, mounted and looked out for a moment upon the hostile ranks then turning said to his Comrades "Boys they have fixed this just right; hand me that rifle!" and until the falling building compelled them to flee to the 'Windmill' he continued steadily to fire upon the enemy.

You are aware that when the party crossed to the British side a couple of large schooners conveyed the ill fated members of the enterprize.

Among the prisoners taken, when the garrison was starved out of the 'Windmill' was a fellow that went by the name of Hy Loop. "Wreaths of sympathy's soft dews,
Or smiles of kindness in another's heart,
The Tree of Life shall feed its palace diffusive,
Their healing fragrance through each vital part.

New Advertisements.

We desire to call the attention to the farm and tavern stand of Jacob Tappan of Moriah offered for sale in another column. It is a fine property—all that the advertisement represents it and more—and the success which Mr. Tappan has met with is a good guaranty to any individual of some capital and of business habits. The opening is accidental, owing to Mr. Tappan's health, and one which does not often occur. We might state about the amount of the purchase money, and the sum required down, but it will be better to enquire of Mr. Tappan. Suffice it to say say, that the opening is a rare one.

New Firm and New Goods.—Owing to our ill health we have omitted to notice the firm of Prescott and Seo, Jewellers &c.—We understand they will offer increased inducements for trade in a larger assortment of goods than usual, and that they will crowd work confided to their care with more diligence than ever. They have both capital and ability. Success attend them.

JOHN H. MOORE, formerly of Ticonderoga, is in the office of the N. Y. & Erie R. R., 193 Broadway, N. Y., looking younger, more healthy and happier than we ever saw him before. We learned from him that that Road had done a business of $400,000 during the last month. He kindly offered us a Free Pass if we would like to ride over and view this immense track. At some future time we may hope to accept his kind offer.

A subscribor writing us from Beloit, Wis. says: "Crops are remarkably good—prices are well sustained—and real estate is rapidly on the advance. We expect to see the iron horse puffing into our village by the first of October, when things will look up with us. I do believe we have the best farming country in the world, all things considered." We will be obliged to our friend to write again.

THANKS.—While in Saratoga last week, we had the pleasure to make the acquaintance of the Editor of the Saratoga Whig, and are under obligations to him for an agreeable walk to Congress Spring, through the delightful grounds adjoining, to the Cemetery, &c., and for many interesting incidents which the locality called to mind. SHANGHAE EGGS.—H. H. Grandy, Esqr., of this village, sent to our office the other day an egg laid by one of his Shanghaes, with a request to measure and weigh, and then eat,—We have done both. At His Old Stand.—F. E. Shandrew so long in the boot and shoe store for a short time lately owned by Reynolds and Tufft, has again become the owner, and is once more at his old post. Our opinion of Shandrew remains unchanged. All right.

Washington Gossip.

Special Dispatch to the N. Y. Tribune.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 4, 1853.

The National Wing of the Democracy are greatly incensed because of the appointment of Ezrah L. Stephens, an abolitionist, and devoted friend of Giddings, to a clerkship in the Indian bureau.

It is rumored that Mr. Gordon, the Webster Whig Postmaster, of Boston, will soon have leave to retire to private life.

General Pierce was elected President, but he is not dead yet. The Webster Whigs may yet have a chance to return to him some favors and compliments. As for the National Wing of the democracy being "incensed," that is not so—they got over that long ago. They know that they have got a traitor for President, a revengeful old fogy for Secretary of State, a self-conceited, stiffed-necked old ... for Treasurer, a treacherous, deceitful, sneaking, undermining free soiler for Secretary of the Interior, a fool for a Postmaster General, a ninny for Secretary of the navy, a cunning, shrewd secessionist for Secretary of War, and an ambitious, determined Attorney General. Against this crew, the National Democrats cannot be any more incensed than they are, and the appointment of a bosom friend of Mr. Giddings's, or Giddings himself, to office, would not disappoint them.—Day Book.

PUSH.—Push along. Push earnestly. It's the way your sound and hearty mortals do. And you can't do without it. The world is so made, society so constructed, that it is a law of necessity that you must push. That is, if you would be thought something and somebody.

Push along. Push a strong push and perpetual push. All see the power in it; See how it gains, accumulates, whether of wisdom or wealth. We never knew a man who was a right smart pusher who finally did not become rich, respectable, wise and useful. The fact is you are morally sure to become so if you push—push like real live, determined up and down men.

If things look dark, push the harder, sunshine and blue sky are just beyond. If you are entangled, push—if your heart grows feeble, push. You'll come out victorious. Never fear.

THE MARRIAGE STATE,

MOST STARTLING CONSIDERATIONS!

Reflections for the Thoughtful.

Strange that countless human beings exist and drag through life as did the beings of the fable, or the insects of the earth, without any ... thought or reflection than though the noble faculties of mind were not bestowed upon them.

Many such are husbands and fathers, upon whom are dependent the health, the well-being and the happiness of a confiding and affectionate wife, with perhaps a family of children.

FRAUD

ALL who want Axes of the real Collins & Co. make should be particular to notice the stamps, as there are various counterfeits and imitations stamped Collins and labelled much like ours, which are fraudulently sold in some parts of the United States as our manufacture. They are made in different parts of the country by various axe-makers, and are generally their poorest quality. The genuine Collins axes, which have acquired such an extensive reputation, are invariably stamped "COLLINS & CO, HARTFORD," and each axe has a printed label with my signature.— It is now more than TWENTY-FIVE YEARS since we commenced the business with the stamp of "Collins & Co. Hartford," and I do not know of any other axe-maker by the name of Collins in the United States.

KEEP THESE COMMANDMENTS AND THOU SHALT YET BE SOMEBODY!

1. Thou shalt have no other place to buy thy Clothing.

2. Thou shalt not choose to thyself any other Clothier. Thou shalt not bow down to them nor listen to their fair speeches for Cardwell is a reliable Clothier, capable and willing to dress his customers to the third and fourth Generation.

3. Thou needs't not search for Cardwell's Clothing Store in vain; it is in the Adirondac Hotel Building, and has the most splendid Sign in the State.

4. Thou shalt keep in remembrance the above location; six days shalt thou labour, and on Saturday night come and buy thy Sunday outfit.

5. Thou shalt honor the judicious adorner of thy person and long may thy days be upon the land to enjoy the fruits of his services.

6. Thou shalt not commit an outrage upon propriety by purchasing your Clothing of any wandering Jew that may come hither, nor of any one else that has not courage enough to adhere strictly to one branch of trade.

7. Thou shalt not take unto thyself foreign fashions by adulterously wedding strange garments to thy body, thereby converting an American citizen into a foreign ambassador.

8. Thou shalt not rob Cardwell! for he sells so Cheap 'twould be a sin.

9. Thou shalt not bear false witness but honestly acknowledge that thou can'st get better suited at Cardwell's for less money than any other place, get thy money's worth and the right change back.

10. Thou shalt not covet thy neighbor's garments, but take counsel of the wise and proceed straightway to Cardwell's and buy for thyself and be satisfied.

LEANDER BABBIT'S TRUSS OFFICE

The latest and most approved Trusses; Female Supporters; Do. with shoulder braces attached; spinal elevators for curvature of the spine and projection of the shoulder blade. Suspensary shoulder braces. This instrument is so constructed that it not only acts the part of shoulder braces but carries the belt of the ladies' skirts on their shoulders; and, hence remedies the evil consequent to carrying them on the hips and sides. For gentlemen it not only serves for a shoulder brace, but acts the part of suspenders.

As to the importance and usefulness of the above named instruments, and their beneficial effects, their peculiar mechanism and superiority over other instruments of the same name, I need not say anything. They are so well known by physicians, and the multitude of persons that have had occasion to test them in this section of country, that I deem it not important to introduce a long catalogue of certificates; yet I have abundant evidence in my possession to justify me in all I claim or affirm, and deem it a privilege to give references to any who wish to make inquiries.

Office at Keeseville in the building on the corner of Main and Front street, opposite the Bank, up stairs.

Ladies will be waited on at my dwelling by Mrs. Babbit whose experience in adjusting braces and supporters qualifies her to give perfect satisfaction.

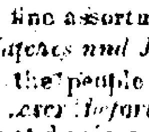
PROUTY & MEARS'

Celebrated Centre Draughts—All Sizes

THESE Ploughs wherever introduced, are fast superseding all others.

The most thorough trials of Ploughs on record in this country, and at the World's Fair in London, have demonstrated the important fact, that the Centre draught Plough is of much easier draught, than any other, and therefore used with less fatigue to both Ploughman and Team; and, also owing to its peculiar form, it pulverizes and prepares the ground for seed more perfectly than any other, giving less work for the harrow, and securing better crops than by any other method of Culture.

The following Implements, among others of the best quality, and of the latest and most approved patterns, are constantly on hand, viz:



Harrows, Seed Sowers, Corn Planters, Corn Shellers, Straw Cutters, Corn and Cob Crushers, Cheese Presses, Threshing Machines, Potato Hoes, Manure Hooks, Cast Iron Ox Scrapers, Pruning Shears, Tree Scrapers, Hedging and Pruning Knives, Hay Knives, Barn Door Rollers, Agricultural Furnaces, Corn Knives, Post Hole Augers, Wheelbarrows, Sheep Shears, etc., etc.

CONCURRENT RESOLUTION PROPOSING AN AMENDMENT TO THE CONSTITUTION.

Resolved, (if the Senate concur,) That the following amendment be proposed to the constitution of this state and referred to the legislature to be chosen at the next general election of senators, and be published for three months previous to making such choice, in pursuance to the provisions of the first section of the thirteenth article, of said constitution.

Substitute for section three of article seven the following:

After paying the said expenses of collection, superintendence and repairs of the canals, and the sums appropriated by the first and second sections of this article, there shall be appropriated and set apart in each fiscal year out of the surplus revenues of the canals, as a sinking fund, a sum sufficient to pay the interest as it falls due, and extinguish the principal within eighteen years of any loan made under this section and if the said sinking fund shall not be sufficient to redeem any part of the principal at the stipulated times of payment, or to pay any part of the interest of such loans as stipulated, the means to satisfy any such deficiency shall be procured on the credit of the said sinking fund. After complying with the foregoing provisions, there shall be paid annually out of said revenues into the treasury of the state two hundred thousand dollars, to defray the necessary expenses of government. The remainder shall, in each fiscal year, be applied to meet appropriations for the enlargement and completion of the canals mentioned in this section, until the said canals shall be completed. In each fiscal year thereafter the remainder shall be disposed of in such manner as the legislature may direct, but shall at no time be anticipated or pledged for more than one year in advance. The remainder of the revenues of the canals for the current fiscal year in which such appropriation is made, shall be applied to meet such appropriation; and if the same shall be deemed insufficient, the legislature shall at the same session provide for the deficiency by loan. The legislature shall also borrow one million and five hundred thousand dollars to refund to the holders of the canal revenue certificates issued under the provisions of chapter four hundred and eighty-five of the laws of the year one thousand eight hundred and fifty-one, the amount received into the treasury thereon. But no interest to accrue after July first, one thousand eight hundred and fifty-five, shall be paid on such Certificates. The provisions of section twelve of this article requiring every law for borrowing money to be submitted to the people, shall not apply to the loans authorized by this section. No part of the revenues of the canals or of the funds borrowed under this section, shall be paid or applied upon or in consequence of any alleged contract made under chapter four hundred and eighty-five of the laws of the year one thousand eight hundred and fifty-one, except to pay for work done or materials furnished prior to the first day of June, one thousand eight hundred and fifty-two. The rates of toll on persons and property transported on the canal shall not be reduced below those for the year one thousand eight hundred and fifty-two, except by the canal board, with the concurrence of the legislature.—All contracts for work or materials on any canal, shall be made with the person who shall offer to do or provide the same at the lowest price, with adequate security for their performance.

OLD ESTABLISHED HOSPITAL.

Quick Cures and Low prices, Private Diseases and their Antidote.

Dr. LISPENARD, author of the Marriage Guide, or Private Medical Treatise. Professor of Diseases of Women and Children, and Licentiate of the College of Physicians and Surgeons of the United States University, &c., &c., continues as heretofore to be confidentially and successfully consulted on all forms and variety of

PRIVATE DISEASES,

at his old quarters, No. 6 Beaver street, ALBANY, N. Y.

The great success attending the use of Doctor L.'s remedies in secret diseases, and the many remarkable cures daily effected by him in recent as well as old lingering attacks, is conclusive evidence that the

SICK AND UNFORTUNATE

can do no better than consult the Doctor, whose whole time is devoted to the exclusive treatment of this much neglected branch of practice.

LOOK AT THIS.

Dr. Lispenard cures recent cases of disease in from three to six days, and chronic or long standing diseases in a very short period of time, without the use of Mercury, without the loss of time, change of diet, or detention from

DAILY EMPLOYMENT.

In Syphilis, Gonorrhœa, Gleet, Strictures, Enlargement of the Testicles and Cords, Bubo, Chancres, Pimples and Scaly Eruptions, Sore Throats and Noses, Chancres on the tongue, tender shin bones, and diseases of the skin, and impure blood, Dr. Lispenard's remedies are above all praise, and frequently cure when all others had failed

EVEN TO RELIEVE.

More than 5,000 patients have during the past year experienced the benefit of the Doctor's extraordinary skill in treating secret diseases—among which, diseases of the bladder and kidneys have formed a goodly proportion.

YOUNG MEN,

who by indulging in secret habits have injured their health and prostrated their intellectual faculties, and thereby deprived themselves of the pleasure of married life, should consult Dr. Lispenard without a moment's delay. Hundreds have been restored to health, society and friends, under my peculiar mode of treatment, although vast sums of money had been sacrificed without any benefit. My remedy for this disease is pleasant to take, has no offensive smell and

CURES WITHOUT FAIL.

☞ Persons so unfortunate as to be diseased, although they may have visited half a dozen Doctors, and had medicine sent them a dozen times with no benefit would exhibit wisdom by making their case known to that Friend of the Sick, Dr. Lispenard, who never charges for advice and warrants all his cures. The sick are often at a loss where to apply for relief, and tis no wonder, as hundreds stand ready to plunder the unfortunate victim of Private Disease, or secret habits, with but one thought for his life and health. All thus deceived will find a friend, and moderate charges, in consulting the Doctor who uses no mercury and cures every time.

N. B.—Persons from a distance when visiting the city in search of a physician and friend will be fortunate if they succeed in escaping the many dens of imposition, conducted by unprincipled men, destitute of character knowledge or name, who fleece the unfortunate victim of disease of his hard earned money, and his remaining health. Patients who have no acquaintance in the city should make inquiry of some respectable citizen, or the editor or proprietor of any of the city papers, to ascertain who is the most reliable physician to apply to.

FEMALE DISEASES.

Dr. Lispenard from an experience seldom or never enjoyed by any other medical man, is enable to treat, with every hope of success, all and every variety of Female Complaints—with safe and pleasant remedies—and has without doubt cured within the past five years more than 3000 females afflicted with diseases of the Bladder, Womb, &c. &c. Ladies afflicted with suppression or stoppage of their monthly turns, will recollect that Dr. Lispenard is still the sole American agent for

DR. VICHOP'S FEMALE MONTHLY PILLS.

The unprecedented sale of more than 15,000 boxes of these excellent Pills, and the good results which always follow their use, is conclusive evidence of their utility in stoppages, &c. Caution—Married Ladies in certain delicate situations should not use them—for reasons see directions with each box. Price $1. Sent by mail to all parts of the world.

Married Persons and those about to Marry, should enclose 12½ cents post paid to Dr. Lispenard, and obtain a copy of his Marriage Guide, or Private Treatise, a bewitching little work of nearly 100 pages, illustrated. Every thing that married persons can desire or wish to know, is here explained. Persons who from poverty or sickness have no desire to increase their family, will find necessary instruction in the Marriage Guide. One copy 12½ cents; 5 copies 50 cts; 12 copies $1—mailed free to any part of the world.

N. B.—Patients treated by letter, and medicines sent, with full directions for use, to the writer's address. All communications destroyed or returned.

No mercury used in any case, and all cures warranted.

No boys or precocious students allowed: timed persons take notice.

Friends of Dr. L. when recommending patients to our care, will recollect our number, 5 Beaver st., three doors from South Broadway.

Hospital open from 7 A. M. to 9 P. M., and on Sundays from 1 to 4 P. M.

No charge for advice, although no medicine may be desired.

Good board and private rooms for those who desire to remain in the city.

"EVERY FAMILY SHOULD HAVE A COPY."

20,000 Copies sold in less than 5 months. A new edition, revised and improved, just issued.

Dr. Hunter's Medical Manual and Hand Book for the Afflicted—Containing an outline of the origin, progress, treatment and cure of every form of disease, contracted by promiscuous sexual intercourse, by self abuse or by sexual excess, with advice for their prevention, written in a familiar style, avoiding all medical technicalities, and everything that would offend the ear of decency, from the result of some twenty years successful practice, exclusively devoted to the cure of diseases of a delicate or private nature.

To which is added, receipts for the cure of the above diseases, and a treatise on the causes, symptoms and cure of the Fever and Ague.

Testimony of the Prof. of Obstetrics in Penn. College, Philadelphia,—"Dr. Hunter's Medical Manual."—The author of this work unlike the majority of those works who advertise to cure the diseases of which it treats, is a graduate of one of the best Colleges in the United States. It affords me pleasure to recommend him to the unfortunate, or to the victim of malpractice, as a successful and experienced practitioner, in whose honor and integrity they may place the greatest confidence.

JOSEPH LONGSHORE, M. D.

From A Woodward M. D., of Penn. University, Philadelphia—It gives me pleasure to add my testimony to the professional ability of the author of the "Medical Manual." Numerous cases of diseases of the Genital Organs, some of them of long standing have come under my notice, in which his skill has been manifest in restoring to perfect health, in some instances where the patient has been considered beyond medical aid. In the treatment of Seminal weakness, or disarrangement of the functions produced by Self-abuse, or Excess of venery, I do not know his superior in the profession. I have been acquainted with the Author some thirty years, and deem it no more than justice to him as well as a kindness to the unfortunate victim of early indiscretion, to recommend him as one, in whose professional skill and integrity they may safely confide themselves. ALFRED WOODWARD, M.D.

"This is, without exception, the most comprehensive and intelligible work published on the class of diseases of which it treats. Avoiding all technical terms, it addresses itself to the reason of its readers. It is free from all objectionable matter and no parent, however fastidious, can object to placing it in the hands of his sons. The author has devoted many years to the treatment of the various complaints treated of, and with too little breath to puff,' and 'too little presumption to impose,' he has offered to the world at the merely nominal price of 25 cents, the fruits of some 20 years most successful practice."—Herald.

"No teacher or parent should be without the knowledge imparted in this invaluable work. It would save years of pain, mortification and sorrow to the youth under their charge."—People's Advocate.

A Presbyterian clergyman in Ohio, in writing of "Hunter's Medical Manual," says: "Thousands upon thousands of our youth, by evil example and influence of the passions, have been led into the habit of self-pollution without realizing the sin and fearful consequences upon themselves and their posterity. The constitutions of thousands who are raising families have been enfeebled, if not broken down, and the do not know the cause or the cure. Anything that can be done so to enlighten and influence the public mind as to check, and, ultimately to remove this wide-spread source of human wretchedness, would confer the greatest blessing next to the religion of Jesus Christ, on the present and coming generations. Intemperance (or the use of intoxicating drinks,) though it has slain thousands upon thousands, is not a greater scourge to the human race. Accept my thanks on behalf of the afflicted, and, believe me, your co-worker in the good work you are so actively engaged in."

One copy, (securely enveloped,) will be forwarded free of postage to any part of the United States for 25 cents, or 6 copies for $1. Address (post paid) COSDEN & Co., publishers, Box 196, Philadelphia. 478y

THE WONDER OF THE WORLD.

DEVINES' COMPOUND

PITCH LOZENGE,

A sure and pleasant Remedy for Colds, Coughs, Croup, Whooping Cough, Asthma, and if lungs enough are left to sustain life, A CERTAIN CURE FOR CONSUMPTION, safe for the Infant or the Invalid, in any stage of weakness.

"The statements that consumption cannot be cured, has destroyed more lives than the disease itself.—[Dr. Warren

Read the following, which to a candid mind places this "Great Remedy," like Cæsar's wife "above suspicion."

TO THE PUBLIC!

We, the undersigned, citizens of Lee, Mass., are acquainted with Mr. Devines, the Proprietor and Manufacturer of Devines' Compound Pitch Lozenge and from what we know of it ourselves and have learned from others of its beneficial effects, in cases where it has been used, give it as our opinion that it is a valuable remedy in diseases for which it is recommended and is worthy of public confidence. A. G. Hulburt, Leonard Church, F. G. Taylor, Wm. Taylor, E. A. Bliss, S. A. Hulburt, Josephus Crafts, T. P. Eldridge.

If any individual is to be pitied, and needs sympathy, it is the consumptive—always expecting to get well, and yet the painful evidence of decay almost "makes the inner soul shrink with the outer flesh."

"Some bloom as roses bloom, and live as roses live, A single morning space!"

While others, in more mature life—by some imprudence and a slight cold neglected—in the hectic flush—the painful cough.

"The prints of their departing steps appears."

BUT HERE IS HOPE! Mr Wm. Devines, the originator and manufacturer of the Pitch Lozenge, under Providence, was raised to perfect health by the use of these Lozenges alone, after he was pronounced by his physician to be almost dying with consumption.

This fact is generally known in Berkshire County and is the neighborhood talk, and wonder in Lee, and in Great Barrington, Mass.

From Dr. Brown, of Lee, Mass.

This certifies that I have made use of Devines' Compound Pitch Lozenge for cold and cough, and found immediate relief. Therefore I would recommend it to the public as being a safe and sovereign remedy. H. C. BROWN

OUR CHILDREN:

How Shall we Save Them?

BY T. S. ARTHUR.

CHAPTER V.

How like leaves in the eddying winds of autumn, were swept away, as by a sudden blast, the newly awakened hopes of Mr. and Mrs. Greenfield.

The parents of Agnes saw no barriers to the proposed union. The marriage was, therefore, celebrated at an early day after all the necessary preliminaries were settled. A large and brilliant wedding party graced the occasion. As usual among the wealthy and fashionable at such times, a liberal entertainment was prepared, and wines and liquors of various kinds were used as freely as water. It is hardly a matter of wonder, that Henry should have been tempted to drink liberally. At the supper table, he was called upon to take a glass of wine so frequently by one and another, that, had he not been able to bear a good deal, he would never have found his way back to the drawing rooms in any thing like a tolerable state of sobriety. One less fond of wine, would have merely sipped his glass with every new compliment; but Henry never failed draining it to the bottom.

When the company returned to the drawing-rooms, the young bridegroom showed himself to be in a remarkably good humor. He talked and laughed so loudly as to be heard by every one; and said many things that sounded to other ears than those of his parents exceedingly foolish. Grave old ladies bent their heads together, and then looked towards him curiously; while the younger and less thoughtful laughed aloud at his merry sayings and doings. With what a sudden and painful shock did this come upon the feelings of Mr. and Mrs. Greenfield, who had built so hopefully upon the foundation of this marriage. To see their son more than half intoxicated on his wedding night, was a terrible mortification; but they felt a deeper anguish than this mortification occasioned. The hope they had so fondly cherished was gone.—If the occasion and the company did not prove strong enough to withhold his appetite from indulgence, what was to restrain him in the future?

While they felt and thought thus, two or three young men withdrew him from the room. Nearly half an hour afterwards, as Mrs. Greenfield sat in conversation with the young bride and her mother, a rude shout startled them, and turning their eyes in the direction from whence it came, they saw Henry dancing into the room, and acting more like a madman than a person in his senses. Every thing was thrown into instant confusion. Young ladies screamed as he approached them; while elderly matrons knit their brows severely. Mr. Greenfield went quickly to his side, and taking hold of him, said—

"Henry! Henry! You are forgetting yourself."

"Forgetting myself!" responded the young man, half inarticulately. 'Ho! ho! That is excellent! Why, isn't this my wedding night? Aint I just married?—Where's Aggy, the darling!"

And he made an effort to pass by his father; but the latter grasped his arm tightly, and spoke to him in a low, stern voice. At this moment the frightened bride arose from her place beside Mrs. Greenfield, and glided from the room.

"There! There she goes!" cried the young man, attempting to follow her.—'Aggy! Aggy!'

A scene of painful disorder followed.—Two or three men removed Henry from the room, and took him away to the bridal chamber, where he passed the night alone. Soon after he retired, the company broke up.

A few months after the marriage of Henry Greenfield, both his own and wife's desire to have an establishment was gratified. An elegant house was bought by Mr. Loring, and handsomely furnished, as a present for his daughter. Into this the young couple were installed. An interest in his father's business, gave Henry the command of money in his own right, and he was, therefore, free to use it as his inclinations might direct. Among his first acts, was to stock his cellar with a choice variety of old liquors, selected for him by a wine merchant whose taste in such matters was considered faultless. Wine and brandy he made as indispensible to the dinner table, as bread; and he commenced using them very much after the fashion pursued by his father in earlier times. His dining hour was four o'clock; and as he made it a rule not to go back to the store after dinner, he had leisure to sleep off the effects of any overindulgence he might fall into.

But, Henry varied from the old habit of his father in one thing. With Mr. Greenfield, the indulgence of the dinner hour sufficed to a great extent; but it was not so with his son, whose mind was far from being as well balanced. The latter drank on his way to the counting-room in the morning, and repeated this at least two or three times during the hours of business; so that it often happened on his going home at four o'clock, that his mind was very much unbalanced.

The occurrence of the wedding night, notwithstanding it had been treated lightly by the friends of the young bride, made its impression on her mind. Her first feeling was one of mortification. But that quickly, and almost entirely, wore off. It was succeeded by a tender concern, as she saw her husband's fondness for wine; and this gave place to something like anxiety, when, after they had commenced housekeeping, she observed the effects of his daily indulgence at the table. Against this she ventured a gentle remonstrance. His reply sent her to her chamber in tears. How long she wept alone, he did not know, for he had not calculated the effect of his words, and was ignorant of the force with which they had fallen upon her heart.

There had never been the semblence of unkindness on the part of the young husband before. But, his wife ventured, unknowingly, upon forbidden ground. There was one affection of his mind, stronger than even the love of his bride—and that was a perverted affection, derived from his father, and making, as it were a part of his very life. So long as this was unchecked in its course, no ripple appeared on the surface of his feelings. But, the moment it was opposed, the even flow of his temper was disturbed, and he exhibited himself in a new light to the sincere, gentle, loving creature he had taken into his bosom.

Tremblingly she shrunk from him; and when she came next into his presence, there was a timidity in her half down-cast eyes, that only passed away when he spoke to her in his usual affectionate tone.

It was the first and last time Mrs. Greenfield ventured a word in opposition to her husband's too free indulgence in the pleasures of drinking. But, from the moment a fear of consequences stole into her heart, no persuasion could induce her to join him in a glass of wine at the table, as she had done in the beginning. He, therefore, drank alone.

Thus it went on, the debasing passion growing stronger and stronger, until its indulgence often exceeded the bounds of all propriety; and sent its slave reeling to his home in broad daylight.

Sad, sad, was the lot of the young, beautiful, accomplished and loving wife. Henry Greenfield possessed his share of excellent qualities, and they had won and still claimed her affectionate regard. Her love was true and tender, and this made the pain she suffered the more severe. For his honest spirit; for his unselfish regard for the good of others; for his many good and generous qualities, she honored, admired and loved him. But, alas! how was all clouded by the one over mastering passion! How did the fine gold become dim! How, over all that was beautiful, fell a dark, distorting shadow!

In the lapse of time, a babe came, with its blessing of innocence, to the dwelling of Henry Greenfield. The love of offspring was, with him, as with his father, a strong feeling; and when the child was laid in his arms, he experienced a thrill of pleasure as exquisite as strong. Even if her own heart had not been filled to joyfulness with a new love, the sight of her husband, as he bent over the dear pledge of affection, would have amply repaid the mother for all she had endured in giving to the world a new being.

Time went on, and the babe grew into the heart of its father; but in one thing, the mother was disappointed: he was not won from his sensual indulgence. Another innocent came ere the first had reached its second summer; and still another followed.

But for the weakness under which Henry Greenfield labored, his would have been one of the happiest of homes. He loved fervently, the gentle being who moved by his side; and scarcely less than worshipped the sweet children she had brought him.

By the time his oldest boy, a most lovely child, reached his fourth year, Henry Greenfield had become so much enslaved that even he took the alarm, and made some ineffectual efforts to break away from the bondage in which he was held. But he was not as a strong man tied with light flaxen cords; but as a child bound with ropes. He felt, for a time, the struggle to be in vain. As it usually happens, [illegible] any long indulged propensity receives a sudden check, that it runs riot as [illegible] free, the effort to restrain himself [illegible]

"If that eagle on that quarter had life, and I were a State prison convict, I wouldn't swap places with it, for my confinement would be far more preferable to being squeezed to death."

This was the hair that broke the camel's back. With the exclamation, 'You d—d scoundrel!' he made one bound, and with a stunning blow, brought 'Zeke' to the floor. Then jerking off his coat, and placing himself in a fighting attitude, he turned to the astonished group with "come on now, cowardly ruffians. If you cannot let me alone peacably I will make you do it by force. I have borne your insults long enough, and if you have any more to offer come on with them!"

This challenge was sufficient. Coats came off and sleeves were rolled in a minute. I saw that my friend would be apt to get the worst of the fight, and forcing him into a corner, I exclaimed,

"Gentlemen, one word, if you please. It would be cowardly for you all to attack this man; I will not see it done. And if you will attempt it I have something here (tapping my breast significantly) that will stop it. He is not to blame; he has only resented an insult which any of you would have done. You have all insulted him because he has conducted himself strangely; let him explain his conduct, and perhaps we can make up our quarrel. He owes you an explanation—if not to you, he certainly does to me. And, now, sir," said I, turning to him, "I demand of you as a right,"

He hesitated a moment. "Come, my friend,' said I, "let us have it, whatever it is, and at once put an end to this quarrel."

"Well, gentlemen," he said, "I am not disposed to lay my private affairs open to the public gaze, but I suppose I must do it for once. You must know, then, that from my earnings I must not only support myself, but my mother, two sisters and three small brothers, who reside in a distant State. I could earn enough at home to support them well, but my reason for coming here is this: One of my sisters, who is now a beautiful girl of sixteen, and the pet of the family, has been blind from birth. We had no hope of her ever acquiring the faculty of sight, and were content to abide by what we thought a dispensation of Providence But recently I have seen a similar case to hers—a young man—who was restored to sight by an eminent physician of Paris. I have corresponded with that physician, and he has high hopes that in my sister's case he can effect a cure. This gentlemen, is what I have been laboring for since I have been here—to raise funds sufficient to take her to Paris. I love that sister as I do my own life; I have labored day and night—have deprived myself of many comforts, and borne your taunts and jeers for her sake. But I can bear it no longer. If you are men you will desist; if you do not I warn you of the consequences!"

"Zeke" had risen to his feet and heard all my friend had said. As he listened to the "Quaker," I could see the moisture coming into his eyes; and when he had finished, he stepped forth, and grasping the "Quaker's" hand, while the tears trickled down his face, he said in a voice quivering with emotion—

"My noble fellow, we have wronged you deeply, and I for one ask your forgiveness. Had you but told us what your object was we would not have placed a single obstacle in your way."

"I forgive you freely, sir—I forgive you all,' said 'Quaker."

"And how much have you to raise yet," I asked, "before you will have the requisite sum?"

"About one hundred and fifty dollars. If I have my health, and continue to make good bills, I shall be ready to start to Europe in about two months."

"You won't have to wait that long," said 'Zeke,' laying the money he held in his hand upon the stone, "if my week's wages, every cent of which you're welcome, will help you along. Come boys," he added, "how many of you will follow suit!"

"Well, there's mine," said Jim, laying an X upon the pile, 'and mine,' 'and mine,' 'and mine,' said a dozen voices, as each hand deposited an equal amount, until they had made quite a pile of bank bills.

"There stranger, take that, and may God prosper you," said 'Zeke,' tendering him the money.

"No, gentlemen, answered the "Quaker," "I thank you for your liberality but I cannot take your money. I am no beggar; all I ask is that I may be allowed to do my work without being disturbed."

"But you must take it," urged 'Zeke,' growing warm, "we owe it to you, and you shall take it. We've done you a great wrong—we've abused you—and we have no other way of making amends. Besides, if you won't take it, it will be spent before Monday morning, and I know that for my part it will be much pleasanter to commence the week with the consciousness of having appropriated my money in a sensible way than with the foggy head, aching limbs, and empty pocket, which always follows a 'free and easy.'"

Still the stranger hesitated. "Take it—take it for your sister's sake," said two or three voices.

"I accept it, gentlemen," said the Quaker, 'as you say, for my sister's sake,' and I hope to be able some day to return it, principal and interest."

"Quaker" left for Paris shortly after, and in a few months we had the satisfaction of hearing that his sister was completely restored to sight, and that they were on their way home. I have heard from him several times since. His lines have been drawn in pleasant places" and he is now a judicial functionary in a neighboring State (Kentucky.)

The Journeyman's Secret.

FROM THE DIARY OF A JOURNEYMAN PRINTER.

"You can take this case," said the foreman; "here is a stick—here is some copy; and if you would like a quick and steady partner, you will find this gentleman still enough in all conscience."

The "partner" merely looked up and faintly smiled in acknowledgment of the foreman's compliment, and kept on with his work, while the foreman turned away to attend to something else.

We worked on steadily until dinner, as we were in a hurry to get the paper up, without exchanging a word, or even a look. In the afternoon I had more leisure to study the physiognomy of my neighbor. He was a young man, of about three or four and twenty, with handsome features and a rather intellectual cast of countenance. His face was quite pale, and the raven darkness of his hair, eyebrows and eyes made me immediately come to the conclusion, after thoroughly studying his physiognomy, that he was a hard student during his leisure hours, or that, depriving himself of recreation of books or other sources of enjoyment he spent all his waking hours at the case. The latter supposition time proved correct.

As day after day passed by I became more acquainted with him; and I found him to be a singular character. Beneath his stand, he had constructed a kind of closet, which contained a spirit lamp, a mattrass with bedding, a few cooking utensils, and a small stock of the plainest kind of food. When the hours for meals arrived, he would light his lamp, and putting some food over it to cook, would work until all the rest of the hands had left the office, when he would sit down to his frugal repast. He worked incessantly during work hours, hardly leaving the office unless to purchase food or upon some errand of that kind. Morning, noon, and night, when I returned from my meals, I invariably found him at the case, working away with all his might, as if some great issue depended upon the improvement of every minute. I suppose he slept upon the cot which he kept in his closet; but as he was always at work when I left at night and when I returned in the morning, I could not positively assert that he did so. I was not long in discovering that there was some mystery connected with him, and that his intense application to labor was not prompted merely by a desire to make money, for if there is anything in phrenology, judging from the formation of his head, he was the very one whom I would have selected from a score for a spendthrift. Occasionally his cheek would flush, his eyes light up, and a happy smile overspread his features; then the smile would go away, his eyes would fill with tears, while an expression of sadness—almost despair—would seat itself upon his countenance. I have been tempted a thousand times to ask him the cause of this, but as he appeared so cold and isolated I refrained from doing so, as it is not pleasant proffering sympathy unasked.

"Well, how do you like your neighbor?" asked one of the journeymen of me, as we were descending the stairs one evening

"I can hardly make him out," said I; "he appears to be a strange sort of being. You are better acquainted with him than I; how do you like him?"

"For my part, I hate him, and what is more, he has not a friend in the whole office. That fellow has been here for three months, and he has hardly spoken to any one. A man who makes such bills as he does, and hoards up his money like a miser, I have very little friendship for. We wouldn't any of us care so much if he would be a little sociable and spend a dollar, or even a dime, occasionally; but no—every five cent piece he gets he hangs on to as if he was afraid the eagle on it would spread his wings and fly away with it, doing him out of a five-cent piece. But he can't stay here long. We've insulted him a dozen times; and he has less spunk than I think he has if he don't resent it some day. We'll get him into a quarrel then, and have him discharged."

"But," said I, "do you know anything about his history? He may have some all-absorbing end to accomplish, which is the cause of his untiring assiduity. You should have a little charity for the fellow, and taking Crockett's motto, be sure you're right, before you go ahead."

"No, we know nothing of him, and if circumstances are as you suppose, it will be his own fault if they are discovered too late, for we have tried often enough to scrape an acquaintance with him. Yo had better not take up on his side if you do not wish to incur the displeasure of the whole office. Good night."

I had some charity for the fellow, and was resolved to see him righted should he get into difficulty. I soon saw that he was very unpopular, and that, as I felt rather disposed to make allowances for him, was considered as his friend. Many were the jokes cracked at our expense.

"I say, fellows," said a rowdy looking customer who went by the name of Zeke, "do Quakers ever have camp meeting?"

'Yes,' answered another, 'they have a camp-meeting over there in Quaker corner every night. That fellow camps out upon the floor every nap he takes.'

"Well, said another, I've heard of boarding at the market-house, and sleeping on the bridge,' but I never saw an illustration of it before."

'Wonder if they wouldn't take in boarders?' asked the first speaker. "I'll see if they don't want the rules and regulations of the house printed. If they do, I'll board out the bill."

I glanced at my neighbor to see how he bore this ridicule. His face was flushed and his lips firmly compressed as if to choke down the rising indignation. But he said not a word.—I fancied, however, that he picked up the type faster than usual.

Things could not go on this way much longer, for as god-like a quality as forbearance is, it cannot hold out against everything. I saw that a storm was gathering and prepared to act my part as a man when it burst forth.

It was Saturday afternoon; the hands were ranged round the "stone," with their bills in their hands, waiting to be paid off. 'Quaker' happened to be at one end of the 'stone,' and immediately opposite him stood 'Zeke.' As usual, "Quaker" was the "observed of all observers," and sly whispers, which was answered by a titter or a nudge of the elbow, passed round the group. As the foreman paid 'Quaker' the amount due him, he gave him a new quarter dollar to make out the change. This did not escape 'Zeke's' eye, and he said in a tone loud enough to be heard by all—

"Quaker, I could see the moisture coming into his eyes; and when he had finished, he stepped forth, and grasping the "Quaker's" hand, while the tears trickled down his face, he said in a voice quivering with emotion—

"My noble fellow, we have wronged you deeply, and I for one ask your forgiveness. Had you but told us what your object was we would not have placed a single obstacle in your way."

"I forgive you freely, sir—I forgive you all,' said 'Quaker."

"And how much have you to raise yet," I asked, "before you will have the requisite sum?"

"About one hundred and fifty dollars. If I have my health, and continue to make good bills, I shall be ready to start to Europe in about two months."

Patrick Henry vs. Intolerance.

Soon after Henry's noted case of Tobacco and Preserves, as it was called, he heard of a case of oppression for conscience sake. The English Church having been established by law in Virginia, became as all such establishments are wont to do, exceedingly intolerant toward other sects. In the prosecution of this system of conversion, three Baptist clergymen had been indicted at Fredericksburgh, for preaching the gospel of the Son of Gob contrary to the statute. Henry hearing of this, rode some fifty miles to volunteer his service in defence of the oppressed. He entered the court being unknown to all present, save the bench and clerk. He sat within the bar until the reading was finished and the king's attorney had concluded some remarks in support of the prosecution, when he arose, reached out his hand for the paper, and without more ceremony, proceeded with the following speech;

"May it please your worships, I think I heard read by the prosecutor, as I entered this house, the paper I now hold in my hand. If I have rightly understood, the king's attorney of the colony has framed an indictment for the purpose of arraigning and punishing by imprisonment, three inoffensive persons before the bar of this court, for a crime of great magnitude—as disturbers of the peace. May it please the court what did I hear read? Did I hear it distinctly, or was it a mistake of my own? Did I hear an expression of crime, that these men whom your worships are about to try for misdemeanor, are charged with—what?" and continuing in a low, solemn heavy voice, "preaching the Gospel of the Law of God!"

Pausing amid the most profound silence and breathless astonishment, he slowly waved the paper three times around his head, when lifting his hands and eyes to Heaven, with peculiar and impressive energy, he exclaimed:

"Great God!" The exclamation, the burst of feeling from the audience, were all overpowered. Mr. H. resumed—"May it please your worships, in a day like this, when truth is about to be aroused to claim its natural an inalienable rights; when the yoke of oppression that has reached the wilderness of America, and the unnatural alliance of ecclesiastical and civil power are about to be dissevered, at such a period when liberty of conscience is about to wake from her slumberings, and enquire into the reasons of such charges as I find exibited here to-day in this indictment."

Another fearful pause, while the speaker alternately cast his sharp, piercing eyes on the court and the prisoners, and resumed:

"If I am not deceived, according to the account of the paper I now hold in my hand, these are men accused of preaching the Gospel of the Son of God! Great God!"

Another long pause, while he again waved the indictment around his head—while a deeper impression was made on the auditory. Resuming his speech:

"May it please your worships, there are periods in the history of man, when corruption and depravity have so long debased the human character, that man sinks under the weight of the oppressor's hand; becomes his servile, abject slave—he licks the hand that smites him; he bows in passive obedience to the mandates of the despots; and in this state of servility, receives his fetters of perpetual bondage. But, may it please your worships, such a day has passed away."

"From that period when our fathers left the land of their nativity for, settlement in these American wilds for liberty, for civil and religious liberty, for liberty of conscience, to worship their Creator according to their own conception of heaven's revealed will from the moment they placed their feet upon the American continent and in the deeply imbedded forest they sought an asylum from persecution and tyranny—from that moment despotism was crushed; the fetters of darkness were broken, and Heaven decreed that such should be free to worship God according to the Bible.

"Were it not for this, in vain were all this suffering and bloodshed to subjugate this new world, if we, their offspring, must still be oppressed and persecuted. But may it please your worships, permit me, to enquire once more, for what are these men about to be tried? This paper says for preaching the Gospel of the Savior of Adam's fallen race." And in tones of thunder he exclaimed—

"What law have they violated?"

While the third time in a low dignified manner, he lifted his eyes to heaven, and waved the indictment around his head, [illegible] and audience were wrought up [illegible] intense pitch of excitement. [illegible] the persecuting attorney was [illegible] ghastly, and he appeared unconcious that his whole frame was agitated with alarm; while the judge in a tremulous voice, put an end to the scene—now becoming excessively painful—by the authoritative declaration—"Sheriff, discharge those men!"

BACHELOR BUCHANAN,—Few perhaps know the real cause of the long, lonely life of our new Minister to St. James, Mr. Buchanan. The story is briefly told. When in his early manhood, he paid his addresses to a beautiful lady of his native city of Lancaster, (Pa.) Each became deeply enamored, and they were engaged. On a given evening, she requested his company to a party at a friend's which he declined on the plea of buisness engagements. Circumstances rendering it necessary, he late in the evening, gallanted a young lady to her home, and on the way—they met. Mortified and chagrined at what she deemed unfaithfulness and desertion, and imagining the worst, she left the city early in the morning, and returned—a corpse. Such is the sad story of his early love, nor can the high places of distinction and trust make him forget, nor the wreaths of honor that encircles his brow bury the memory of the early love[illegible] lost.

The Week.

An unexpected absence to the moment of going to press prevents our saying what we would be glad to on two or three subjects. We can now only allude to them.

1. The whigs will be united this fall.—We wish our whig friends to understand this for it is true. There will be a union ticket, made up of the ablest whigs in the State, and it will be cordially sustained.—No factionist will be on it of either extreme. A great majority of the Convention will be in favor of union and harmony, and they must and will control the Convention. If disorganisers attend, and attempt any agitation other than who shall best work and best agree, they will be overruled and silenced. This we believe will be insisted on to the letter. Consultations and opinions will be free, but faction will not prevail, and the conciliatory whigs are prepared to say, shall not. We say this after consultations with several leading whigs and Editors in Troy, Albany and N. Y. We say then, to whigs, prepare for united action, and for victory. We will speak fully on this subject next week.

2. "Quod erat demonstrandum" The "united and harmonious democracy" has at last demonstrated the great question, "Is the democracy united and harmonious?"—Two tickets, a hunker and a barnburner, are in the field. The proceedings of the Conventions which produced this result, we shall give next week, presenting as they do, the astounding anomaly of importing bullies to overawe and control a State Convention. This was done by that pink of barnburners and moral depravity, John Van Buren, and some of Pierce's underlings of the N. Y. Custom House, and tho' the excitement was not long, it was intense, as at one moment, the life of more than one hunker hung upon the nod of as great villians as ever escaped hanging. The name of John Van Buren and his confederates in that preparation for murder, if need be, will go down to posterity among the most depraved and desperate of men. We publish the hunker ticket, and it will be seen to be one of commanding talent. We should feel worse at many events than the success of Mr. Cooley, and our neighbor, Mr. Winslow C. Watson, whom to know is to esteem.

More of this also next week.

☞The Troy Daily Whig has recently donned a new and beautiful dress. We are glad to notice this evidence of the prosperity of so valuable a paper as the Whig, and we wish it and its talented, energetic editor unbounded success.

During the last few weeks, the Albany State Register has contained several articles on the duty of whigs in the approaching state election, written with great ability and judgement. We read them carefully as they appeared, and admired them sincerely. Last week we gave our own views on the subject. These the Register quoted, and comments upon as below. "Barring" the compliments to us personally, we commend the Register's spirited remarks to the whigs of Old Essex, who we trust, are again ready to take the field.

We call attention to the above extract from the leading article of the Essex Co, Republican, of last week. It has the ring of the true metal, and we are glad to see it in the columns of one of the best, and most ably conducted country papers in the State. With the sentiments contained in the article quoted, we most heartily concur. They are independent, and just, and are fitted to the exigencies of the times. The Essex County Whigs are of the old sort, who are always to be found in line. When work is to be done they go about it earnestly, with a will. They put on the collar of no faction. They always stand upon the Whig platform, which they justly regard as no proper arena for strife, no fit place for the contentions of personal ambition, or the indulgence of private animosities. They generally accomplish too what they undertake and if the Whigs of the State would emulate their example, there would hardly be Whig defeats enough to give variety to political action.

The names referred to by the Republican are among the strongest and best in the State of men every way competent to the discharge of the duties of any office in the gift of the people. They are both gentlemen of the highest character for integrity and ability. They are anchored, too, in the confidence of the Whigs of the State. They have been tried. In the hands of such men, the great interests of the State would be entirely safe. No unworthy motive could turn them a hair's breadth from the right.

We think the spirit which speaks in the article quoted, is not peculiar to Essex county. Judging from what we see and hear, it pervades the whole State. The determination to harmonize, to select for candidats "the very best men—men of ability and character, the very mention of whose names will give strength to the ticket," we think is universal in the rank and file of the Whig party. If we are not mistaken in this, the Whig party has "a good time coming," a time of raising up from defeat, a time of triumph, of conquering back the trophies that it suffered through discord and contention, to be snatched from its grasp.

☞The Editor of the Albany Register, who spent sometime at the fishing grounds a short time since, after a graphic description of the burning of Franklin Falls a little more than a year ago, refers to Peter Comstock in the following language;

Any other man than Peter Comstock would have sunk under the calamity. Some $50,000 of his property was destroyed, and, with other embarrassments pressing upon him, the spirit of any other man would have been broken. Not so with Peter Comstock. With a will that nothing could bend—an energy unconquerable as destiny—he rose up from the misfortune that overwhelmed him, defiant of fate, and scorning the power of the elements, he reared from those ashes of desolation, a phœnix—stronger and better than that which destruction had swept away. Where the old mill stood, stands a better one,—Hundreds of thousands of feet of lumber are piled along the road, for a mile, and great stacks of it surrounded the mill.—Thirty teams are drawing, from these long rows of piled up boards, and as one pile disappears another takes its place. Where the former tavern and store stood stands another and a better. Each dwelling house destroyed, is replaced by a new one, and a few charred fragments scattered about, are all that remain to remind one of the fire that made such a clean sweep of the town. Honor, I say, to all such men as Peter Comstock. They may be unfortunate; they may undertake more than human agency can entirely perform; they may not succeed in amassing a fortune; destiny may be against them; they may work hard and die poor; they may fail; their notes may be protested;—but the world owes them a debt of gratitude. It is just such men who push forward civilization—who sweep away the forests—who let the sun, with its genial influences down upon the earth, where tall trees once obstructed his rays—who spread out green fields, and build up towns in the ancient wilderness—who give employment to labor, and impress progress upon everything around them. Bankers may discredit their notes, and usurers prey upon them; but they are the true "manifest destiny men," who give to our country practical dominion over nature, by pushing civilization into the waste and desolate places in the wilderness. They chain the mad waters to great wheels, and make them grind corn, give shape and fitness for use, to great forest trees, extract the metals from the solid rock, and throw the shuttle and spin. Honor to all such men as Peter Comstock, I say—let the world judge them as it may.

☞We are requested to state that Geo. F. Houghton, Esq. of St. Albans, Vt. has consented to address the Clinton Co. Fair on Wednesday Sept. 28th. In this connection we would urge upon the people of Clinton Co. and of Keeseville, renewed exertion in making the Fair what it should be, and what it can be by a little time and exertion—shake off the lethargy—the torpor—that has marked your proceedings for the last two years,—foster a spirit of emulation and the result will not be doubtful—second the efforts of your officers who are striving to sustain the honor of Clinton County and render it (the fair) worthy of its resources and all will be well. Heed not their requests—disregard their appeals, and the result must be mortifying to every well wisher of the intelligent farmers of that county. But we anticipate no such result. We confidently expect that they will be on hand, and the honor of the county maintained.

4TH JUDICIAL DISTRICT.—The Democrats held their Convention on Friday last. Judge Willard was re-nominated, on the 8th ballot.

Fairfax, Vt. Literary and Theological Institution.

About twenty five years since a Literary and Theological Institution was opened under the patronage of the Baptists in New Hampton, N. H. During this entire period it had a large number of pupils and was the means of doing much good. But in consequence of the increased facilities of traveling and the proximity of other seminaries of a kindred character, it was deemed desirable to change its location. Accordingly the trustees consented to its removal to Fairfax, Vt. provided the inhabitants of that town should (as they proposed) procure grounds and erect thereon suitable buildings at an expense of not less than $10,000, and deed them, on or before Sept. 1st. 1853, to the Northern Educational Union to be organized for its supervision, and provided also that $20,000 be raised for an endowment within the limits of that state. These conditions have been complied with and the transfer legally made.

On the 30th ult. the Board of the Educational Union met in the morning and afternoon in the Baptist meeting house, Fairfax; and in the evening the Society held its first anniversary. Interesting addresses were made; and many were the congratulations upon the success, which had attended the undertaking.

On Wednesday occurred the exercises at the opening of the New Hampton Academic and Theological Institution at Fairfax. In the morning the Rev. Dr. Ide of Springfield, Mass. preached an eloquent sermon upon the nature, importance and qualifications of the ministerial office. In consequence of the large attendance the congregation repaired in the afternoon to the grove in the rear of the meeting house, which had been seated for the occasion, where the Rev. Mr. Eddy of Lowell, Mass. addressed the alumni. His subject was. The 'Practical man,' which he discussed in his usually able and glowing style. In the evening the Rev. Dr. Caldicott of Charlestown, Mass. preached a powerful sermon on Ministerial Education from Acts 7:22.

On Thursday morning the two literary societies connected with the Institution held their anniversaries. The address before the Adelphi was delivered by Tesse Clemment Esq. of Buffalo, N. Y. Editor of the Western Literary Messenger. His subject was, 'Enterprise' Though having a weak voice he was heard with delight in the open air by the multitude drawn together by the occasion. The address before the Literary Fraternity was delivered by the Rev. Justin A. Smith of Rochester, N. Y. His subject was, 'Success.' Most ably was it treated. At the close of these services $1,000 was subscribed for the benefit of the Institution. The alumni, with invited guests, among whom were several ladies, then repaired to the vestry of the meeting house, where after dining togther, a number of toasts were given, and interesting and amusing addresses made by gentlemen from Mass. N. H. Vt. Western N. Y. and Canada.

The Institution thus opened in our vicinity is admirably adapted to the wants of this northern region, and will, we doubt not, be productive of immense good. The full course of study in the English and Classical male department embraces four years; that in the female department five years. Students may enter either of the classes with which they are qualified to proceed advantageously. The course of study in the Theological department embraces two years. The first year is occupied with studies under the charge of the Prof. of Biblical Literature. The second with studies under the care of of the Prof. of Systematic Theology. The academical year is divided into two sessions, of twenty two weeks each, and each session into two quarters. The first session commences on the last Wednesday in August, and the second on the last Wednesday in Feb. The Institution is open to all; is easily accessible; its location delightful, the cost of board, tuition &c. remarkably cheap. The Board of instruction in the male department consists of Rev. Eli B. Smith, D. D. Rev. James Upham A. M. Daniel Putnam, A. B. Selim H. Peabody, A. B. S. M. Basset, Algernon P. Shatles; and in the Female department of Misses F. S. Macomber L. A. Gage, S. J. Parker and Mrs. Catharine Ciddle and Sarah E. Putnam.

The Baptists have done nobly within two or three years for the cause of education. They have raised $200,000 for Rochester University; $100,000 for Madison University Hamilton, N. Y.; $100,000 for Newton Theological Institution at Fairfax; besides other sums for seminaries in other sections of the country, amounting at least to more than a half a million of dollars.—[COM.

Jupiter Tonans!

How supremely ridiculous it is for a self-constituted bell-wether of a political party, because he happens to edit the paper at Washington, to be entirely dabbling in the local politics of States, in regard to which he is profoundly ignorant. It is true he may enjoy the luxury of an occasional Presidential nod, or recognizing smile, but he is mightly mistaken if he supposes that Washington is the whole Union, or even the exponent of New York or Pennsylvania politicial feeling; and he only exposes his egotistical folly when he attempts to lecture editors at a distance upon their local policy. A lion's hide may cover an ass' ears, but the bray of the one can never sound like the roar of the other.—[N. Y. National Dem.

VERMONT.—An Extra from the Woodstock Age (dem.) says:—

"We have received returns from 230 towns—all but 10 in the State—which are reported to have elected 88 Whigs, and 123 Democrats and Free Soilers. The number of the latter we cannot at this time determine, but our present returns indicate not far from 30. The 20 towns to hear from will not materially alter the complexion. The Senate is yet in doubt, but probably Whig by one or two majority."

☞The Boston Atlas says:

The Whigs, as we are inform[ed] returns, have surely elected 16[0] (a majority,) and stand a good [chance] having chosen 2 more.

Agricultural Fair.

The Agricultural Fair at E-town yesterday, was very largely attended, considering the very heavy rain of the preceding day. The show as a whole, was very good, although we think the display in Manufacturers Hall not equal to that of last year. This we presume is owing in a great measure to the unpropitious weather.

The display of horses was fine, there being a large number of the beautiful blackhawk breed present, prominent among which we noticed a noble looking 3 year old stallion owned by S. T. Burwell of Crownpoint. Essex County need not be ashamed of her horses.

The show of cattle was very good, larger in number than last year we should judge, and there were some of the "tallest" kind of "grunters."

We were shown by the exhibitor, Mr. Barrows, of Lewis, an iron pot and pewter plate, which well authenticated tradition asserts were brought from Holland by the first pilgrims. They look as though they had seen some service, and have been in the Barrows family above 100 years.

The Floral Designs by Miss E. S. Hand were very fine, and exhibited great taste and a nice discrimination in their arrangement. The Crayon Paintings by Miss E. Blinn, of Essex, elicited much and deserved comment, were very creditable to the abilities of the young lady.

The display of Dahlias by Mr. Batley of the Union Nurseries was exceedingly beautiful, and were a prominent feature. There were 60 different varieties. He had also several other kinds of very rare and beautiful flowers and grapes.

Mr. Tousley's daguerreotypes were the 'observed of all observers' and received unequivocal praise at all hands. The day was fine, the show was good, and the people appeared to enjoy their holiday first rate.

We saw a great many articles we should like to speak of particularly, had we the time and space. The Fair holds over today, when the address will be delivered.

We cannot close this article without returning our sincere and hearty thanks to the President of the society for his kindness and attention, whos civility was a severe comment upon, and a sufficient satisfaction for, the gruffness of an official in charge of one of the offices. † ——"Go forth, my son, and see by what asses the world is governed."

—Advice of the Swedish sage to his son.

The advice of the Swedish Sage was never more appropriate than at the present time. Glancing at the imbecile, corrupt, and tyrannical rulers across the ocean, and at the hot-headed, fiery characters of the South American States, the reader will be surprised on returning to his own favorite Republic to observe in the seats of honor and authority, the most consummate blockheads which have anywhere attracted his attention. Beginning with Pierce, he will run along down the catalogue of officials, noting Cushing, Soule, Sickles, J. W. Brown, J. A. Dix, the late N. Y. Legislature, the present N. Y. State officers, and others of the same ilk throughout the country, and if a more inefficient, and corrupt set can be found the world over, we'll allow that the Swedish Sage was in error. The world at large, and this Republic in particular, is governed by a set of third-rate men. It is no disrespect to a large portion of the respectable and talented portion of the democratic party to point the finger of scorn at those who now hold the official positions once held by worthier men. They are only deserving of the scoffs and scorns of the people. We believe that none are more conscious of the fact than those to whom they owe their elevation; and we would fain hope that the wranglings and jealousies now dividing that party will open their eyes and pave the way for the elevation of men of the first ability for our rulers.

George W. Clinton, Secretary of State.
James T. Brady, Attorney General.
James E. Cooley, Comptroller.
J. D. Fay, Engineer and Surveyer.
W. C. Watson, State Treasurer.
John C. Mather, Canal Commissioner.
M. W. Bennett, Prison Inspector.
C. P. Ruggles & H. M. Denio, Judge of Appeals.
S. S. Bowne, Clerk of Appeals.

It is a strong ticket, and one worthy the united support of the party. They are all men of standing and acknowleged ability.

CROWNPOINT, Sept. 12, 1853.

MR. EDITOR:—I have hanging up in my office a Tomato, weighing three pounds and a half, and measuring one foot and ten inches in circumference. It was raised by J. B. Carter of this town, whose taste, no doubt, has been monstrously excited for that delicious fruit.

Who can beat that? Let some of the boasted farmers of Peru answer.

☞THE STATE FAIR.—This "Institution' promises to be as attractive this as during any previous year. The arrangements will be as perfect, and the location [as attra]ctive as could be desired. The [Fair] of the Fair will be Wednesday [and] rsday. It will be remembered [that] O. Rives, of Va., will deliver the Noble Sentiments.

Mr. Clayton in a late speech in the Senate of the United States, in reply to Mr. Douglas, of Illinois, made use of the following language, which is worthy of a United States Senator, and which, we trust, will meet the approbation of nine tenths of the American people:

"The Senator is fond of talking violently about driving European nations from the continent.—When he discourses in such magnificent terms as he employed a few years ago about 'fifty-four forty or fight,' he does no harm among his own countrymen. We all know exactly what it means. But when these speeches reach the other side of the Atlantic, they have a different effect. They induce foreigners to believe that we are a quarrelsome, violent, and aggressive race, denying to all other men equal rights with ourselves; and they are well calculated to make us odious among other nations. We once held among them a high character for probity and honor; but if it shall come to be understood among them that we are bent upon seizing every country to which we may take a fancy, we shall be looked upon as pirates and enemies of the human race. Then it will be found that, instead of maintaining the highest position upon earth, we have decended to the lowest, and the sun of our glory will set forever. I am, and profess to be, an American in heart—every inch an American; as determined to assert and enforce respect for American rights, and the duty of protecting American interests at home and abroad, as any man; but I am also resolved to assert and maintain American faith and honor. Let us proclaim it among all the nations of the earth that there does not exist unde the sun a people more proud of observing and maintaining their treaties and all their contracts than the people of the United States. Let us discountenance this system, now practiced by the Senator from Illinois and others among us, of denouncing Europeans, and of inculcating it as a duty to hate the men of any other nation."

WHIGS "EXTRAVAGANCE."—It appears that there will be some twenty-three millions surplus in the treasury on the first of July. This is the prosperous condition a Whig Administration leaves the country in, yet we everlastingly hear Democracy prating over Whig extravagance about election times, and telling the dear people that the Whigs are not fit to be entrusted with the public money. When did ever a Democratic Administration have a surplus in the treasury? On the other hand, they have always left exhausted coffers and an accumulated debt. Already the organs of the party are setting to work to devise some plan to spend the surplus left by the Whigs. As the ostensible means of making way with it, some of them propose to plunge the county headlong into another war. The people need give themselves no concern about the disposition of this surplus. A Democratic Administration can spend it.—Richmond Whig.

HISTORICAL ACCOUNT OF HYMEN.—Hymen was a beautiful youth of Athens, who, for the love of a young virgin, disguised himself, and assisted at the Eleusinian rites; and at this time he, together with his beloved, and divers other young ladies of that city, were surprised by pirates and carried off, who, supposing him to be what he appeared, was lodged with his mistress. In the dead of night, when the robbers were all asleep, he cut their throats. Thence making hasty way back to Athens, he bargained with the parents that he would restore them their daughter, and all her companions, if they would consent to their marriage, which, proving very happy, it became the custom to invoke the name of Hymen at all nuptials.

☞Though in most respects the conflict between the 'Hards' and 'Softs' of the Democracy is a matter which does not concern Whigs, there is one feature standing out promptly in the Resolutions of the Hunkers and that presents itself with equal prominence upon their Ticket, which deeply concerns the general welfare.

The Canal Enlargement Question is distinctly recognized in the Resolutions of the Hunker Democrats; and in their Nominees for Members of the Canal Board, are some of the most devoted and fearless Democratic Champions of the Canals.—[Albany Journal.

Complimentary.

Hon. James Maurice, member of Congress elect from the first Congressional district (L. I.) of New York, is out against Pierce and his appointments, in no doubtful language. Amongst other things he says: "If the great body of the American people had not been deceived into his support as I was Gen. Pierce would be still practicing law at Concord, and illustrating by turns the politics and jurisprudence of N. H.

☞There was a conspiracy recently detected, we hear; (though the New York papers have been silent on the subject,) to rob the Crystal Palace. The plan was to cut off the main gas pipe at night and take advantage of the sudden darkness and surprise to plunder the visitors and make booty of the rich contents of the tables and cases. The plot was detected and one of the parties arrested.

RE-ARREST OF THE CONVICT DUNN'—The New York Commercial Advertiser mentions the re-arrest on Saturday morning, of James Dunn, who escaped from the Sing Sing prison some three weeks since. He was taken in the upper part of the city. He leaped from a second story window, and ran several blocks before the officers caught him. He was immediately taken back to Sing Sing.

☞Our friend BRANDO has brought in for our inspection, two eggs laid by his Shanghai's. They weigh a quarter of a pound a piece and measure 6 1-8 by 7 1-8 inches, and may safely be set down as "whoppers." We don't think hens can afford to lay such eggs for a cent a piece.

☞A Yankee, writing from the West to his father, speaks of its great matrimonial facilities, and ends by making the following suggestion: "Suppose you get our girls some teeth, and send them out.'

"Don't kick that boy! He's somebody's boy—don't you know it?" We were walking rapidly along Warren st., but the voice arrested our steps, and we turned to look at the owner. He was a mere boy of about fifteen, as ragged and unkempt as a two year old. His hair resembled a couple of nondescript toads, and as for his countenance, whatever Croton might have passed his lips, he took good care to get none on his face. That frontispiece of his, though, as you might infer from his words, was, barring the deep shading, a good one. There was a merry, daring kind of look in his eye, and a good natured curve at the corners of his mouth. Under one arm was a roll of handbills, and swinging threateningly from the extremity of the other, was a paste kettle. Altogether, he evidently had the raw material for an out-and-out fellow of some sort—nothing by halves, but either good enough for a pattern or bad enough for a proverb. Another lad of about the same size, but with the look of a young Nero, was just in the act of 'letting up' one of the most squalid and pitiable little morsels of humanity it was ever our ill fortune to encounter. This tyrant, from certain appearances beneath the eye of the little fellow, varied to a blue, and thus distinguished from the surrounding blackness had evidently had him in 'chancery' or some other bad place. The determined air with which our little champion for human rights accompanied his 'don't kick the boy—he's somebody's boy,' deterred him from further demonstrations. They talk of tableaux. Here was one worth somebody's pencil; our Wilberforce in the foreground, his greasy, tattered cap flung back from his brow, his eyes sparkling with manly indignation, the symbol of his craft swung threateningly aloft; the recipient of these attentions, relinquishing his hold, with a sulky, intimidated look, and the little victim, every rag in a quiver with his writhings and wrath, with the whites of his eyes annular and glittering in the face almost eclipse around them—wouldn't they furnish a study for an Artist? 'He's somebody's boy.' Go back farther than that after a principle, if you can. Adduce a better argument for equal rights and 'good will to men,' if you know how—back to the mother that bore him—back to the mother of us all—the great dusty bosom of our common humanity. Seek a more appropriate embodiment of 'the law of might,' if you know where, than our actor number two presented, as muttering and cowardly he relinquished his prey; and fish out from the gutter anywhere, a sadder emblem of degradation than the least of the three will furnish. Somebody's boy indeed!—crat dled in sorrow, lapped in poverty, growing up to think that the law of the worm is the law for him: turn upon the foot that crushes and that such is life.—[N. Y. Tribune.

A certain nightingale sat upon a high tree, pouring from its tiny throat a flood of most beautiful and exquisite melody. Everything in nature seemed hushed to an almost solemn silence, as if fearful of interrupting or losing a single note of its ravishing harmony. On, on it sung in such heavingly strains that an angel might have stooped to listen with delight. The song ceased and a raven and jackass thus criticised the singer:—"For my part, says the raven, I think the voice is deficient in strength and power. I do not like it. So it is, said the jackass. True, it may be well enough for those who like such things, but for my part I like the mellow bray. There are some persons in the world who like the "mellow bray" because it comes nearest their own character and comprehension.

AN ACTIVE YOUNG LADY.—The present editress of the magazine conducted by the factory girls at Lowell—a Miss Farley—writes to a friend; "I am proprietor of the New England Offering. I do all the publishing, editing, canvassing, and as it is bound at my office, I can, in a hurry, help fold, cut covers, stich, &c. I have a little girl to assist me in the folding, stitching, &c.; the rest after it comes from the printer's hands, is all my own work. I employ no agents, and depend upon no one for assistance. LARGE FIRE IN CHICAGO.—The machine shop of P. W. Gates & Co., was burned down on the night of the 7th. Besides the principal building, materials for sixty railroad cars were burned. The most of the machinery, with considerable stock, was in a building which escaped. The loss amounts to $12,000, and no insurance.

MORMONISM.—The N. Y. Times says that Mr. Ferris, late Secretary of the Treasury of Utah, just returned, reports that the Mormon Rulers are even more profligate and deprived than has been represented. Brigham Young, he says, has forty wives. Men and Women, too generally, are utterly debased.

The receipts of Jullien's Concert for the benefit of New Orleans sufferers, are reported at about $1,800. The house was brilliant, the applause overwhelming.

Facts for the Curious.

The human ear is so extremely sensitive as to be capable of appreciating sounds which last only the 24-000th part of a second.

When a small fish pond is frozen over, the fishes soon perish, unless holes be broken in the ice in order to admit a supply of fresh air.

In the reign of Queen Mary of England, a proclamation was made ordering "that no person should wear shoes above six inches across the toes."

The sucking apparatus of the Lampery is capable of exerting an adhesive force so great, that a fish of this kind has been taken out of the water with a stone, weighing ten or twelve pounds sticking to its mouth.

It has been calculated that more than three hundred pounds of blood pass through a man's heart during every hour of life. The average quantity of blood in an adult male is about 30 pounds; so that the same blood, we might say, passes through the heart ten times in an hour.

A wheel, made to revolve with such velocity as to render its spokes invisible, is seen, when illuminated by a flash of lightning, for a moment with every spoke distinct, as if at rest. The reason of this is, the flash has come and gone before the wheel had time to make a preceptible advance.

There is secreted in some seed, between the embryo and seed-skin, a solid fleshy body, or horny substance, called albumen. It is intended for the nourishment of the young embryo, when it first springs into life—the part that furnishes the flour of corn, the flesh of the cocoa nut, and a great portion of the seeds of coffee, are albumen. Botanists have remarked the singular fact that this substance is never deleterious, no matter how poisonous the plant may be by which it is borne.

The tenuity of the matter composing the oderous effluvia, which gives rise to the sensation of smell, is so extraordinary as to exceed all human comprehension. For instance, if a minute quantity of musk be enclosed for a few hours in a gold box, and then taken out, and the box, clensed as carefully as posible with soap and water, that box will retain the odor of musk for many years; and yet the nicest ballance will not detect the slightest increase of its weight from this impregnation.

A Happy Family.—At the farm of Mr. Monroe, a few miles above this city, there is a cat with a family of three kittens and three rabbits. The young rabbits were brought in by the cat, one at a time, probably as food for her kittens, but she adopted them and makes no difference between them and her own young ones.—ad. Ind. Courier.

Richmondville Union Seminary, and FEMALE COLLEGIATE INSTITUTE.

REV. J. L. G. McKOWN, A. M., PRESIDENT.

This Institution is located in the village of Richmondville Schoharie Co., N. Y., 44 miles from Albany. The buildings are all new, and of sufficient capacity to accommodate 350 boarders. They are furnished with seven large recitation rooms, all of which are fine plaster blackboards.—There are also six Music Rooms, and a large, convenient, well lighted room for oil painting. The Trustees have also, at considerable expense, fitted up a BATH-ROOM in connection with each department.

Richmondville is one of those retired and delightful villages for which New York is so justly noted. Its situation is romantic and healthful. The morals and intelligence of its inhabitants are pure and elevated. And to such as may seek for the advantages of their Institution, the Trustees hope to offer not only a safe resort, but a pleasant home.

The Collegiate Institute.—The Trustees of the Union Seminary being convinced from their knowledge of what constitute the true elements of success in any literary institution, and from the grade of scholars attending the Seminary, and from the scholarship necessarily required by the times that a full and normal course of study ought to be prescribed, particularly for young ladies—resolved to establish, in connection with the Seminary, and under the same corporation and Faculty, a Female Collegiate Institute.

They propose, in this Institute, to afford facilities for as complete and thorough a course of study as most of the Colleges of our land.

They do not expect to make prodigies of the girls committed to their care, but they hope, by thorough discipline and proper culture, to better prepare them to fill woman's sphere.

ACCESS.

The village is connected with Albany by plank road.—The Albany and Susquehannah Railroad will also pass through the place. There are daily mails from Albany, Catskill and and Oneonta.

FACULTY.

The Trustees feel confident, that with a thorough and efficient Faculty of twelve Professors and Teachers, they will be fully able to meet the high expectations entertained of this School. The Departments of French, Music and Oil Painting, as the others offer advantages second to those of no similar Institution.

A NORMAL CLASS.

Arrangements will be made for a teacher's class, to commence with the term. The course of study pursued will be that laid down by the Regents of the University of the State of New York.

EXPENSES.

Board, lodging room furnished, washing and fuel, per week, $1.25. Tuition in common English branches, per quarter, $3. Board and Tuition in common English branches per quarter, $17. Tuition and board will be required quarterly in advance, and this requisition will be strictly adhered to.

TERMS AND VACATIONS.

The Institution will reopen on the 20th of October. All students intending to enter, should be present at that time, in order to commence with the classes. They may enter, however, at any time, but will be charged to the whole time, unless entering at or after the commencement of the last half quarter in which case charge will be made for the half quarter entered upon.

N. B.—Students will be carried at the commencement and close of each term, from and to Albany and Canajoharie free of expense, board excepted. The stages will start from the Mansion House in Broadway and the hotel at Canajoharie, at 9 o'clock, A. M., on Wednesday, the 19th of October.

Persons desirous of further information may apply to the Rev. J. L. G. McKown, or either of the following gentlemen:—Augustus W. Smith, L. L. D., Pres. Wesleyan University, Middletown Ct.; Ira Harris, L. L. D., 8 Exchange Building, Albany, N. Y.; Rev. Stephen D. Brown, Troy, N. Y.; Wm. B. Sprague, D. D., 51 Washington street, Albany, N. Y.; Rev. THE MARRIAGE STATE;

Shall Happiness and Health, or Misery and Sickness, attend it?

MOST STARTLING CONSIDERATIONS!

Reflections for the Thoughtful.

Strange that countless human beings exist and drag through life as do the beasts of the field, or the insects of the earth, evincing no more thought or reflection than though the noble faculties of mind were not vouchsafed to them.

Many such are husbands and fathers, upon whom are dependent the health, the well-being, and the happiness of a confiding and affectionate wife, with perhaps a family of children.

HOW OFTEN IT HAPPENS THAT THE

WIFE LINGERS FROM YEAR TO YEAR

In that pitiable condition as not even for one day to feel the happy and exhilerating influence incident to the enjoyment of health.

She may not be an invalid confined to her bed, or even to her room; as her pride, ambition and energy induce and nerve her to take personal charge of her household, even when her health will not admit of it; but she is nevertheless perceptibly sinking from day to day, and always ailing.

Thus, day after day, and month after month transpire. Her health daily sinks, till finally even the hope of recovery no longer remains. And thus

THE BLOOMING BRIDE,

But a few years ago in the flush of health and youth, and buoyancy of spirits, rapidly, and apparently inexplicably, becomes a feeble, sickly, debilitated wife, with frame emaciated, nerves unstrung, spirits depressed, countenance bearing the impress of suffering, and an utter physical and mental prostration.

Sometimes this deplorable change may and does arise from organic or constitutional causes. But oftener, by far oftener, to gross and inexcusable ignorance of the simplest and plainest rules of health as connected with the marriage state, the violation of which entails disease, suffering and misery, not only to the wife, but often from the Parents.

And must this continue? Shall we be wise in all that concerns the cattle of our fields, our horses, our sheep, our cows, our oxen, the nature and character of the soil we possess, the texture and quality of our goods and merchandise; but in all that concerns ourselves as human beings, with human functions and passions, subject to great derangement, involving our future peace and happiness—in all that concerns the health and welfare of the wife of our affections, and the mother of our children; in all that concerns the mental and physical well being of those children, we should be immersed in the darkest and most

BENIGHTED IGNORANCE,

AS CULPABLE AS INEXCUSABLE!

How long shall this ignorance prevail so productive of its bitter fruits? How long shall the wife and mother be ignorant of the nature, character and causes of the various womb and sexual complaints, embittering her days by suffering—suffering often prolonged to years, eventuating in a complication of diseases utterly and hopelessly incurable? Shall we for ever close our eyes to the results of physiological science by which we may arrive at an understanding of ourselves as men and women, subject to serious life-long enduring diseases, and perpetuating them to our children.

LET EVERY WIFE AND HUSBAND PONDER!

No husband or wife need be ignorant of what concerns them most to know to secure their health and happiness. That knowledge is contained in a little work entitled

FRAUD!

ALL who want Axes of the real Collins & Co. make should be particular to notice the stamps, as there are various counterfeits and imitations stamped Collins and labelled much like ours, which are fraudulently sold in some parts of the United States as our manufacture. They are made in different parts of the country by various axe-makers, and are generally of very inferior quality. The genuine Collins axes, which have acquired such an extensive reputation, are invariably stamped "COLLINS & CO. HARTFORD," and each axe has a printed label with my signature.—It is now more than Twenty-five years since we commenced the business with the stamp of "Collins & Co. Hartford," and I do not know of any other axe-maker by the name of Collins in the United States.

LEANDER BABBIT'S
TRUSS OFFICE.

The latest and most approved Trusses; Female Supporters; Do. with shoulder braces attached; spinal elevator for curvature of the spine and projection of the shoulder blade. Suspensory shoulder braces. This instrument is so constructed that it not only acts the part of shoulder braces but carries the bell of the ladies' skirt on their shoulders; and, hence remedies the evil consequent to carrying them on the hips and sides. For gentlemen it not only serves for a shoulder brace, but acts the part of suspenders.

As to the importance and usefulness of the above named instruments, and their beneficial effects, their peculiar merit and superiority over other instruments of the same name, I need not say anything. They are so well known by physicians, and the multitude of persons who have had occasion to test them in this and the direction of country, that I deem it not important to introduce a long catalogue of certificates; yet I have abundant evidence in my possession to justify me in all I claim or affirm, and deem it a privilege to give references to any who wish to make inquiries.

Office at Keeseville in the building on the corner of Main and Front street, opposite the Bank, up stairs.

Ladies will be waited on at my dwelling by Mrs. Babbit whose experience in adjusting braces and supporters qualifies her to give perfect satisfaction. 482—3m

CONCURRENT RESOLUTION PROPOSING AN AMENDMENT TO THE CONSTITUTION.

Resolved, (if the Senate concur,) That the following amendment be proposed to the constitution of this state and referred to the legislature to be chosen at the next general election of senators, and be published for three months previous to making such choice, in pursuance to the provisions of the first section of the thirteenth article, of said constitution.

Substitute for section three of article seven the following:

After paying the said expenses of collection, superintendence and repairs of the canals, and the sums appropriated by the first and second sections of this article, there shall be appropriated and set apart in each fiscal year out of the surplus revenues of the canals, as a sinking fund, a sum sufficient to pay the interest as it falls due, and extinguish the principal within eighteen years of any loan made under this section, and if the said sinking fund shall not be sufficient to redeem any part of the principal at the stipulated times of payment, or to pay any part of the interest of such loans as stipulated, the means to satisfy any such deficiency shall be procured on the credit of the said sinking fund. After complying with the foregoing provisions, there shall be paid annually out of said revenues into the treasury of the state two hundred thousand dollars, to defray the necessary expenses of government. The remainder shall, in each fiscal year, be applied to meet appropriations for the enlargement and completion of the canals mentioned in this section, until the said canals shall be completed. In each fiscal year thereafter the remainder shall be disposed of in such manner as the legislature may direct, but shall at no time be anticipated or pledged for more than one year in advance. The legislature shall annually, during the next four years, appropriate to the enlargement of the Erie, the Oswego, the Cayuga and Seneca canals, and to the completion of the Black River and Genesee Valley canals, and for the enlargement of the locks of the Champlain canal, whenever from dilapidation or decay it shall be necessary to rebuild them, a sum not exceeding two millions two hundred and fifty thousand dollars. The remainder of the revenues of the canals for the current fiscal year in which such appropriation is made, shall be applied to meet such appropriation; and if the same shall be deemed insufficient, the legislature shall at the same session provide for the deficiency by loan. The legislature shall also borrow one million and five hundred thousand dollars to refund to the holders of the canal revenue certificates issued under the provisions of chapter four hundred and eighty-five of the laws of the year one thousand eight hundred and fifty-one, the amount received into the treasury thereon. But no interest to accrue after July first, one thousand eight hundred and fifty-five, shall be paid on such Certificates. The provisions of section twelve of this article requiring every law for borrowing money to be submitted to the people, shall not apply to the loans authorized by this section. No part of the revenues of the canals or of the funds borrowed under this section, shall be paid or applied upon or in consequence of any alleged contract made under chapter four hundred and eighty-five of the laws of the year one thousand eight hundred and fifty one, except to pay for work done or materials furnished prior to the first day of June, one thousand eight hundred and fifty-two. The rates of toll on persons and property transported on the canal shall not be reduced below those for the year one thousand eight hundred and fifty-two, except by the canal board, with the concurrence of the legislature.—All contracts for work or materials on any canal, shall be made with the person who shall offer to do or provide the same at the lowest price, with adequate security for their performance.

Y.

The great success attending the use of Doctor L.'s remedies in secret diseases, and the many remarkable cures daily effected by him in recent as well as old lingering attacks, is conclusive evidence that the

SICK AND UNFORTUNATE

who by indulging in secret habits have injured their health and prostrated their intellectual faculties, and thereby deprived themselves of the pleasure of married life, should consult Dr Lispenard without a moment's delay. Hundreds have been restored to health, society and friends, under my peculiar mode of treatment, although vast sums of money had been sacrificed without any benefit. My remedy for this disease is pleasant to take, has no offensive smell and

"EVERY FAMILY SHOULD HAVE A COPY."

20,000 Copies sold in less than 5 months. A new edition, revised and improved, just issued.

Dr. Hunter's Medical Manual and Hand Book for the Afflicted—Containing an outline of the origin, progress. treatment and cure of every form of disease, contracted by promiscuous sexual intercourse, by self abuse or by sexual excess, with advice for their prevention, written in a familiar style. avoiding all medical technicalities, and everything that would offend the ear of decency, from the result of some twenty years successful practice, exhlusively devoted to the cure of diseases of a delicate or private nature.

To which is added, receipts for the cure of the above diseases, and a treatise on the causes, symptoms and cure of the Fever and Ague.

Testimony of the Prof. of Obstetrics in Penn. College, Philadelphia —"Dr. Hunter's Medical Manual."—The author of this work unlike the majority of those works who advertise to cure the diseases of which it treats, is a graduate of one of the best Colleges in the United States. It affords me pleasure to recommend him to the unfortunate, or to the victim of malpractice, as a successful and experienced practitioner, in whose honor and integrity they may place the greatest confidence.

JOSEPH LONGSHORE M. D.

From A Woodward M. D., of Penn. University, Philadelphia—It gives me pleasure to add my testimony to the professional ability of the author of the "Medical Manual." Numerous cases of diseases of the Genital Organs, some of them of long standing have come under my notice, in which his skill has been manifest in restoring to perfect health, in some instances where the patient has been considered beyond medical aid. In the treatment of Seminal weakness, or disarrangement of the functions produced by Self-abuse, or Excess of venery, I do not know his superior in the profession. I have been acquainted with the Author some thirty years, and deem it no more than justice to him as well as a kindness to the unfortunate victim of early indiscretion. to recommend him as one, in whose professional skill and integrity they may safely confide themselves. ALFRED WOODWARD, M.D.

"This is, without exception, the most comprehensive and intelligible work published on the class of diseases of which it treats. Avoiding all technical terms, it addresses itself to the reason of its readers. It is free from all objectionable matter, and no parent, however fastidious, can object to placing it in the hands of his sons. The author has devoted many years to the treatment of the various complaints treated of, and with too little breath to puff,' and 'too little presumption to impose,' he has offered to the world at the merely nominal price of 25 cents, the fruits of some 20 years most successful practice."—Herald.

"No teacher or parent should be without the knowledge imparted in this invaluable work. It would save years of pain, mortification and sorrow to the youth under their charge."—People's Advocate.

A Presbyterian clergyman in Ohio, in writing of "Hunter's Medical Manual," says: "Thousands upon thousands of our youth, by evil example and influence of the passions, have been led into the habit of self-pollution without realizing the sin and fearful consequences upon themselves and their posterity. The constitutions of thousands who are raising families have been enfeebled, if not broken down, and the do not know the cause or the cure. Anything that can be done so to enlighten and influence the public mind as to check, and ultimately to remove this wide-spread source of human wretchedness, would confer the greatest blessing next to the religion of Jesus Christ, on the present and coming generations. Intemperance (or the use of intoxicating drinks,) though it has slain thousands upon thousands, is not a greater scourge to the human race. Accept my thanks on behalf of the afflicted, and, believe me, your co-worker in the good work you are so actively engaged in."

One copy, (securely enveloped,) will be forwarded free of postage to any part of the United States for 25 cents, or 6 copies for $1.—Address (post paid) COSDEN & Co., publishers, Box 196, Philadelphia. 478y

OUR CHILDREN:

How Shall we Save Them?

BY T. S. ARTHUR.

CHAPTER VI.

CONCLUDED.

What sadder spectacle is there than that of a man, in the very prime of life, fitted in every way for usefulness, and surrounded by all that can make life pleasant falling beneath the paralyzing touch of the monster intemperance, and dragging those who love him, down into the deep places of wretchedness? Such a spectacle was presented by Henry Greenfield, when he entered his thirty-third year. And so changed had he become, that he would not permit his father or mother to make the slightest allusion to his evil habit without an angry retort; thus cutting off all the hopes they had cherished of one day being able to show him his folly in such a light as to win him from his evil way.

As for his wife, from the day her first word of remonstrance was thrown back upon her, she had never ventured upon the experiment of a second. From every one, she carefully concealed the extent of his fall from sobriety, and even when questioned by her own mother, evaded all direct answers. But, so rapidly did he begin to move in his downward way, that her long suffering spirit was aroused into a wild alarm, under the influence of which she called one day to see the elder Mrs. Greenfield, and unburdened, for the first time, her troubled feelings. The mother heard her weeping. But she had no healing balm for her wounded heart; no hopeful words for her drooping spirit. She had nothing to give but tears

After Agnes went away, Mrs. Greenfield held a long conference with her husband. But no light dawned upon them. On the next day, Henry took his two oldest boys, of whom he continued to be exceedingly fond, to an exhibition especially designed for children. After leaving the exhibition room, he brought them into the store, which was not far off, to see their grandfather. Two lovelier children are not often seen; nor were any more tenderly beloved than they. Their father brought them into a little retired office, especially assigned to the use of the elder Mr. Greenfield. After they had been caressed, and had related the curious and wonderful things they had seen, they ran out to talk with the young men in the store, and the father and son were left alone.

'Dear little creatures!' said the elder Mr. Greenfield, after a pause.

Henry, who was entirely sober, affirmed the sentiment. There was another brief pause, and the elder Mr. Greenfield said—

'But my heart aches, whenever I see them.'

His son looked surprised.

'Yes, Henry, it aches. Sit down, and I will tell you why.'

The young man hesitated. He felt that another remonstrance was coming, and he wished nothing said on the old subject.

'Sit down, my son,' said the old gentleman; 'I wish to tell you a secret that I ought long since to have divulged. But, shame has kept me silent.'

Henry sat down, and looked wonderingly into the face of his father.

'I need not ask you whether you love your children,' began Mr. Greenfield, 'I know that they are exceedingly dear to you I know that you would do almost any thing to secure their good. And yet, Henry, you have cursed them with a direful curse.'

'Me? Father! Are you beside yourself!'

'No, my son! I speak but the words of truth and soberness. Listen to me, and I will unburden my heart of something that

'Surely, I can do no less,' replied the son, who was taken altogether by surprise at his father's strange words.

'Every body says your little Henry bears to you a remarkable resemblance,' said Mr. Greenfield.

'I know. And I can see in his disposition, already, traits resembling my own.'

'Why is this?'

'I am his father.'

'And, therefore, he is like you. Yes, that is the simple truth You are aware of a habit you have of placing the fingers of your right hand against your temple, when musing?'

'I never thought about it. But I believe it is so.'

'You are doing it now.'

'So I am. I've observed that Henry occasionally does the same thing.'

'True. Look at him now, listening to something one of the young men is saying.'

'I see. His fingers are on his temple.'

'Why is it?'

The young man looked thoughtful, but did not answer.

'You also have a slight twitching in one of your eyebrows.'

'I know; and Henry has the same.'

'He walks like you—he stands like you—in fact, he is your miniature image. Every one remarks this.'

'True.'

'Why is it?'

'I am his father.'

'Yes. But you did not give him a body. Why, then, in body and in actions of his body, does he resemble you in so remarkable a degree?'

The son again looked thoughtful.

'Is it now because he derives from you that spiritual form into which God breathes the breath of life, and which takes to itself a material body whereby to act in the visible world of nature? And if this be so, will not the form you give possess all the qualities and characteristics of its progenitors; and, in clothing itself in a material substance, do it as represent those qualities and distinguishing features?'

'That seems to be the explanation.'

'Depend upon it, Henry, it is the true one. Every father thus transmits to his offspring the qualities of his own mind, and these manifest themselves in a body with a peculiar and corresponding form. This is the reason why a child resembles, in body, his parents. If in the body, then, there be a resemblance, how much more so in the mind, or soul, that forms the body? Do you comprehend what I say?'

'Clearly.'

'Very well. You can then see, as a practical and real something—not as a vague theory—the doctrine that children inherit the mental qualities of their parents; be they good or evil?'

'Oh, certainly. I never doubted that this was so; although I have never had occasion to think much about it.'

'You can then clearly understand, that the greatest blessing parents can bestow upon their children is a legacy of good affections?'

'Explain what you mean by this in other words.'

'If our children inherit the tendencies to good or evil that rule in our mind—if our habits descend to them as heir looms—how all important is it that we should, for their sakes, cultivate good affections, and reform all evil habits! For, if we do not do so, our children that are born while we indulge in such evils, will inevitably be cursed with an inclination for the same things.'

'What a doctrine!' exclaimed the young man, as he drew a long, quivering breath.

'Yet as true as that the sun shines in heaven,' said Mr. Greenfield solemnly.

'I cannot doubt it,' was the musing, serious reply.

'And now, Henry,' said the father, and his voice was slightly agitated; 'let me bring this home to your mind and heart by evidences of a most painful and heart aching character. You are my son, and, as such have been cursed by your father.'

'Do not say so!' interrupted the young man, in a deprecating voice.

'Listen!' continued his father, 'and let every word I say be well considered. For many years before you were born, I indulged a love for stimulating liquors, until it grew to such a habit that it became my chief pleasure. You have, yourself, seen how freely I used wine and brandy every day; but, you did not know that, for years, I left the dinner table so near to intoxication, that I would have staggered in the street. But it was even so. Is it any wonder, then, that I cursed you with an inclination to the very evil that I had indulged? But, I did not understand how sad an inheritance I had left my child, until it was too late to guard him from the approach of exciting causes My own hand placed temptation before him. I not only bequeathed a natural inclination to indulge in drinking to excess; but I kindled the fiery desire in his bosom ere reason came, with its calm dictation, to restrain him. I cannot wonder that he fell! I cannot wonder that his appetite had more influence over him than the tears and entreaties of his parents and friends! God help him! for there is no power on earth that is strong enough to save!'

The very agitation felt by Mr. Greenfield, closed for a time his utterance. His son made no reply, but sat fixed as a statue, with his eyes upon the floor. In a few minutes Mr. Greenfield resumed, but in a lower and calmer, yet exceedingly earnest voice.

'Henry! If the curse had been permitted to die with you; if the sin of the father had not descended to the third generation who had been struck with a sudden pain.

'If,' went on Mr. Greenfield, 'you had not fallen into the same dreadful evil, and entailed upon your children the same dreadful curse——.'

'Oh, father! Say no more! Say no more!' ejaculated Henry, in a voice of agony, rising as he spoke. 'Your words almost madden me.'

And with this he turned off abruptly, and going into the store, took his children by the hand and led them away.

'Father,' said little Henry, taking hold of a wine glass that stood by his plate, a few minutes after the family of younger Mr. Greenfield assembled around the dinner table on that day—'father, can't John fill my glass now?'

The custom had been to let Henry have a glass of light wine with his dessert. But the child's taste had been already morbidly excited, and he craved the stimulating draught even before the usual time.

The words of old Mr. Greenfield had been, as it were, burning themselves into the mind of his son since the moment of their utterance. He had tried to disbelieve them; but that was a vain effort. He felt that all was but too true; and that he had, in his hand, the key which unlocked the mystery of his own insatiable thirst. Nothing had been decided in his mind up to the moment when the request of his child came with a startling corroboration of all he had heard.

"Say, father! Can't John fill my glass now?" came again, ere he had found time to reply, in fitting words, to the first request,

"No, my dear," he answered, with forced composure of voice. Then turning to the waiter, he said—

"John, you may remove the wine and brandy to the sideboard."

The waiter obeyed; but merely placed the decanters on the sideboard."

"Lock them up," said Mr. Greenfield.

"Can't I have some wine?" asked, again, the little boy, looking really distressed at the prospect of losing his accustomed glass.

"No, my dear. It is not good for you," replied his father, kindly.

"But you drink it, father. Isn't it good for you?"

"No, dear," replied Mr. Greenfield, after a slight pause. "It is not good for either of us, and we wont drink any more of it."

Mrs. Greenfield looked up surprised. But her husband avoided her eyes. What a light went over her face.

The child seemed but half satisfied. When the dessert came, he would eat a little, and then finger his glass, with the air of one who, for want of something could not enjoy the good things spread before him, and this was continued until the meal was finished. On leaving the table, his fruit and pastry were but half eaten.

All this his father observed, and with deeply painful emotions. He saw that the perverted appetite which he had received from his father, was entailed upon his own child, and with an increased susceptibility of excitement.

"How shall I save him!" came almost aloud from his lips, as he closed the door of his chamber after him, and threw himself upon his bed—not to sleep, as usual, but to think—perfectly sober after leaving the dinner-table, and for the first time in many years

We cannot follow the unhappy man through the long and anxious period that elapsed from the day of his reform—he never placed the cup of confusion again to his lips—until his children entered the world as men, subject to all its thousand temptations. Enough for the practical bearing of our story to say, that, after fully explaining to his wife the nature and extent of the danger with which their offspring was surrounded, he united with her in an unwearied guardianship over them, that made the removal of stimulating drinks from their sight and taste, ever a thing of primary importance. Yet, with all this, he knew, too well, that they must ever be in danger. That for them to touch, taste or handle, was to put their souls in jeopardy. Sometimes, in moments of a more vivid realization of the peril that surrounded them, he wished that they had died as infants. But, after years brought his reward; and he saw his sons enter the world temperate from principle. He did not, however, let them go forth, as men, without giving them, in order to make assurance doubly sure, the history of himself and father which we have related; and enjoining them to guard their offspring as he had guarded them.

"For," said he, "intemperance is a sin that is visited upon the children even unto the third and fourth generation.'

And, let the writer add, so is every other indulged, thereby confirmed, evil principle of the mind. If we would save our children from the vice of intemperance, let us be temperate ourselves, and thus give them healthy moral as well as physical constitutions. If we would save them from theft, let us be honest in all our dealings with our fellow men—not honest merely in a legal sense, but honest in our very intentions. If we would not have our children tempted to commit murder while in the heat of passion, let us beware how we indulge a feeling of hatred towards others; for, we give to our children the forms of the very affections by which we are ruled. If we are honest, virtuous, chaste and temperate inclinations; but, if we our neighbors—if we are covetous— are impure—if we indulge in the intemperance, or in any other evi ningly devised fable—but a most solemn and important truth.

Men labor diligently to lay up this world's goods with which to bless their children; but who thinks of denying himself the gratfication of this evil lusts and passions in order to bless them in a higher, truer and more real sense.

But enough. If what is already written fail to impress the mind of the reader, further argument would be useless. And so we cast this seed into the minds of the people, believing it to be good seed, and trusting that a portion will fall into good ground. If no tidings of the harvest ever reach us, we will yet believe that the seed has taken root somewhere and yielded its proper fruit.

I am on the Champlain, in the good steamer America, under the command of Captain O'Grady. A stauncher vessel or more gentlemanly officer cannot be found afloat. It is night, and I sit with my young friend Lee, on the deck of the boat, looking away off to the left, where the mountains of Essex stand boldly out against the sky, like the towers of some old baronial castle. On the right, dim and shadowy, are the Green Mountains, looming up in the distance, moveless and solemn, like gigantic buttments supporting the arches of the vast heavens, while away down in the still blue waters, the stars seems to be looking up at their fellow in the sky above us. The night is calm and warm. No ripple is on the lake, and the leaves stand still on the trees that lines the shore; but a pleasant breeze is fanning us, while the vessel cleaves its way through the sleeping waters. Every little while we hear the splash of a fish, as he leaps in his gleesomeness above the surface, and a rushing sound follows us as the swell of the boat breaks in a ceaseless wave, along the beach. We are passing Ticonderoga, and I seem to see old Ethan Allen and his Green Mountain boys, rising like spectres from the ruins of the ancient fort, and hear his demand for its surrender, "in the name of the great Jehovah and the Continental Congress!" I see the astonished Briton yielding his sword to these untimely intruders upon his repose. I see the flag of old England lowered from the staff, where it had floated for years, and I hear the shout of triumph, the loud hurrah, that goes up with that of our country. That fort which was then regarded as one of the safeguards against invasion, a barrier to the advance of the foe, has passed into history. It would be useless now, were it bristling with cannon and peopled with soldiers, instead of being a ruin over which the ploughshare has passed. I have no regrets as I look upon its ruins; I would that the time had come when fortified places and the strongholds of war were all a desolation, and armed men had thrown away their weapons for the destruction of human life, and become peaceful tillers of the soil. * * *

I am at Keeseville. It is a pleasant town on the banks of the Au Sable river. It is a quiet place, away from the thunder of railroads, the roar of the steampipe, or the scream of the steam whistle; but you hear, day and night, other sounds quite as indicative of civilization, quite as suggestive of progress. The blows of the monster trip hammer, the ceaseless rumbling of great waterwheels, the puffing of great bellows, and the clank of machinery, are never silent, save on the Sabbath. The world knows but little of the natural wealth of this portion of the State, or the extent of its manufactures. On this little river, within fifteen miles of Keeseville, are made over eight thousand tons of nails alone—not from iron manufactured abroad, but from ore dug from the bowels of the earth here. It will be remembered that this vast amount constitutes but a portion of the iron manufactured here. You will hear the ponderous hammer as it makes the iron into bars of all sizes, and you will see it piled in huge quantities in the store-houses connected with the works, while teams are constantly employed drawing it away to Port Kent, the depot where it starts on its journey by water to the southern and eastern markets. The manufacturers here, dig their own ore, seperate, and wash it. They burn their own charcoal, and from the ore that is taken from the mines, they go clear through with the manufacture of iron without the use of a single material that is not produced on the spot, or within the township. The ore goes in at one end of the works and comes out in nails or finished bars at the other. The rushing sound of the great bellows, the rumbling of the water-wheel, the thundering blows of the trip hammer, and the clank, clank, of the nail-making machines, are all mingled on the ear at once.

It was a pleasant thing to see one of these great workshops in the night time. The glare of the forges, the intense light of the chunks of the iron as they came at a white heat from the blazing furnace, to see them pass through the immense rollers as they were formed into fitness for nail making, coming out from the pressing machine longer and longer, increasing in length, stretching out and running along the floor like gigantic fiery serpents, while the stalwart operatives handled them with iron tongs, as if they were harmless things. I visited one of these works at midnight, our among the furnaces and looking upon these strong as they converted seeming of the most useful articles this country. The river goes roaring and plunging, and cascading, more than a mile, through a chasm some thirty feet wide, on either side of which the rocks rise in perpendicular precipices from one to two hundred feet in height. On the top of these lodges you may stand, on the very verge of the great high walls, and look away down upon the boiling waters as they go surging and roaring on their way. This chasm does not seem to have been worn out by the river in its everlasting flow, but to have been made by the parting of the hills. The rocks on one side are counterparts of the rocks on the other, as if pulled apart. Rock matches rock, and shape is fitted to shape. An indentation on the one side, is matched by a prominence on the other, and you can see plainly that if the river could be withdrawn, and the chasm pressed together, the two sides would fit like the halves of an apple that had been cleft by the blade of a knife. Above Keeseville are evidences that a lake once covered what is now a beautiful valley stretching away for miles to the southwest, and through which the Au Sable now flows. Where now are rich farms, was once the bottom of this lake, and fishes sported above the fields that are now rich meadows, or covered with grain. Some mighty power, centuries upon centuries ago, struggling in the remote depths of the earth, upheaved these hills, till the surface parted, leaving this Gorge, through which the pent up waters rushed, emptying the lake of its contents, and giving its foundations to the world as a place for man to beautify, over which the ploughshare should pass, and his flocks and herds feed.

In company with a friend, I went some three miles west of the village, to what is called Hallock Hill, to see one of those quiet landscapes, upon which the eye loves to rest. It was not a rugged mountain scenery, where giant ranges stretch away, and tall peaks lift their bald heads to the clouds. There was no desolation, no wild and rocky sterility, but a beautiful, level plain, a valley reaching away for miles, rich in agricultural products, and teeming with the evidences of wealth and civilization. Away off to the right was the Champlain. The spires of Plattsburgh could be seen in the distance, seeming to rise like white pillars from the depths of a belt of forest, while in front of them can be viewd the spot where was fought the naval battle of Lake Champlain, in the last war. The beautiful landscape before me was the valley of the little Au Sable. It was settled by Quakers, men of peace, who till the ground in quiet, and never go up to the wars with weapons of destruction in their hands. The spot was pointed out to me where the peaceful people, startled by the booming cannon, went up and stood to view the conflict on the Lake, when Mc Donough and Downie fought against each other. These men of peace were patriots. They loved their country, and while from principle they refrained from the shedding of human blood, yet their hearts and their prayers were with their countrymen, against their country's foes. When the smoke of the battle floated away, and the triumph of American arms was manifest, there went up a shout of gladness, a loud hurrah from these honest Quakers, which showed that the old man was strong within them.

In plain view from where I stood is the little Island on which the killed in that memorable battle were buried. There, in the midst of the lake, side by side, in amity, rest the bones of those who struggled against each other on that day of mortal strife. Death is a queller of animosities and the hands that struck at each other in life, are quiet enough in the grave. Brave men are sleeping on that little island. It should be regarded as consecrated ground, and a tall monument should be erected to their memory. It should be made to speak of the noble daring of the men who perilled and lost their lives for their country. There are no rich men buried there. No titled men. They were the sailors, men who stood by the great guns, and whose breasts were bared against the foe. They were what the world calls common men, and who, had they survived the battle would have lived and died without fame; but they are just the men who win victories, and bring fame to commodores and generals, and upon whose bravery hangs the result of the battles. Over the bones of these brave men buried here, these poor men, these sailors, these "common men," should be erected what will save them from desecration, and tell to the far off generations how stoutly they fought, and how bravely they fell in the cause of their country.

I went in company with my friend Col. Barton to the Palmer Hill Ore bed. This hill which supplies at present most of the forges with ore, rises from a level plain to the height of perphaps two hundred feet, in a round conical form, having a diameter at its base of from one and a half to two miles. The main opening to the mines, or rather where the principle vein cropped out, and where it was first worked, is near the top of the hill. The vein pitched downward at an angle of some forty-five degrees, and has been worked a vast distance into the hill. As I approached one of these vast openings, a stream of cold air came up which in the sultriness of the heat above was exceedingly refreshing. I stood looking away down into what to me were unknown depths, where the darkness was impenetrable, when a sound came up from the very centre of the hill louder to my ears than a hundred cannon, and went bellowing, and roaring, and shaking the earth as it reverberated among the It was a blast made in a remote part of the mines. We entered the hill by a tunnel of some three hundred feet in length, by which teams enter to draw out the ore that is raised from the deep foundations of the mines. We found several wagons in the interior of the mountain, being loaded with ore.—Above us was a lofty arch sustained by gigantic stone pillars, and supporting a roof of perhaps a hundred feet of solid rock, through which at intervals, the light came down through great chimneys, as it were, and through which we could look out upon the clear sky.—All around us were openings that stretched away, hundreds and hundreds of feet down, through the gloomy depths of which, the lamps of a hundred miners twinkled like tiny little stars in the darkness. We could hear their hammers, as they drilled into the solid ore, and ever and anon, would come the deafning roar of the blasting, shaking the arches by its detonations, and dying away among the caverned depths. A ladder was visible, down which I was invited to descend to where the little lights twinkled. But I declined. I prefer daylight and a firm footing, to a possible tumble of hundreds of feet among broken rocks, and being dashed to pieces in the darkness. While we were in the hill, the hour for dinner was announced. The little lights at once began to move, and in a few minutes, scores of miners began to emerge from the darkness, up the ladders, covered with the black debris of the mines, and looking like an army of Cyclops fresh from the forges of Vulcan. I was glad when my foot was on the surface again, and when I stood on the level plain with only the sky above me, with no dark caverns into which to stumble, and no arch of rocks to fall upon me, I felt as Mc Gregor did when his foot was on his native heath. I am reasonably courageous on the earth's surface, where I can see danger if it exists, where I can either meet it or run from it, but my nerves won't stand darkness and gloomy caverns, and dark holes in the ground are my abhorrence. This mine is exhaustless, and the deeper it is wrought the richer and more abundant does the ore become. There are other beds scattered around over this region, which will supply the iron monger for ever, but this is the one from which they at present draw their largest supply.

KEESEVILLE:

Saturday Morning, Sept. 24.

The Union of Lakes, the Union of Lands,
The Union of States none can sever,
The Union of Hearts, the Union of Hands.
The Flag of Our NION--Forever."

Our Flag Unfurled.

We throw our banner to the breeze in advance of the State Convention. With no national or State administrations to endorse, and the past a part of history, we have only to deal with the present and trust to the future in hope. Guided by our own convictions, we present what we think should, and what we hope will be the watchwords of the party in the approaching campaign. It is a banner under which all can rally, and in view of the abuses, and corruptions so prevalent of late, and of the hostility of the administration to the canals, it will attract the attention and command the confidence of the people. That is our banner at least, and we nail it to the mast firm in the belief that we shall have the honor to fight under it till the shout of victory is heard on the Ides of November.

With three times three, we unfurl our banner:

"The Canals and Reform."

"Watchman, what of the Night?"

We said last week, that the Whigs would unite this fall. We have no doubt of it.—Within the last few days we have conversed with leading Whigs and Editors in Troy, Albany, and N. Y., on both sides of the Whig house, and if they will act and talk at the State Convention as they do to us, there can be no trouble. When men sit down and coolly, calmly, and dispassionately compare opinions, there is less cause of difference than they suppose—what they imagine to be insurmountable obstacles to agreement, turn out to be mere "will o' the wisps." We are on intimate and friendly relations with these gentlemen, and we have asked them to tell us seriously, and candidly what they contemplate, what they wish, and what they were willing to do, and they have told us, fully, freely, frankly. We say, then, from personal knowledge, that there is no necessity of difficulty, and there will be none. If a majority of the Convention desire harmony they can have it—cool deliberation—the mediation of mutual friends—the selection of the purest and ablest men who will know no clique nor faction after their election—a determination to resist the control of either faction—a nomination and a platform which neither puts up, nor puts down either faction, and leaves past issues untouched—will accomplish all. Much, if not all, depends upon the country press and the country delegates. For one we shall not be slow in well doing. We sincerely believe our position has been and is one which will enable us to do something towards "spreading the cement of brotherly love," and we mean to use it to the utmost. We appeal to the country press, and to all friendly to success in the coming election, to lend a helping hand.

County Fair.

Altho' the severity of the storm on Wednesday and Thursday, very decidedly affected the exhibition, and prevented any display of stock from the remote sections of the County, the result of the Fair was highly successful and gratifying. The gates were not opened until Friday, but the exercises were extended into Saturday. The show of horses, swine, and sheep, was never surpassed—that of cattle was perhaps not equal to last year. The Manufacturers' Hall was filled with a brilliant display of the beautiful, the ornamental and useful.—The evidences of Home Industry were highly creditable to the taste and skill of our Ladies. Among the most impressive incidents of the exhibition was a kettle and platter by Mr. Barrows, which tradition refers to the "May Flower." Extreme antiquity is stamped upon its appearance.—This very interesting relic excited great attention.

The Address of Mr. Simmons was a most admirable production, replete with patriotic sentiments, with information and wise suggestions. It was an able exposition of the resources and capacity of Northern New York, and a proud vindication of the character and capabilities of Essex County.—We trust the application of the society for a copy for publication will receive from the distinguished speaker an affirmative response.

Every anniversary of this Society seems to augment its value and influence, and to more deeply enlist the sympathy and regard of our whole community.

Loco Foco Judicial Convention.

We copy the following from the Ogdensburgh Sentinel, with an endorsement of the justice of what it says in relation to the location of the Justice for this district. We don't believe it necessary to have all four of the Justices in one extreme portion of the district:

"The Locofoco Judicial Convention, for this district, has, we hear, nominated Judge Willard, of Saratoga, for re-election. The vote stood 8 for Willard, and 7 for Charles G. Myers, Esq., of this village. While we have nothing to say derogatory to the official character, for ability and integrity of Judge Willard, the nomination manifests a singular disregard for the rights of this portion of the district, which has been without a Judge from the adoption of the constitution of 1846.—The location of a Judge in this county is a right, not of the lawyers, but of the people. St. Lawrence, Franklin and Clinton, with a minority of the delegates in the convention, are compelled to rely upon the sense of justice entertained by the delegates from other parts of the district, and this, among the self styled democracy, has been found wanting. As a Whig, we have no right to find fault with our opponents, for nominating whom they please. It was supposed by the friends of Mr. Myers, in this section, that he would have received the nomination, and certainly of all the candidates for that honor in this part of the district, he was the most capable of discharging the duties of the office with honor and fidelity. The residence of a Judge in this county is demanded by the public interests, and should be insisted on by all who desire to promote those interests."—Frontier (Malone) Palladium.

We disapprove of making the judiciary a political question, but the overtures of whigs have been refused, and we are left no alternative but to run a whig. We have a most exalted opinion of Judge Willard's virtues, abilities and experience, but we think the whigs can present a man equally as well qualified for the station. The nomination is due by courtesy to Mr. James of Ogdensburgh, and we have no doubt he will receive the unanimous vote of the convention on the first ballot.

Judge Ruggles offered the following order:

Ordered—That the judgment of the Court be entered upon the record in the following form: The respondent having been declared not guilty of the several articles of Impeachment exhibited by the House of Assembly, it is therefore considered that the said respondent be and he is hereby acquitted thereof, and it is ordered that he be discharged, and do go thereof without day.

Adopted by the following vote, ayes 31, noes 1—Mr. Ward voting in the negative.

On reaching the Hall, says the Exc. Journal, Mr. Mather was greeted with six cheers by the crowd that had gathered in the Court Room to hear the verdict.

We understand that the friends of Mr. Mather will fire one hundred guns this morning, in honor of his acquittal.—Troy Whig.

Front Face---Forward!

There is a crisis approaching which whigs should not hesitate to meet. Now is the time to "face the music." As we have done before, so we can again, demonstrate to the people, that a whig administration is conservative, economical, and efficient, and gives stability to the currency and business of the country. Whigs have been divided, but their divisions have dwindled into mere personalities. Politics are in a chaotic state, but that is so much the better for whigs. It is no time now to halt, pondering and hesitating over past differences.—The future opens up brightly before us—that "tide in the affairs of men which leads on to fortune" is at its ebb, and whigs have only to embark to be wafted on to a glorious victory. "Front face—Forward!"

County Convention.—We hope whigs will bear this in mind, and send for delegates their best men, the old soldiers who have done good and faithful service. It ought to be an enthusiastic gathering, a refreshing season in view of the "good time coming." There is an easy victory before us if not repulsed by indiscretion, and wrangling among ourselves. Whigs have only to open their arms and the State will fall into their embrace. Let Old Essex be up and doing her duty as she has ever done it before. Her whigs have stood up manfully in the darkest hours; and if with cheering prospects ahead they hesitate, they are cowards indeed, and deserve only to be the slaves of the powers that be.

An Administration Democrat.—He is ring, streaked, and speckled, once a whig, then Tyler, then Van Buren, then Pierce, a frothy, blustering demagogue, a rowdy, Young America, skeptical if not an infidel, wanting in kindly and neighborly feeling, regardless of character, a sort of trading politician whose "principles are for sale to the highest bidder." Reader, look about Past, Present & Future of Politics.

As in the past, so in the future, the dissolution and re-organization of parties is inevitable and must be met. It is not to be disguised that the present tendency is to this result, but the time is not yet.

Will whigs and barnburners unite? No, never. They have no sentiment in common. The barnburners are rowdies, fillibusters, anti canal, demagogues and political tricksters. On all of these points they differ with whigs. On the slavery question alone could the Seward men and barnburners unite, but this would fail to be a bond of union, for on this of all other subjects, the latter are most dishonest and false. They have bartered this, their only great principle, for place, as they would sell their souls.

Will whigs and hunkers unite? Not yet, if ever. At present, the hunkers adhere to Pierce. If they can break up the cabinet and produce a re-organization, they will remain in the democratic party. If not, they will organize an opposition to Pierce. Then, if ever, will be the time for whigs and hunkers to negotiate a union, and not till then. During the coming session of Congress, therefore, we may look for interesting developements, and for indications upon which to act with judgment. At present there is no safety in speculating, much less in forming hasty resolutions, for a man might form relations he would regret, if not be ashamed of

If the hunkers organize an opposition to Pierce, what would be their fundamental principles? Would they be conservative? in favor of Protection to American Industry, of Internal Improvements, of Internal Progress, and opposed to external expansion by robbery and plunder? These and other important considerations, render it worse than idle to form a hasty connexion with the hunkers. Time, and circumstances, principles and policy, should govern this matter. The whig party may recover, and it may not. It was weaker in 1832, and yet in 1840 swept the country. The hunkers may develope a policy utterly repugnant to whigs. Wait and see.

But even this discussion is idle. The whig party has been defeated, but is not dead. At the last election there were over 1,000,000 whig voters, and it is not probable that they have diminished, or that they are more in love with democracy than then. With such a basis, nay, with such a party, why talk of new associations? The star of Hope points to a brighter future for whigs, while the handwriting on the wall has appeared to our opponents, filling them with fear. The fruit is ripe, let whigs reach forth their hands and pluck it, the harvest is ripe, let whigs thrust in their sickles.

The Duty of Whigs.

If in a memorable epoch in the history of the whig party such a man as Danl. Webster could ask 'where am I to go,' certainly men of less perceptions may be excused, if during the last few months they have speculated upon their future political relations But they can no longer speculate if they would. The time for speculation is past. Destiny directs them to rescue their country from the hands of the spoilers They have a present duty to perform in wresting the State from the power of the most ruthless set of knaves that ever ruled her, and to demonstrate to the people once more the stability and prudence of a whig administration. Whatever the indications of the last few months may have warranted, the present points whigs to Union, and to Victory. Together they have labored through sunshine, and shower, and together they should move on now in the path which the fortunes of war opens before them. Together let them share in the triumph which awaits them, and whatever shall be decided upon hereafter let whigs go in a body.—There is no reason why whigs in this section should not live and die together.

True.—It is said that the same divisions which divide the democracy prevail in the whig party. Admitted. But only faint hearts see in them insurmountable obstacles to union, harmony, and success. Let such keep the breath of life in them till after the State Convention by means of cold bath and stimulants, and they will see that nothing is impossible to the brave and resolute. Harmony and success this fall will show whigs that the thing is possible, and the future will be made easy. Peace is far more agreeable than contention, and when whigs find it out and get used to it, it is to be hoped they will continue in its practice, and—see if they dont.

Main Election.—A dispatch from Portland, Tuesday, says that further returns of the elections, yesterday, render it certain that there has been no choice of a Governor by the people. Governor Crosby's vote is much larger than it was last year. The vote for Mr. Pillsbury is considerably smaller than that cast for Hubbard, the regular Democratic candidate for the last year, whilst Mr. Morrill's vote is less than that of Mr. Chandler, last year. As between Whigs and Democrats, the House of Representatives will stand the same as last year; but the friends of Mr. Morrill (Dem.) will hold the balance of power. A plurality of Senat[illegible] are probably Whigs, but the fina[illegible] ion of the Senate will depend u[illegible] ections hereafter to be made by [illegible] of Representatives.

Democratic State Convention.

We compile the material facts from the reports of its doings as found in the columns of the Albany Argus, National Democrat, and Syracuse Star, as follows viz:

The hunkers had elected a large majority of the delegates, and being aware of this fact, the barnburners got up bogus delegates on any and every pretense to contest the seats of the hunkers, and in the event of failing in securing the organization, in this way, they imported a gang of fighters from New York city. These rowdies were instructed not only to knock down those who opposed the Barnburners, but to use the pistol and bowie knife, if occasion required it. In accordance with such instructions, the life of the venerable Gen. Ward was sought for, and he was only saved by the intervention of two of his friends! What other victims were marked we have not learned, but in case 'worst should come to worst,' these bullies had plenty of weapons to carry on the warfare—each one it is said being supplied with pistols and knives.

The barnburners were aided and abetted by national and State officials who attended in person in large numbers for that purpose. The call for the state convention did not designate a place of meeting, and the barnburners issued an anonymous call for the delegates to meet at the City Hall at 12 o'clock, M. and they in the mean time secured the key to that hall in the breeches pocket of John Cochrane, Pierce's survey at the Port of N. Y. at the same time gathered their forces, (the fighters included,) about the door so as to prevent the ingress of the hunkers, but the chairman and secretary of the State Committee issued an official call over their own signatures for the assemblage of the committee at Brintnall Hall to which place the Hunkers repaired at the proper time, and on motion, Ira P. Barnes was declared President pro tem by the Chairman of the State Committee. At about 5 minutes before 12 o'clock, this latter call came to the knowledge of the barnburners and fighters at the City Hall, when they rushed pell mell for Brintnall's Hall, Speaker Ludlow leading the crowd with open vest, and shirt collar loosened. This stampede was telegraphed to the Hunkers, who ordered the doors closed and no one but delegates with credentials to be admitted, but the 'flying squadrons' paid no attention to this order, and broke open the door and rushed for the stand, when a barnburner chairman was nominated, and proceeded to act in conjunction with the one already appointed. Two secretaries were also appointed. The fighters voted on all questions, cheered the barnburners, hissed, hooted, yelled, and howled at the hunkers, and cried at the top of their voices, 'three cheers for Cochrane,' 'three cheers for the Empire club,' 'three cheers for the fugitive Law,' 'd—n the old hunkers,' 'put 'em out,' 'throw 'em out the window,' 'shut up' 'hold your yop d—n ye,' &c, &., & at the same time shaking their fists under the very noses of the hunkers in the most threatning attitude.

Mr. Story, an adamantine, took the platform amid much confusion, and throwing open his coat, exhibited a pair of revolvers, declaring that he had learned that violence would be threatened to those not popular with the mob there assembled, and he had come prepared; he gave notice that the man who should assault, must risk the consequences. Such bearing intimidated the Rynders gang for a time.

At this stage of the proceedings an adjournment was obtained to 4 oclock, P. M. Soon after the adjournment the hall was again occupied by the fighters and at the hour of assembling it was so full and preoccupied, and the fighters so arranged as to forbid the ingress of the hunkers as effectually as though the door had been closed, whereupon the hunkers resumed where they left off at such place as they could procure, and proceeded to the business of their assemblage. The barnburners sent a committee to inform the hunkers of their readinsss to proceed to business to which the chairman of the hunker convention responded as follows:

I have been waited upon by James Mabbitt, esq., of Dutchess, requesting my attendance at Brintnall's Hall, to act as presiding officer in conjunction with the individual who claims to have been elected.—My reply is, that myself and friends do not consider ourselves in safety in an assemblage controlled and overawed by bullies imported for the purpose, and therefore, respectfully presenting my compliments to the persons there assembled, I decline participating in their deliberations.

Very respectfully,
IRA P. BARNES.

The hunkers then proceeded to the nomination of the ticket which we published last week, and the barnburners adjourned over till the next morning, as they said, 'to give the hunkers time to repent and return.'

In the afternoon of the first day, a handbill was posted about town containing the following:

'NEW YORK SHORT BOYS!

Let Salt Pointers Come to the Rescue!

and put down one of the most bare faced acts that ever disgraced any Community!

Shall New York send her Bullies to Syracuse to organize Conventions? Keep [illegible]s, and shops and dwellings well [illegible]e, Sept. 13, 1853.'

[illegible] after the appearance of the [illegible] issued suspicious character, and circulated to excite a riot, I hereby give notice to citizens and strangers, that there is no danger, and that the peace of our city shall be maintained AT ALL HAZARDS."

D. McCarthy,
Syracuse, Sept, 13, 1853. Mayor.

The Argus, says, 'we shall advert to this matter again and particularly to the incidents of the irruption of the rowdies into Brintnall's Hall. As the first attempt in this State to introduce ruffians into a delegated convention to overawe and control its organization, it deserves a more accurate and detailed description.'

The National Democrat says:

We shall simply state facts—facts which we challenge a contradiction of—and which will in due time, if necessary, be fully sustained by depositions from some of the most respectable citizens of the State of New York. There is a moral power in the position now occupied by the National Democracy of this State, which requires no ornaments, no exaggeration, no explanations, beyond the simple narration of the facts which lead to its final separation from the coalition of abolitionists and softs. We do not disguise the fact that this rupture has cost us great anxiety and sorrow. We can only congratulate ourselves, in the midst of our sorrow, that we have obtained so complete and so honorable an emancipation from the degrading associations of such a conglomeration of political hucksters, traitors, shoulder-hitters, thimble riggers, thieves, rowdies and assassins. This language is strong, we know, but the facts are strong which converted the Democratic State Convention into a Tammany Hall riot, and which have left the brand of eternal infamy upon those who are responsible for the breaking up of the convention.

☞Will the whigs be 'united and harmonious' in the coming election? We repeat unhesitatingly, THEY WILL. There will be a ticket nominated which for the position of the candidates on past differences, and for their character and ability, will meet the approbation of the entire whig party of this State. And as the convention will be called on at this time to adopt a platform on state policy only, there can and will be nothing but union, harmony, and enthusiasm.

☞In proof of these assurances, we quoted last week from the Register, and this week from the N. Y. Express, and Troy Whig, Silver Grey, and from the Journal, woolly, approving of our leading Editorial of two weeks ago on 'The Whig State Convention.' The same article has been copied into and approved by several other papers of equally diverse views as the above, and we have also letters and personal assurance from numbers of leading whigs that the approaching State Convention must and will be governed by calm, discreet, united, and harmonious action—as WHIGS, overlooking and "keeping down," if need be, every symptom of faction and personal ambition.

Whig Spirit in the Country.—The Keeseville Republican, edited by a gentleman who has been hitherto classed as "the Woolly kind of Whigs"—so he himself informes us—writes very fairly upon the subject of the coming Whig State Convention. His first proposition, in which he says he speaks the sentiments of the Whigs of his section of the State, is in regard to the nominees, that—

'1. The very best men should be selected—men of ability and character, the mention of whose names will give strength to the ticket, and will be a guaranty of reform in State legislation, and the most immediate prosecution of the canal enlargement.'

If the very best men of the Whig party are nominated, they will, no doubt, get Whig support all over the State. The election is an important one, and with important issues, and we know of no true Whig who desires to see a proper ticket defeated. The editor, however, adds:—

'2. Qustions which have heretofore divided the party should not be introduced into the convention. Byegones should be bygons. The Baltimore Platform should no more be made a bone of contention than the justice of the Mexican War, or the policy of Henry Clay's tariff compromise, nor the fugitive slave law, any more than the Missouri compromise. Neither should the course of Gov. Seward or Mr. Fillmore be called up for approval. The opinion of a single individual is not to be changed by resolutions. Their fame is not to be thus affected. The formality of a resolution on either of these subjects is not worth the ink and paper it would cost, to either, but its consequences would be the disruption of the party. There is a time for all things. The time for resolutions on these subjects is not now. Let Whigs continue to enjoy the freedom of private judgment, and the freedom of speech for a while longer.'

But we have been told here by one who ought to know what the programme is, and we have seen the same signs of the programme at Albany, that Senator Seward's policy, 'those beloved principles of public policy,' endorsed in 1850 at Syracuse, must be re-endorsed in 1853. We have no sort of objection to this decree, if decree it is, provided that the endorsers do not do their work as Whigs. Mr. Seward deserves well of all those who were or are enemies of the Compromise measures, and who were and are enemies of that provision of the Constitution which he sought to overthrow by substituting for it 'a Higher Law' than the Constitution. Those who agree with him can very consistently whitewash him until he shines and sparkles like a column of polished marble. But whigs who acquiesce in the Compromise measures, and who do not believe in the Higher Law doctrine, who desire to know no Whig Party but a National Whig Party, and to act in good fellowship with the Whigs of the rest of the Union—of course, can neither sympathize with nor share in any such special laudation. Such Whigs, so far as we know their sentiments, though approving heartily late Administration, heartily as they are friendly to both If a good conscience be a sufficient reward for good actions, and the approval of three fourths of the American people an ample endorsement for acts well done and a government well administered, Mr. Fillmore has had, and now has, honors bestowed upon him sufficient to satisfy the longest life and the highest ambition. As for the 'Baltimore Platform,' it was a platform of National Whigs, and precisely such a one as, in spirit and temper they will reaffirm whenever they meet in National Convention. It may, perhaps, be very questionable whether in a purely State election, when second class officers are to be elected, any such platform ought to be adopted. The only good reason against such an affirmation of principles at this time, however, arises from the fact that the laws passed are executed and the principles affirmed are admitted. One of the Presses in this State which 'spit upon the platform' a year ago has taken formal leave of the Whig Party. Another, which has set itself up to bully, lecture and lead the Whig Party, has lost no opportunity to magnify the severities of the Fugitive Slave Law, with a view of making not only this law, but the whole series of Compromise measures passed with it, as odious as possible; but we see no response, even where we expected it, to this hectoring and bad spirit. The Compromise measures stand approved by the public judgement of the great body of the people of all parties, and will whether endorsed by State Conventions or not. We find a thousand times more satisfaction in this fact than in any act of mere approval which any Convention can pass. Nevertheless, when this plank in the Whig platform is assailed, it will be defended just as long as true Whigs can find a foothold upon it.—[N. Y. Express.

What will the Wigs Do?

It may be considered easier to say what the Whigs ought to do, than to say what they will do. There ought to be no more doubt in the one case than in the other. The lesson taught by the two Democracies at Syracuse ought to be thoroughly pondered. If it is, and if the action of the Whigs State Convention that is to meet on the 5th of the ensuing month, is guided by sound discretion, it will end in harmony, and we shall go before the country, with our candidates sure of success. Harmony is success. The price of harmony is the surrender of not a single Whig principle, the abandonment of not an inch of Whig ground, but an adherance to the doctrines of the party, and the nomination of a ticket that will not impliedly or designedly put up or put down any class of Whigs. It is easier to have harmony than discord. There is nothing necessarily in the way of it. Let us have sound Whigs and new men for our candidates, and let the proceedings be such as will satisfy the old-fashioned Whigs, leaving factions and factionists, and all others who have peculiar objects to serve, to take care of themselves We are in the main much pleased with the suggestions of the Keeseville Republican, a Whig journal, a good deal more "Wooly" than "Silver Grey," and whose views are the more noticeable for that reason. The editor is familiar with the Whig sentiment of northern New York, and thus speaking he says;

The very best men should be selected—men of ability and character, the mention of whose names will give strength to the ticket, and will give guaranty of reform in State legislation, and the most immediate prosecution of the Canal enlargement.

Here is the true ground. Give us "the very best men," because they are so,—and not because they are true to this or that faction, and will promote its peculiar purpose, if elected. Such men if placed in nomination would receive the undivided support of the Whigs of the State,

Concerning Platforms and Principles, the Republican says:

Questions which have heretofore divided the party should not be introduced into the Convention. Bye-gones should be by-gones. The Baltimore Platform should no more be made a bone of contention than the justice of the Mexican War, or the policy of Henry Clay's tariff compromise, nor the fugitive slave law, any more than the Missouri compromise. Neither should the course of Gov. Seward or Mr. Fillmore be called up for approval. The opinion of a single individual is not to be changed by resolutions. Their fame is not to be thus affected. The formality of resolutions on either of these subjects is not worth the ink and paper it would cost, to either, but its consequences would be the disruption of the party. There is a time for all things. The time for resolutions on these subjects is not now. Let Whigs continue to enjoy the freedom of private judgment, and the freedom of speech for a while longer.

Doubtless here is the way of compromising the Whig differences. The suggestions are patriotic and reasonable. They are such as the great mass of the Whigs will approve. The Baltimore platform was constructed by the Whigs of the Nation, and opposed by the Whigs of New York, in their last State Convention. There let it stand or fall of its own weight. We could not if we would tear it down by anything we might do in our Convention. We might run against it and break the party in twain. So let that part of the subject rest as it is, until there is a real necessity for taking action. As to men, Mr. Fillmore is a private citizen. While in office the Whigs of New York, in their Conventions and Platforms, gave him their warm support and approval. He needs neither now, more than any other private citizen. He does not ask it. His friends does not ask it.

As to Mr. Seward, the bringing of him into the Convention would defeat the plans of harmony as surely as the introduction of Mr. Fillmore. The bringing in of either would revive the slavery discussion and sever the party. Therefore let them both be left out. The fame of neither will be seriously affected by such a course, while the harmony of the party would be insured.

This course, with the kind of men indicated, will open the way for a great Whig

The Editor of the Rupublican, in pursuing the subject, and to illustrate his views, names two eminent Whigs as Candidates on whom the Whigs would cordially unite. Concurring entirely with our Keeseville friend, both in views and in the worth of the Gentlemen suggested as Candidates; we forbear to name them, desiring to leave the question of selection wholly open and free until the Convention assembles.—[Albany Journal.

Democratic Nominations.

Read the following:

Yet we cannot close without saying that the Hards must ever possess an advantage over their rivals that sincere men of all parties must acknowledge and prize. While we detest their principles, we honor the frankness with which they are declared and upheld. Their resolutions affirm what they really believe and purpose, while those of the Softs are false and hypocritical. We all do know that John Van Buren, John Cochran, Martin Grover, Jerome J. Briggs, Preston King and the rest of the old Barnburner leaders who form the great bulk of the Soft array, don't approve of the Compromise, nor the Fugitive Slave Law, nor the Baltimore Platform, nor so much of the President's Inaugural as relates to Slavery. On the contrary, they hate all these intensely, and all the more because constrained repeatedly to indorse them. This indorsement is the price they have to pay for power and office—in our judgment, a great deal more than power and office are worth. We cannot respect men who voluntarily stoop to such humiliations and falsities; & of the two we think the better of the Hards, who call Man-hunting Democracy and really mean it, than the Softs, who formally approve while they heartily detest it. It is a snake-and-hawk fight any how, but the sincerer side is the less revolting.

We would say, then, to our Democratic readers who care anything for our opinion,

If you want to be on the stronger side, go with the Softs:

If in the more consistent and homogeneous array—with those who heartily accept and mean to live up to the principles of the Democratic party of the whole Union—your place is with the Hards; but

If you wish to be on the side of Righteousness, Humanity, and true Policy, stand aloof from both.—N. Y. Tribune.

No truism was ever more true, or better put than the above. Those democrats who are heartily sick of their party and "wish to be on the side of righteousness, humanity and true policy," will find the arms of whigs open to receive them. And note, we want only such as are convicted and convinced.

A Shameless Abandonment of Principle.

John A. Dix, the Van Buren candidate for Gov. of this state in 1848, the then embodiment of Free Soil, thus boldly barters his principles for place and spoils:

New York, Aug. 31, 1853.

Dr. I. P. Garvin—Dear Sir: I have just received your favor of the 26th inst., stating that I am represented by Whig presses and itinerant orators in Georgia as an Abolitionist, &c., and I thank you for the opportunity you have offered me of saying in reply:

1st. That I am not, and never have been an Abolitionist in any sense of that term.—On the contrary, I have been an open and uniform opponent of all abolition movements in this State, and elsewhere, since they commenced in 1835, to the present time. While in the Senate of the United States, I opposed the extension of Slavery in free territory—a question entirely distinct from interference with Slavery where it already exists. In the latter case, I have steadily opposed all external interference with it.

2d. That I have on all occasions, public and private, since the Fugitive Slave Law passed, declared myself in favor of carrying it into execution in good faith, like every other law of the land.

3d. That I was in favor of the union of the Democracy of this State, which was consummated in 1850, continued in 1851 on the basis of the Compromise measures, and in 1852, on the basis of the Baltimore Platform.

4th. That I have, since the Baltimore Convention, in June, 1852, repeatedly given my public assent to its proceedings and acquiesced in its declarations, as an adjustment of disturbing questions, by which I was willing to abide.

I am, dear Sir, very respectfully yours.
John A. Dix.

The 'Prescott House'—Broadway, N. Y.—tho' not as large as the St. Nicholas, or Metropolitan is nevertheless far more elegant than either. While real splendor is displayed in its style there is a feeling of comfort, and of home about it that is surprising.

Clinton Co. Whig Nominations.—The whigs of Clinton Co., met in convention on Thursday and nominated the following ticket. Assembly, Hon. G. V. Hoyle, co. clerk, L. W. Pierce, Sheriff, Lot Chamberlain. Dist. Atty. Campbell McLane.

Glorious. That ticket ought to be elected, and we guess it will.

In this village, August 24, of dysentery, Mr. Rufus Mansfield, aged 48 years.

Mr. Mansfield was one of our leading business men, and extensively known to the merchants and business men of the State. He had been successful both in the accumulation of property and in securing a reputation for uprightness and integrity in all the relations of life. He has fallen in the prime of manhood and the maturity of all his faculties. The loss affects not only his immediate family and friends, but the whole community in which he lived.—[*Windsor Vt. Richmondville Union Seminary and FEMALE COLLEGIATE INSTITUTE.

Rev. J. L. G. McKOWN, A. M., President.

This Institution is located in the village of Richmondville Schoharie Co., N. Y., 44 miles from Albany. The buildings are all new, and of sufficient capacity to accommodate 350 boarders. They are furnished with several large recitation rooms, in all of which are fine plaster blackboards.—There are also Six Music Rooms, and a large, convenient, well lighted room, for oil painting. The Trustees have also, at considerable pains and expense, fitted up a BATH-ROOM in connection with each department.

Richmondville is one of those retired and delightful villages for which New York is so justly noted. Its situation is romantic and healthful. The morals and intelligence of its inhabitants are pure and elevated. And to such as may seek the advantages of their institution, the Trustees hope to offer, not only a safe resort, but a pleasant home.

The Collegiate Institute.—The Trustees of the Union Seminary believing from their knowledge of what constitute the true elements of success in any literary institution, and from the grade of scholarship attained in the Seminary, and from the scholarship necessarily required by the times that a FULL AND FORMAL course of study ought to be presented, particularly for young ladies; resolved to establish, in connection with the Seminary, and under the same corporation and Faculty, a Female Collegiate Institute.

They propose, in this Institute, to afford facilities for as complete and thorough a course of study as most of the Colleges of our land.

They do not expect to make prodigies of the girls committed to their care but they hope, by thorough discipline and proper culture, to better prepare them to fill woman's sphere.

ACCESS.

The village is connected with Albany by plank road.—The Albany and Susquehannah Railroad will also pass thro' the place. There are daily mails from Albany, Catskill and and Oneonta.

FACULTY.

The Trustees feel confident, that with a thorough and efficient Faculty of twelve Professors and Teachers, they will be fully able to meet the high expectations entertained of this School. The Departments of French, Music and Oil Painting, as the others offer advantages second to those of no similar Institution.

A NORMAL CLASS.

Arrangements will be made for a teacher's class, to commence with the term. The course of study pursued will be that laid down by the Regents of the University of the State of New York.

EXPENSES.

Board, lodging room, furnished, washing and fuel, per week, $1.25. Tuition in common English branches, per quarter, $3. Board and Tuition in common English branches per quarter, $17. Tuition and board will be required quarterly in advance, and this requisition will be strictly adhered to.

TERMS AND VACATIONS.

The Institution will reopen on the 20th of October. All students intending to enter should be present at that time, in order to commence with the classes. They may enter, however, at any time, but will be charged to the whole time, unless entering at or after the commencement of the last half quarter in which case charges will be made for the half quarter entered upon.

N. B.—Students will be carried at the commencement and close of each term, from and to Albany and Canajoharie free of expense, board excepted. The stages will start from the Mansion House in Broadway and the hotel at Canajoharie, at 9 o'clock, A. M., on Wednesday, the 19th of October.

THE MARRIAGE STATE;

Shall Happiness and Health, or Misery and Sickness, attend it?

MOST STARTLING CONSIDERATIONS!

Reflections for the Thoughtful.

Strange that countless human beings exist and drag through life as do the beasts of the field, or the insects of the earth, evincing no more thought or reflection than though the noble faculties of mind were not vouchsafed to them.

Many such are husbands and fathers, upon whom are dependent the health, the well-being, and the happiness of a confiding and affectionate wife, with perhaps a family of children.

HOW OFTEN IT HAPPENS THAT THE

WIFE LINGERS FROM YEAR TO YEAR

In that pitiable condition as not even for one day to feel the happy and exhilerating influence incident to the enjoyment of health.

She may not be an invalid confined to her bed, or even to her room; as her pride, ambition and energy induce and nerve her to take personal charge of her household, even when her health will not admit of it; but she is nevertheless perceptibly sinking from day to day, and always ailing.

Thus, day after day, and month after month transpire. Her health daily sinks, till finally even the hope of recovery no longer remains. And thus

THE BLOOMING BRIDE,

But a few years ago in the flush of health and youth, and buoyancy of spirits, rapidly, and apparently inexplicably, becomes a feeble, sickly, debilitated wife, with frame emaciated, nerves unstrung, spirits depressed, countenance bearing the impress of suffering, and an utter physical and mental prostration.

Sometimes this deplorable change may and does arise from organic or constitutional causes. But oftener, by far oftener, to gross and inexcusable ignorance of the simplest and plainest rules of health as connected with the marriage state, the violation of which entails disease, suffering and misery, not only to the wife, but often

"UNTO THE THIRD AND FOURTH GENERATION,"

Transmitting CONSUMPTION, SCROFULA, HYPOCHONDRIA, INSANITY, GOUT, KING'S EVIL, and other diseases, as a

DREADFUL INHERITANCE from the Parents.

And must this continue? Shall we be wise in all that concerns the cattle of our fields, our horses, our sheep, our cows, our oxen, the nature and character of the soil we possess, the texture and quality of our goods and merchandise; but in all that concerns ourselves as human beings, with human functions and passions, subject to great derangement, involving our future peace and happiness—in all that concerns the health and welfare of the wife of our affections, and the mother of our children; in all that concerns the mental and physical well being of those children, we should be immersed in the darkest and most

BENIGHTED IGNORANCE,

AS CULPABLE AS INEXCUSABLE!

How long shall this ignorance prevail so productive of its bitter fruits? How long shall the wife and mother be ignorant of the nature, character and causes of the various womb and sexual complaints, embittering her days by suffering—suffering often prolonged to years, eventuating in a complication of diseases utterly and hopelessly incurable? Shall we for ever close our eyes to the results of physiological science by which we may arrive at an understanding of ourselves as men and women, subject to serious life-long enduring diseases, and perpetuating them to our children.

LET EVERY WIFE AND HUSBAND PONDER!

No husband or wife need be ignorant of what concerns them most to know to secure their health and happiness. That knowledge is contained in a little work entitled

FRAUD!

ALL who want Axes of the real Collins & Co. make should be particular to notice the stamps, as there are various counterfeits and imitations stamped Collins and labelled much like ours, which are fraudulently sold in some parts of the United States as our manufacture. They are made in different parts of the country by various axe-makers, and are generally of very inferior quality. The genuine Collins axes, which have acquired such an extensive reputation, are invariably stamped "COLLINS & CO., HARTFORD," and each axe has a printed label with my signature.—It is now more than TWENTY-FIVE YEARS since we commenced the business with the stamp of "Collins & Co. Hartford," and I do not know of any other axe-maker by the name of Collins in the United States.

LEANDER BABBIT'S

TRUSS OFFICE

The latest and most approved Trusses; Female Supporters; Do. with shoulder braces attached; spinal elevators for curvature of the spine and projection of the shoulder blade. Suspensary shoulder braces. This instrument is so constructed that it not only acts the part of shoulder braces, but carries the heft of the ladies' skirts on their shoulders; and, hence remedies the evil consequent to carrying them on the hips and sides. For gentlemen it not only serves for a shoulder brace, but acts the part of suspenders.

As to the importance and usefulness of the above named instruments, and their beneficial effects, their peculiar mechanism and superiority over other instruments of the same name, I need not say anything. They are so well known by physicians, and the multitude of persons that have had occasion to test them in this northern section of country, that I deem it not important to introduce a long catalogue of certificates; yet I have abundant evidence in my possession to justify me in all I claim or affirm, and deem it a privilege to give references to any who wish to make inquiries.

Office at Keeseville in the building on the corner of Main and Front street, opposite the Bank, up stairs.

Ladies will be waited on at my dwelling by Mrs. Babbit whose experience in adjusting braces and supporters qualifies her to give perfect satisfaction. 482—3m

Ploughs! Ploughs!!

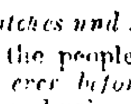
PROUTY & MEARS'

Celebrated Centre Draughts—All Sizes

THESE Ploughs wherever introduced, are fast superceding all others.

The most thorough trials of Ploughs on record in this country, and at the World's Fair in London, have demonstrated the important fact, that the Centre draught Plough is of much easier draught than any other, and therefore used with less fatigue to both Ploughman and Team; and, also owing to its peculiar form, it pulverizes and prepares the ground to seed more perfectly than any other, leaving less work for the harrow, and securing better crops than by any other method of Culture.

The following Implements, among others of the best quality, and of the latest and most approved patterns, are constantly on hand, viz:



Harrows, Seed Sowers, Corn Planters, Corn Shellers, Straw Cutters, Corn and Cob Crushers, Cheese Presses, Threshing Machines, Potato Hoes, Manure Hooks, Cast Iron Ox Scrapers, Pennsylvania Scrapers, Tree Scrapers, Bed hog and Pruning Knives, Hay Knives, Barn Door Rollers, Agricultural Furnaces, Corn Knives, Post Hole Augers, Wheelbarrows, Sheep Shears, etc. etc.

CONCURRENT RESOLUTION PROPOSING AN AMENDMENT TO THE CONSTITUTION.

Resolved, (if the Senate concur,) That the following amendment be proposed to the constitution of this state and referred to the legislature to be chosen at the next general election of senators, and be published for three months previous to making such choice, in pursuance to the provisions of the first section of the thirteenth article, of said constitution.

Substitute for section three of article seven the following:

After paying the said expenses of collection, superintendence and repairs of the canals, and the sums appropriated by the first and second sections of this article, there shall be appropriated and set apart in each fiscal year out of the surplus revenues of the canals, as a sinking fund, a sum sufficient to pay the interest as it falls due, and extinguish the principal within eighteen years of any loan made under this section, and if the said sinking fund shall not be sufficient to redeem any part of the principal at the stipulated times of payment, or to pay any part of the interest of such loans as stipulated, the means to satisfy any such deficiency shall be procured on the credit of the said sinking fund. After complying with the foregoing provisions, there shall be paid annually out of said revenues into the treasury of the state two hundred thousand dollars, to defray the necessary expenses of government. The remainder shall, in each fiscal year, be applied to meet appropriations for the enlargement and completion of the canals mentioned in this section, until the said canals shall be completed. In each fiscal year thereafter the remainder shall be disposed of in such manner as the legislature may direct, but shall at no time be anticipated or pledged for more than one year in advance. The legislature shall annually, during the next four years, appropriate to the enlargement of the Erie, the Oswego, the Cayuga and Seneca canals, and to the completion of the Black River and Genesee Valley canals, and for the enlargement of the locks of the Champlain canal, whenever from dilapidation or decay it shall be necessary to rebuild them, a sum not exceeding two millions two hundred and fifty thousand dollars. The remainder of the revenues of the canals for the current fiscal year in which such appropriation is made, shall be applied to meet such appropriation; and if the same shall be deemed insufficient, the legislature shall at the same session provide for the deficiency by loan. The legislature shall also borrow one million and five hundred thousand dollars to refund to the holders of the canal revenue certificates issued under the provisions of chapter four hundred and eighty-five of the laws of the year one thousand eight hundred and fifty-one, the amount received into the treasury thereon. But no interest to accrue after July first, one thousand eight hundred and fifty-five, shall be paid on such Certificates. The provisions of section twelve of this article requiring every law for borrowing money to be submitted to the people, shall not apply to the loans authorized by this section. No part of the revenues of the canals or of the funds borrowed under this section, shall be paid or applied upon or in consequence of any alleged contract made under chapter four hundred and eighty-five of the laws of the year one thousand eight hundred and fifty-one, except to pay for work done or materials furnished prior to the first day of June, one thousand eight hundred and fifty-two. The rates of toll on persons and property transported on the canal shall not be reduced below those for the year one thousand eight hundred and fifty-two, except by the canal board, with the concurrence of the legislature.—All contracts for work or materials on any canal, shall be made with the person who shall offer to do or provide the same at the lowest price, with adequate security for their performance.

PRIVATE DISEASES,

at his old quarters, No. 5 Beaver-street, ALBANY, N. Y.

The great success attending the use of Doctor L.'s remedies in secret diseases, and the many remarkable cures daily effected by him in recent and [o]ld lingering attacks, i conclusive evidence that the well

YOUNG MEN,

who by indulging in secret habits have injured their health and prostrated their intellectual faculties, and thereby deprived themselves of the pleasure of married life, should consult Dr. Lispenard without a moment's delay. Hundreds have been restored to health, society and friends, under my peculiar mode of treatment, although vast sums of money had been sacrificed without any benefit. My remedy for this disease is pleasant to take, has no offensive smell and

Patients who have no acquaintance in the city should make inquiry of some respectable citizen, or the editor or proprietor of any of the city papers, to ascertain who is the most reliable physician to apply to.

"EVERY FAMILY SHOULD HAVE A COPY."

20,000 Copies sold in less than 5 months. A new edition, revised and improved, just issued.

Dr. Hunter's Medical Manual and Hand Book for the Afflicted—Containing an outline of the origin, progress, treatment and cure of every form of disease, contracted by promiscuous sexual intercourse, by self abuse or by sexual excess, with advice for their prevention, written in a familiar style, avoiding all medical technicalities, and everything that would offend the ear of decency, from the result of some twenty years successful practice, exhlusively devoted to the cure of diseases of a delicate or pirvate nature.

To which is added, receipts for the cure of the above diseases, and a treatise on the causes, symptoms and cure of the Fever and Ague.

Testimony of the Prof. of Obstetrics in Penn. College, Philadelphia—"Dr. Hunter's Medical Manual."—The author of this work unlike the majority of those works who advertise to cure the diseases of which it treats, is a graduate of one of the best Colleges in the United States. It affords me pleasure to recommend him to the unfortunate, or to the victim of malpractice, as a successful and experienced practitioner, in whose honor and integrity they may place the greatest confidence.

JOSEPH LONGSHORE, M. D.

From A Woodward, M. D., of Penn. University, Philadelphia—It gives me pleasure to add my testimony to the professional ability of the author of the "Medical Manual." Numerous cases of diseases of the Genital Organs, some of them of long standing have come under my notice, in which his skill has been manifest in restoring to perfect health, in some instances where the patient has been considered beyond medical aid. In the treatment of Seminal weakness, or disarrangement of the functions produced by Self-abuse, or Excess of venery, I do not know his superior in the profession. I have been acquainted with the Author some thirty years, and deem it no more than justice to him as well as a kindness to the unfortunate victim of early indiscretion, to recommend him as one, in whose professional skill and integrity they may safely confide themselves. ALFRED WOODWARD, M.D.

"This is, without exception, the most comprehensive and intelligible work published on the class of diseases of which it treats. Avoiding all technical terms, it addresses itself to the reason of its readers. It is free from all objectionable matter, and no parent, however fastidious, can object to placing it in the hands of his sons. The author has devoted many years to the treatment of the various complaints treated of, and 'with too little breath to puff,' and 'too little presumption to impose,' he has offered to the world at the merely nominal price of 25 cents, the fruits of some 20 years most successful practice."—Herald.

"No teacher or parent should be without the knowledge imparted in this invaluable work. It would save years of pain, mortification and sorrow to the youth under their charge."—People's Advocate.

A Presbyterian clergyman in Ohio, in writing of "Hunter's Medical Manual," says: "Thousands upon thousands of our youth, by evil example and influence of the passions, have been led into the habit of self-pollution without realizing the sin and fearful consequences upon themselves and their posterity. The constitutions of thousands who are raising families have been enfeebled, if not broken down, and the do not know the cause or the cure. Anything that can be done so to enlighten and influence the public mind as to check, and ultimately to remove this wide-spread source of human wretchedness, would confer the greatest blessing next to the religion of Jesus Christ, on the present and coming generations. Intemperance (or the use of intoxicating drinks,) though it has slain thousands upon thousands, is not a greater scourge to the human race. Accept my thanks on behalf of the afflicted, and, believe me, your co-worker in the good work you are so actively engaged in."

One copy, (securely enveloped,) will be forwarded free of postage to any part of the United States for 25 cents, or 6 copies for $1.—Address (post paid) COSDEN & Co., publishers, Box 196, Philadelphia. 478y

The Eternal Punishment of the Wicked.

Who are the wicked? If we were to apply to the world for an answer, they would point us to such persons only as have been guilty of open, flagrant offences. But the Scriptures make a different distinction. They declare, in language whose import cannot be mistaken, that all who have not complied with the terms of the gospel are wicked. Our Saviour himself with solemn emphasis said, 'He that is not for me is against me;' and if against Christ, then he is the enemy of Christ.

The meaning of the term 'wicked' being thus understood and settled, the question arises, What will be their future condition?

Now, on this point the Bible is as clear and explicit as on the other. It assures us that unutterable woe in hell will be the certain portion of all who die in a rejection of the Saviour.

But, aside from the clear and conclusive declarations of the Bible, there are proofs sufficient to satisfy every candid inquirer as to the certainty of the future punishment of the wicked. To these we will briefly advert.

First, all men admit that God is righteous and just. He cannot be otherwise.—He must therefore treat men as they deserve. He must reward those who obey his commands, and punish those who disobey. Now, it needs but little observation to be convinced that mankind are not treated in this manner here. The wicked are here often the most prosperous; they have an abundance of the 'good things' of this world, and are unvisited by the reverses and calamities which befall others; while the humble and devoted followers of Christ whose sole anxiety is to walk humbly before God and do his will, not unfrequently are overwhelmed with trouble and sorrow, or languish on beds of sickness, or are reduced to such extremes of poverty that the very crumbs which fall from the table of others would be to them a welcome boon. There is many a Dives and many a Lazarus.

It being, then, an undeniable fact that the distribution of good and evil in this world is unequal, and is made irrespective of the characters of the recipients, the question comes up. How can we reconcile this fact with our ideas of God's justice, except on the supposition that there will be a future adjustment of rewards and punishments correspondent to the characters and deeds of men? And if so, then the wicked must be punished hereafter, or God will cease to be just. But let us take another view of the subject.

All civilized nations erect prisons for the confinement of criminals. No one doubts the propriety of them. The safety of society requires them. Without them, all security of life and property would be at an end. Even the most violent objectors to the doctrine of a future punishment acquiesce in the wisdom and necessity of prisons. Now, shall we concede the exercise of a right to human legislators which we deny to the Supreme Lawgiver? Shall we say it is wrong in Him to erect one, and only one palace in all his wide universe in which to confine those who have violated his laws, and at the same time admit it to be right in a State or nation to erect as many as it may deem necessary for the confinement of those who violate its laws? And yet this is what all who deny the existence of hell do. How strangely inconsistent men can be on questions which relate to their eternal interests, while on matters of worldly interest or policy they are perfectly rational and consistent! Some persons think that God, being just, cannot punish men eternally for offenses committed in so short a time. A single question will meet this objection: Do not human laws often imprison for a long period of years, and even for life, persons who have been guilty of only a single offence, the commission of which occupied perhaps only a few moments? Now, is it wrong for God to act in the same way? Does he become unjust when he shuts up the wicked in an eternal prison, because the period of their transgressions was comprised within the brief limits of this life?

It is also urged that the punishment is disproportionate to the offense, and unnecessarily severe, and therefore that God, being just, never can inflict it. Is this true? Is sin so trifling a matter? Why, what is sin? Is it not opposed to all the attributes of God? Is it not rebellion against the Majesty of Heaven? Would it not, had it power equal to its will, hurl even God himself from his throne? And what has sin done? Has it not robed man of the favor and image of his Maker, and made him the wretched and degraded being he now is? Has it not filled the world with disease and misery and death? Is not its magnitude so great that even God himself could not deliver man from its consequences without giving his own Son to suffer and die? Now, if such be the character of sin, who will say that its eternal punishment is more than it deserves? Besides, how do they who object to future punishment on the ground of its being eternal, know that a less punishment would answer the purpose of deterring others from a violation of the divine law? Will they undertake to say that a mitigation of the sentence of the wicked would not be followed by an immediate revolt from the government of Jehovah by his subjects in all the provinces of his wide empire? Is it not true, even among men, that the severest forms of punishment which are in use often fail to prevent crime, and would not the substitution of milder forms in the place of them be attended with an increase of crime? And in the moral government of God, might not a similar result follow the substitution of a limited in the place of an eternal punishment? Would not men become more bold in sin and daring in their rebellion?

The considerations which we have here presented we think conclusively prove that all who die without an interest in the Saviour are wicked, and as such will be punished eternally in hell, and that God in thus punishing them will be just.

Thanks to his great name that he has provided a way of escape from so dreadful a doom! "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and thou shalt be saved," is the grand direction of the gaspel; while it declares, in language equally strong and decisive, that 'they who believe not shall be damned."

Communications.

OTSDAM SEPT. 20th, 1853.

COL. TARBELL.

DEAR SIR:—Hoping that a brief statement, of a few facts in relation to business matters and general topics of this locality may be of interest to your readers, I have concluded to place them at your disposal. The county of St. Lawrence although settled at an early period, and possessing resources unsurpassed by any part of the State in an agricultural and mineral point of view, has not assumed the rank among her sister counties due to the extent and fertility of its territory, owing to the want of direct and cheap communication with permanent markets. While the farmers in other parts of the State were enjoying the benefits of numerous canals and rail roads and complacently pocketing the market value of their produce, minus a very small sum for transportation, with plenty of buyers at their doors, the tiller of the soil in St. Lawrence County expended more than half the value of his produce, in the unpleasant and tedious process of hauling over bad roads to distant and very precarious markets. But old things have passed away giving place to others more in accordance with the 'progressive age, in which we live. In October 1850 the Northern Rail Road was completed which opened an extensive tract of inland country situated within the counties of Clinton, Franklin, and St. Lawrence, to the full benefit of cheap and rapid transportation. And mark what has been the result. The farmers produce that they were unable to sell without seeking distant buyers is now eagerly sought for with offers of the highest market prices. Butter which is quoted in Boston at from 17 to 19 cts goes quick at 20 cents in this village owing to the competition among buyers and the anticipation, of still further advancement in prices. According to the census of 1850 this county produces annually 2,875,917 lbs of butter, which at the present price of that article brings the round sum of $575,383.

The value of cheese is proportionally great which speaks well for the dairy interests of the county. In fact no portion of union is better adapted to this branch of agricultural industry than Northern New York. It particularly recommends itself to the farmer as tending to produce permanant and increasing richness and fertility of soil, as highly remunerating prices.—The portion of country that is adapted to grazing and dairy is so small when compared with the sections whose soil and climate render them wholly unfit for competition with the cooler and moister districts, that there must necessarily be less fluctuation in the prices of these than almost any other articles. The developement of the resources of this county in this very important branch of industry will tend very materially to its advancement in prosperity and wealth. The Inhabitants are awaking to the subject and are rapidly making the necessary arrangements for changing operations.

The extensive lumber region of Northern New York, drained by the Oswegatchie, Grass, Raquette, and St. Regis rivers, has until of late attracted very little attention, but after having profitably cleared the timber from far less eligible localities, the attention of capitalists and practical lumbermen has finally been attracted and hordes of 'down East' yankees fresh from gleaning the scattering timber on the shores of old Penobscott are exploring the wilderness, rendering the rivers navigable, purchasing land, and erecting huge gang mills upon every eligible water privilege. These yankees manifest the same shrewdness, enterprise and ingenuity here as elsewhere, whether engaged in erecting a bark antice for a night's encampement or choosing a mill site, it's always in the right place—everything is taken into account and made to assist in producing the desired result, which is generally to have the establishment 'real handy.' Their 'Goliths' and 'Jerusalums' as they view the sturdy pines which have towered majestically for centuries above the surrounding forests are upon the whole amusing. Such vast tracts of timber are a rare sight oven to Yankees in these days.

The Potsdam and Watertown Rail Road is now under contract and rapidly progressing towards completion. The dissatisfaction of the villagers of Potsdam and Canton for the reason that the Northern Road was constructed so far north of them as to deprive them in a measure of its benefit originated this road which intersects with the northern Road at Potsdam depot and extends thence in a south westerly direction sixty nine miles through a country which has hitherto never enjoyed the benefits of direct communication with market, to Watertown Jefferson County which is a village of wealth and importance. The road there connects with the Watertown and Cape Vincent Road situated at the northern terminus of Lake Ontario. This road must be of vast benefit to the lumber trade in this region. The lumber manufactured upon the Raquette River alone amounts to several million feet for the manufacture of which directly and indirectly $300,000 is paid. In conclusion, I think no part of our state presents more inducements for an enterprising man than this and an appreciation of these advantages is witnessed by the many investments made by men of business talent and capital.

Truly Yours, OBSERVER.

Lay Sermons---No. I.

"People must mount by slow degrees to glory—
'Tis stairs must lead us to the attic story."

My hearers:—I have chosen this text upon which to make a few remarks, applicable perchance, to some of you; though am well aware that with a docility which most listeners to advice always exercise, you will bestow upon your neighbors what was intended for yourselves—for the simple reason that you give only what you don't want without any regard to the wants of the recipient.

My hearers—Beware of the desire of sudden wealth, and of that vaulting ambition "which o'er leaps itself."

Greed and ambition have been the ruin of many of you; your "eyes have been too big for your bellies," your gluttony has ruined your digestion; your desires are far greater than your powers of acquisition—and like avarice clutching at guineas, in attempting too much you lose all. Remember, my hearers, that "Rome was not built in a day"—that the largest pumpkin and the weightiest squash spring from the smallest seed—time, warmth, moisture and sunshine do the rest.

Solomon says, "go to the ant thou sluggard, consider her ways and be wise." I say unto you, from the squash you may learn wisdom—spread the leaves of your virtues in the sunshine, perform your little round of duties, add daily to your small stock of virtue and intelligence: dispense your charities silently like the dews of heaven; let knowledge continually ascend into your 'attic story,' and notwithstanding the smallness of your hearts, the "tightness of your chests" and the narrow space in which your intellects are "cribbed, combined and confined," you will assuredly in time become "some pumpkins."

When like rust in iron, or "skippers" in a cheese, "envy, hatred, malice and all uncharitableness" are eating out your very gizzards, at the sight of your neighbor's prosperity, let the stairs to your garret, or in their absence, let the ladder to the same elevated apartment read you a lesson of wisdom and charity; as you slowly climb them, perchance in search of a stray button upon some cast off garment, or for another patch to cover the increasing rents in your trousers, reflect, that by the same toilsome progress upward, that envied neighbor rose from penury to prosperity—from want to wealth—that the transition from the hut to the hall, from the potatoe patch to the wide estate, with its almost countless flocks and herds—was the result of time and toil.

My hearers—If nature has given you a good pair of legs, continue in the use of that mode of primitive progression until the wagon, which is to elevate you three feet above your fellows, is fully paid for; or if you be able to discard the wagon and ride in a coach, without the fear of "duns" and the sheriff, so much the better; and may the softness of your cushions alleviate the twinges of your rheumatism which will remind you of the days when "from morn till dewy eve" you worked in a ditch. So mote it be.

Letter to the Editor.

AURORA, Sept. 12, 1853.

RESPECTED FRIEND:—You may perceive by the date of this that I have changed my location of late. I am now settled for the present upon a farm in the County of Cayuga, N. Y., about two miles from the beautiful Lake of that name, (I do not say more beautiful than Champlain) where I should be happy to see any of my Keeseville friends, not excepting the Editor of the Republican. The steam boats pass this place daily, connecting with the Albany & Buffalo and New York and Erie Railroad.

My object in commencing this was to say that we have not had the privilege of reading your paper of late. I have often been asked the population of Keeseville. Could you not put in some remarks upon the amount of business done there that would be interesting to many of your readers?

Please direct my papers to Aurora, Cayuga Co., N. Y.

From your friend,

REPLY.—The population of Keeseville numbers about 4,000, and the amount of business done annually may be safely estimated at $1,500,000, which is probably far below the true amount. For instance, E. & J. D. Kingsland & Co. do a business of $400,000. Green and Conro $100,000. Kingsland, Baker & Co. $100,000, &c., &c. There are two hotels, six churches, one academy, eight lawyers, four livery stables, three newspapers, one insurance company, etc., etc.

Keeseville is a "right smart place," and growing rapidly.—[Ed. Rep.

The Present & Future of Politics.

Not as affecting mere party organizations, but the destinies of our country, these should command the attention of patriots everywhere. No man can rightfully sit with folded arms and excuse himself from responsibilty. He who does so is a coward, or a fool. Our form of goverment is such that a great responsibility rests upon every individual, and it should be boldly met, and understandingly and patriotically discharged. The present time, particularly, is one, when men should review their position, and see that their landmarks are in sight. We beg leave to make a few allusions for the consideration of those who make politics a matter of principle.

Our allusions are to the present position of parties, their principles, their tendencies, and their respective administration of public affairs. The present National & State Administrations and their supporters are made up of renegades from the whig party. Tyler men, Van Buren men, disunionists, rowdies, fighting men, fillibusters, disgraced Generals of the Mexican war, free trade, anti-canal, anti-internal improvements, the turbulent, discontented, and radicals of all parties, nations, creeds, and countries—a heterogeneous mass of disreputable, unstable, and un-reliable men. In this State in particular, they have forfeited all respect as men as well as politicians, by their flagrant violation of pledges, and their utter abasement for place and power. The history of these men for the last five years is marked by a series of most extraordinary political tergiversations that ought and will blast them forever in the minds of all honorable men. Their influence is demoralizing and evil, and their corruptions sweep over the country like the Simoon, infecting and destroying the virtue, and the patriotism of young and old. A National Administration made up of, and controlled by such men is to be feared, dreaded, and opposed by all friends of order and morality, and of purity and ability in public places, by conservatives and patriots, and all opposed to a grand piratical foray upon all contiguous territory, and in favor of the preservation and perpetuity of our glorious Union in its pristine vigor.

The recent seperation of the conservatives from the radicals of the democracy is one of the most cheering signs of the times. For one we shall look forward to the developements of the campaign, and the next session of Congress, with the deepest anxiety, yet in the fullest belief that the alarming tendencies of the Administration to moral and political depravity, and territorial aggrandizement by piracy will receive a powerful, and a permanent check. In the mean time, let whigs rally in behalf of the Canals, and reform in State legislation. Here is a present duty worthy of the ambition of any party, and its achievement will fix them in the confidence of the people.

DEMOCRATIC HARMONY.—It is to be regretted that the Hunkers have not a Press here, not only to afford fun for whigs, but when democratic puppies scarcely yearlings in the service and mere hirelings at that, volunteer gross attacks upon old democrats who have been such from boyhood, justice demands a reply. This of course is not within the province of the whig press.—Still we must be permitted to say of Mr. Cooley, the Hunker candidate for Comptroller, that to him more than to any other member of the late Senate, the people are indebted for the present prospect of an enlargement of the Canals. He stood out against the machinations of the barnburners, nobly bearing his breast to their fury, and the result is the probable triumph of Canals if they do not again fall into the hands of barnburners.

As to Mr. Watson of Port Kent, his father was the friend of Clinton in projecting the Canals. If the son of such a man was disgusted with the nomination of Col. Ireland for Congress, he was not alone in that feeling, for hundreds of democrats felt the same. It was a mere stock-jobbing operation, got up on purpose to replenish the pockets of a few desperadoes in Keeseville, and the man who abuses Mr. Watson most was the first to have a new suit of clothes.

Essex County at the State Fair.

The people of Essex County attended in large numbers, but we believe the only entries for exhibition consisted of Blackhawk horses as follows; G. W. Coats, Ticonderoga, 1, Wm. G. Baldwin, do., H. B Howard, Westport, 1, Col. Root, do.

It was the opinion of the spectators that these horses ought to have taken the first premiums, and we think so too. They certainly attracted a large share of attention and that perhaps is sufficient [illegible] the owners.

The Best Jokes of the Season.—The recent Fair was fruitful of incidents of which we will relate one or two. It was a rainy time, and many having nothing else to do found their enjoyment at the 'side shows,' where the 'critter' was sold. One individual looked till he was tired and then started for home. When just beyond the limits of the village the tugs gave way and the horse parted from the wagon. This was unnoticed by our hero, who continued to shout and sing, and drive his horse as though all was right and prosperous. A gentleman passing about that time asked him what he was doing there? 'Been to the Fair—hic—seen the elephant—hic—and now I'm going home—hic—do you mind that old hoss—hic—take 'suthin—hic.": "Well, but where's your horse? "Hoss be d——d—hic—much as I can do to take care of the wagon—hic."

☞The Editor of the Administration Organ in this village, with ratan in hand and with his usual swell, undertook to pass the gate into the Fair grounds without showing his ticket, deeming the plain looking gate tenders unworthy of notice. He was of course arrested in his progress and his ticket demanded. This he refused to show. But "your ticket, sir!" exclaimed the gate tender. "Get out you dirty scamp, or I'll thrash you," replied the Editor. "No you don't," said the gate tender, as he took the young dandy by the collar—"You have threatened a long time to whip Tarbell, and now if you want to whip me just step out here and try it!" The ticket was 'forked' in no time, and the young sprout allowed to pass

NOTE—We hope that gate tender will report himself to the Republican Office, where he will find something to his advantage. We want to give him our hand.

UNPROPITIOUS WEATHER.—The elements seem to have been at war with almost every public demonstration this fall—the Vt. State Fair, N. Y. do. Rensselaer, Essex and Clinton Co. Fairs, and last and most to our regret, the Military display at Ticonderoga, to have taken place on the 28th have encountered serious and prolonged storms. There is nothing we desire more than the success of the young men engaged in organizing the militia in this section of the State. The "boys" had a "good time" at Ti of course 'in spite of wind, or weather' but the latter kept hundreds, as it did us, from being 'there to see.' We have no doubt their motto is 'never say die.' We wish them 'better luck next time.'

"YOUPS FOREVER."—We were waited upon a morning since by a polite boy with a package, saying 'his brother wished him to hand that to us.' On inspection we found it to be a rarely beautiful inkstand, combining conveniences for ink, sand, and wafers, accompanied by a note asking its acceptance as a "token of regard." The present itself is a rare one, but 'as a token of regard' it will be carefully treasured as one of those agreeable surprises that occasionally illumine the dreary life of a country Editor. May our young friend's pathway be strewn with roses, and all that he touches turn to gold.

Essex Co. Fair.

We are reminded that the thanks of the Society are due to Col. Williams for his services as Marshall. The duties were thoroughly attended to of course.

The same gentleman, as the Agent of the Lake Champlain Iron Manufacturing Co. presented a chunk of ore from their bed near Little Pond, weighing 920 lbs.—The Col. never does things by halves.—'What his hands find to do, he does with all his might.'

☞Our "d—l" went up to the Fair to see the sights and the girls—dressed up in his best. While looking with all his might some benevolent friend bought and gave him a cake of gingerbread, about 10 by 18 inches square. He saw nothing more, of the sights, and when last heard from, late on Thursday night, he was about half way thro' his cake. We think his board for the next week will be cheap.

☞The Canada encountered a very severe gale on her trip north on Wednesday evening between Burlington and Plattsburgh. She was unable to land at Port Kent and the passengers put on the Life Preservers, expecting every moment a trial for life or death in the water. The Canada however, proved a gallant boat, and out-rode the storm in safety.

The County Convention.—The proceedings must speak for themselves till another week. We have not space at this time to refer to our candidates in such terms as their merits deserve.

☞We are acquainted with the farm for sale or exchange advertised this week, and can give any desired information. There is a chance for a good bargain.

REYNOLDS & TUFTS have added to their otherwise perfect establishment, some horses and carriages of the very first order.—They take the crowd and they deserve it.

☞Our readers can divide the story on our first page into chapters to suit their own convenience, and taste.

☞New Goods are making their appear[illegible] some of our popular village stores, [illegible]'s, Garfield's, &c.

Locofoco Ratification Meeting—On Saturday Evening last, the Hunker portion of the Locofoco party held a meeting at Mc Duffie's Long Room, in this village, to hear the report of GEN. A. WARD, the delegate to the State Convention from this district, and to ratify the nominations made by that section of the party, at Syracuse.

We were somewhat surprised at the large number assembled, upon so short a notice, and it was equally as unexpected to us that so large a preponderance of that party in this section, so zealously maintain the principles, and sustain the action of the National democrats.

Capt. HENRY HARRIS, who, we believe, has never been suspected of changing his politics, or of following any of the strange isms of the latter day locos, presided at the meeting, with GEO. A. BRANDRETH, Esq., and A. J. HYATT, Esq., as Secretaries.

GEN. WARD addressed the meeting in an able and eloquent speech in which he gave a history of the proceedings at Syracuse, and the causes which led to a separation of the party, and the nomination of two sets of Candidates. With these family difficulties we have no wish to interfere, but we must say that apparent candor and integrity characterized the General's remarks, which were well received by the meeting, and by the applause which greeted him, and the resolutions subsequently adopted, his course at Syracuse was sanctioned and approved by his constituents here. For nearly an hour, the "old war-horse of the democracy of Westchester," spoke of the wrongs and iniquities which were heaped upon the National democrats by their Barnburner opponents at Syracuse—of the traitorous conduct of that faction in former years—of the hired bullies which under the auspices of some of the government officials, were set on to overawe, and make onslaughts on those who would not bow to the dictation of the "Softs."

The General, during his speech, was frequently interrupted with rapturous applause by his auditory, and when he mentioned the names of COOLEY and MATHER, the cheers were almost deafening. The General concluded his remarks by moving that the ticket headed with the name of GEO. W. CLINTON, for Secretary of State, be ratified, and supported at the coming election, which was carried with a thundering "AYE" from all parts of the well filled room.

A Committee on resolutions, of which Mr. Addison Hill was Chairman, reported a long series, which are similar in sentiments to those adopted by the Hunkers at Syracuse. The Barnburners, who, for the purpose of obtaining the offices under Gen. Pierce, have deserted the Buffalo platform, repudiated the Abolition allies, and attempted to force the National democrats of 1848, from the Buffalo platform, were somewhat severely handled, the pledge was given amid aclamations, to stand firmly upon the ground occupied by Jefferson, Jackson, Polk and Cass, and to repudiate Van Burenism, Barnburnerism, Freesoilism and Abolitionism, in whatever shape, or under whatever name they may attempt to seek power.

The meeting was also ably addressed by the Hon.——Vanderlyn, of Chenango County, who pledged a strong and united National democratic vote from his section of the State.

Among those present, known as Hunkers, we noticed such men as Gen. Ward, I. Birdsall, Esq., F. Larkin, Esq., J. T. Yoe, Esq, A. Hyatt, Esq, Col. D. K. Sherwood, and many others of the prominent party men of this place, with Col, Watson, from Essex county, and other prominet Hunkers from abroad. In point of numbers, enthusiasm and respectability, the meeting vastly exceeded any Pierce ratification meeting held in this county last fall.—Hudson River Chronicle.

NOVEL "PROCESSIONS."

The Albany Atlas draws the following picture of an imaginary "procession" in honor of the "Mather triumph":

"The half convicted Mather, his brow wreathed with hemlock, mounted upon an appropriate carriage, (the Black Maria might serve the purpose,) the banner of the troop high-raised, with the motto of 'Guilty of Corruption" blazoned upon it, and behind it the crowd of lobby-men, fancy contractors, whig Galphinites and democratic bank-breakers, and crew of mongrel politicians, shouting hosannahs to the Great Unconvicted. It is a scene for a painter."

We know of but one scene equal to this, which might have been witnessed at Syracuse, at the close of the 'Soft' Convention. The inimitable PRINCE JOHN, mounted upon two awkward legs, his brows enveloped in a copy of the Washington Globe, attached behind to a copy of the Albany Atlas extending from the seat downwards—his shirt-collar open, sleeves rolled up, and waist encircled with a belt, and pistols—followed by Capt. Rynders and the Empire Club, armed 'cap-a-pie,' and bearing overhead the black banner of 'Cuba, Slavery Extension, and the Fugitive Slave Law,' and these succeeded by a motley array of Soft Hunkers. Hard Barnburners, and other worthless wretches—the whole brought up by an exhibition in the rear of the 'Ragged Lawyer of Allegany" attempting to straddle from Buffalo to Baltimore, to the evident discomfiture of a huge pair of pantaloons! "It was a scene for a painter."—Saratoga Whig.

And there would be, in that 'procession' the Buffalo Republic and the N. Y. Evening Post read out of the party by the Washington Union, and the Hon. Preston King who, tho' supporting the party and the ticket, 'spits' upon the platform of the late State Convention, and the 'corner stone' or 'free soil, free speech, and free men' so long the watchwords of those who now bear aloft the banner of Slavery Extension and the Fugitive Slave Law, and there would be open-mouthed secession and disunion; and mark, leading the procession, blowing the trumpets, and bearing the democratic banners would be men, whigs in '40, Tyler in '42, Abolition in '44, Van Buren in '48, DEMOCRATS in '53! A novel procession, indeed, "a scene for a painter" truly.

Go it, ye motley crew, 'black spirits and grey,' 'helter skelter, hurly burly, pell mell, never mind consistency, no matter about the end,—'go it' and the d—l take the hindmost.'

Independence of the Country Press.

The Ontario Repository has an able and timely article under the above head, which is worthy of consideration by our brethren of the Country Press. It contends and proves that it is time that the press in the country should cast off its leading strings to the City Press, and have a mind and voice of its own.—[Broome Republican.

This sentiment has our fullest concurrences except so far as it implies a want of independence in the Country Press. We have been accustomed not only to regard the Whig Country Press as eminently Free, but to hold that Freedom as the best and highest guarantee for the Freedom and Integrity of the Whig Party. And if the Country Press has not heretofore had "a mind and a voice of its own," we have greatly mistaken its character. We have valued the 'mind and voice' of the Country Press because we belived it thought with and spoke for the People. In embodying, from time to time, the 'sentiment' of the Press, we supposed that we were concentrating the views of the Party. Were we in error in this imputation of having been 'in leading strings?' We think not. Nor can we believe that our Broome Country friend intended the reproach which his language conveys.

Our own views in relation to the Country Press have been confined to a desire to see it rendered efficient by a liberal support. We have deeply regretted the centralizing tendencies which were limiting the sphere and crippling the usefulness of the Country Press; nor have we failed to advocate all measures calculated to counteract these tendencies.

If, however, the article referred to was intended as a reproof, more to the City than to the Country Press, our reply, as one of that category, is brief, and in the kindest spirit. If we have ever, directly or indirectly, attempted to influence, or in any manner interferred with the action of the Country Press, during the twenty-three years that we have been on duty here, SOMEBODY MUST KNOW IT. And this knowledge, in whatever form it may exist, they have our full permission to impart. Holding the Freedom and Independence of the Press as its brightest attributes, we have, however faulty in other respects, kept these points fortified. And it is the manifestation of these high qualities, wherever found, that challenges respect and confidence in the Press.—[Albany Journal.

During our brief career as an Editor we have heard a great deal about 'dictation,' 'subsidizing the Country Press,' &c., &c. but must confess we have never felt it nor seen it. If there is any such thing we should like to have it pointed out to us.—So far as our experience goes, so far from discovering any desire to control the Country Press, the fact is, the opinions of the latter are eagerly sought after by the City Press. Mr. Weed of the Albany Journal has been the most generally charged with 'dictation,' and of buying up the Country Press, and many no doubt believe these assertions. Now, our relations have been intimate and friendly with him, and we have never seen the first indication of this spirit, and believe it to exist in imagination only. To us, Mr. Weed has been the most perfect gentleman, sociable, agreeable, entertaining his own opinions, and treating our own as those of an equal, but never manifesting the most distant wish, or hint of a desire to control. We may say the same of every City Editor with whom we have the pleasure of an acquaintance. It is difficult of course to compete with the City Press. Their central position, their facilities, their capital, their circulation, all combine to give them decided advantages over the Country Press, but that the latter is dependent upon the former or to any individual thereof is certainly news to us.—We believe it all arises from jealousy, disappointed ambition, and a craven spirit, which is unworthy the high and responsible position of an Editor in the land of the free, and the home of the brave.'

Finally—Our opinion is this: the City and the Country Press should co operate, their interests are mutual, and they should be mutually serviceable to each other.—If any poor fellow in the country has lost his 'independence' let him regain it ere he is utterly debased and if any City Press has attempted dictation, let us know and we will turn in for one to give such an "Irish hist."

The Annual Exhibition of this Society was to have taken place on Tuesday and Wednesday, but owing to the severe and prolonged storm through both days it was adjourned to Thursday making it too late to notice it at length, this week. As we shall give a list of entries and Premiums next week, we defer all comments to that time.

Milton, on his Loss of Sight.

The following is a correct copy of this most perfect production of the great poet. Several attempts have been made to give it to the public through the press, but it has been marred in each instance by serious imperfections. This may be relied on.—It is at least worthy of Milton's powers as all will allow who peruse it.—[Ed. Rep.

'I am old and blind!
Men point at me as smitten by God's frown:
Afflicted and deserted by my kind,
Yet I am not cast down.

I am weak, yet strong;
I murmur not, though I no longer see;
Poor, old, and helpless, I the more belong
Father supreme to thee.

O merciful one!
When men are farthest then Thou art most [near—
When friends pass by, my weakness to shun,
Thy chariot I hear.

Thy glorious face
Is leaning towards me, and its holy light
Shines in upon my lonely dwelling place,
And there is no more night.

On my bended knee
I recognize thy purpose clearly shown:
My vision, Thou hast dimmed that I may see Thyself—Thyself alone.

I have nought to fear:
This darkness is the shadow of thy wing,
Beneath it I am almost sacred—here
Can come no evil thing.

Oh! I seem to stand
Trembling, where foot of mortal ne'er hath been Wrapped in the radiance from Thy sinless hand
Which eye hath never seen.

Visions come and go:
Shapes of resplendent beauty round me throng,
From angels' lips I seem to hear the flow
Of soft and holy song.

It is nothing now
When Heaven is opening on my sightless eyes,
When airs from Paradise refresh my brow
The earth in darkness lies.

In a purer clime
My being fills with rapture—waves of thought
Roll in upon my spirit—strains sublime
Break over me unsought.

Give me now my lyre!
I feel the stirrings of a gift divine,
Within my bosom glows unearthly fire
Lit by no skill of mine."

A Letter from Ex-Senator Dickinson.

The attack of the Union upon the Hon. D. S. DICKINSON has called out a Reply from which we take the following:—

The "Free Soil" journals of this State have lately made a similar discovery, probably aided by similar optics; but as these journals, because of this very speech, and the note thereon, honored me with the distinction of stereotyping my name, enclosed in black lines, at the head of their columns, for months, and recommended that I be burned in effigy, and treated with personal indignities and violence, it gave me little concern to see them endeavoring to direct attention from themselves by assailing me in an opposite direction. Nor, since the Washington Union has furnished its contribution, should I have thought the matter worth my notice. Those who pursue me in retirement, whether as open and manly opponents, or otherwise, have their service to perform and their parts assigned them, and I have no more disposition to disturb their vocation than I have to enquire as to the nature and amount of their wages, or question the manner in which they execute their work.

I was honored with a seat in the Senate of this State four years, and there introduced resolutions upon the subject of slavery, and spoke and voted thereon; was President of the same body two years, and was seven years a Senator in Congress—from the annexation of Texas until after the passage of the compromise measures. I have, too, for the last twenty years often been a member of conventions—county, State, and national; have presented resolutions, made speeches and proposed addresses; and if, in my whole political course, a speech, vote or resolution, can be found favoring Free Soil sentiments, I will consent to occupy a position in the public judgement as degraded as the most malevolent of that faction or the most convenient accomplice.

Near the close of the session of 1847 I returned to my seat in the Senate from a most painful and distressing domestic affliction, and found the Three Million bill under discussion during which the Wilmot proviso, (so called) was offered, and my colleague, Gen. Dix presented resolutions from our Legislature, passed with great unanimity, instructing us to vote in favor of the proviso. Gen. Dix advocated the adoption of the proviso, and voted against it, and in so doing, aroused against me free soil and abolition malignity throughought the country.

Richmondville Union Seminary and FEMALE COLLEGIATE INSTITUTE,

REV. J. L. G. McKOWN, A. M., PRESIDENT.

THIS Institution is located in the village of Richmondville Schoharie Co., N. Y., 44 miles from Albany. The buildings are all new, and of sufficient capacity to accommodate 350 boarders. They are furnished with seven large recitation rooms, in all of which are fine plaster blackboards.—There are also Six Music Rooms, and a large, convenient, well lighted room, for oil painting. The Trustees have also, at considerable pains and expense fitted up a BATH-ROOM in connection with each department.

Richmondville is one of those retired and delightful villages for which New York is so justly noted. Its situation is romantic and healthful. The morals and intelligence of its inhabitants are pure and elevated. And to such as may seek the advantages of their Institution, the Trustees hope to offer, not only a safe resort, but a pleasant home.

THE COLLEGIATE INSTITUTE.—The Trustees of the Union Seminary believing from their knowledge of what constitute the true elements of success in any literary institution, and from the grade of scholars attending the Seminary, and from the scholarship necessarily required by the times that a FULL and FORMAL course of study ought to be prescribed, particularly for young ladies: resolved to establish, in connection with the Seminary and under the same corporation and Faculty, a Female Collegiate Institute.

They propose, in this Institute, to afford facilities for as complete and thorough a course of study as most of the Colleges of our land.

They do not expect to make prodigies of the girls committed to their care, but they hope, by thorough discipline and proper culture, to better prepare them to fill woman's sphere.

ACCESS.

The village is connected with Albany by plank road.—The Albany and Susquehannah Railroad will also pass thro' the place. There are daily mails from Albany, Catskill and Oneonta.

FACULTY.

The Trustees feel confident, that with a thorough and efficient Faculty of twelve Professors and Teachers, they will be fully able to meet the high expectations entertained of this School. The Departments of French, Music and Oil Painting, as the others offer advantages second to those of no similar Institution.

A NORMAL CLASS.

Arrangements will be made for a teacher's class, to commence with the term. The course of study pursued will be that laid down by the Regents of the University of the State of New York.

EXPENSES.

Board, lodging room, furnished, washing and fuel, per week, $1 25. Tuition in common English branches, per quarter, $3. Board and Tuition in common English branches per quarter, $17. Tuition and board will be required quarterly in advance, and this requisition will be strictly adhered to.

TERMS AND VACATIONS.

The Institution will reopen on the 20th of October. All students intending to enter should be present at that time, in order to commence with the classes. They may enter, however, at any time, but will be charged to the whole time, unless entering at or after the commencement of the last half quarter, in which case charges will be made for the half quarter entered upon.

N. B.—Students will be carried at the commencement and close of each term; from and to Albany and Canajoharie free of expense, board excepted. The stages will start from the Mansion House in Broadway and the hotel at Canajoharie, at 9 o'clock, A. M., on Wednesday, the 19th of October.

Persons desirous of further information may apply to the Rev. J. L. G. McKown, or either of the following gentlemen:—Augustus W. Smith, L. L. D., Pres. Wesleyan University, Middletown Ct.; Ira Harris, L. L. D., 6 Exchange Building, Albany, N. Y.; Rev. Stephen D. Brown, Troy, N. Y.; Wm. B. Sprague, D. D., 61 Washington Street, Albany, N. Y.; Rev. THE MARRIAGE STATE;

Shall Happiness and Health, or Misery and Sickness, attend it?

MOST STARTLING CONSIDERATIONS!

Reflections for the Thoughtful.

Strange that countless human beings exist and drag through life as do the beasts of the field, or the insects of the earth, evincing no more thought or reflection than though the noble faculties of mind were not vouchsafed to them.

Many such are husbands and fathers, upon whom are dependent the health, the well-being, and the happiness of a confiding and affectionate wife, with perhaps a family of children.

HOW OFTEN IT HAPPENS THAT THE

WIFE LINGERS FROM YEAR TO YEAR

In that pitiable condition as not even for one day to feel the happy and exhilarating influence incident to the enjoyment of health.

She may not be an invalid confined to her bed, or even to her room; as her pride, ambition and energy induce and nerve her to take personal charge of her household, even when her health will not admit of it; but she is nevertheless perceptibly sinking from day to day, and always ailing.

Thus, day after day, and month after month transpire. Her health daily sinks, till finally even the hope of recovery no longer remains. And thus

THE BLOOMING BRIDE,

But a few years ago in the flush of health and youth, and buoyancy of spirits, rapidly, and apparently inexplicably, becomes a feeble, sickly, debilitated wife, with frame emaciated, nerves unstrung, spirits depressed, countenance bearing the impress of suffering, and an utter physical and mental prostration.

Sometimes this deplorable change may and does arise from organic or constitutional causes. But oftener, by far oftener, to gross and inexcusable ignorance of the simplest and plainest rules of health as connected with the marriage state, the violation of which entails disease, suffering and misery, not only to the wife, but often from the Parents.

And must this continue? Shall we be wise in all that concerns the cattle of our fields, our horses, our sheep, our cows, our oxen, the nature and character of the soil we possess, the texture and quality of our goods and merchandise; but in all that concerns ourselves as human beings, with human functions and passions, subject to great derangement, involving our future peace and happiness—in all that concerns the health and welfare of the wife of our affections, and the mother of our children; in all that concerns the mental and physical well being of those children, we should be immersed in the darkest and most

BENIGHTED IGNORANCE,

AS CULPABLE AS INEXCUSABLE!

How long shall this ignorance prevail so productive of its bitter fruits? How long shall the wife and mother be ignorant of the nature, character and causes of the various womb and sexual complaints, embittering her days by suffering—suffering often prolonged to years, eventuating in a complication of diseases utterly and hopelessly incurable? Shall we for ever close our eyes to the results of physiological science by which we may arrive at an understanding of ourselves as men and women, subject to serious life-long enduring diseases, and perpetuating them to our children.

LET EVERY WIFE AND HUSBAND PONDER!

No husband or wife need be ignorant of what concerns them most to know to secure their health and happiness. That knowledge is contained in a little work entitled

KEEP THESE COMMANDMENTS AND THOU SHALT YET BE SOMEBODY!

1 Thou shalt have no other place to buy thy Clothing.

2 Thou shalt not choose to thyself any other Clothier. Thou shalt not bow down to them nor listen to their fair speeches, for Cardwell is a reliable Clothier, capable and willing to dress his customers to the third and fourth Generation.

3 Thou needs't not search for Cardwells Clothing Store in vain; it is in the Adirondac Hotel Building, and has the most splendid Sign in the State.

4 Thou shalt keep in rememberance the above location; six days shalt thou labour, and on Saturday night come and buy thy Sunday outfit.

5 Thou shalt honor the judicious adorner of thy person and long may thy days be upon the land to enjoy the fruits of his services.

6 Thou shalt not commit an outrage upon propriety, by purchasing your Clothing of any wandering Jew that may come hither, nor of any one else that has not courage enough to adhere strictly to one branch of trade.

7 Thou shalt not take unto thyself foreign fashions by adulterously wedding strange garments to thy body thereby converting an American citizen into a foreign ambassador.

8 Thou shalt not rob Cardwell! for he sells so Cheap 'twould be a sin.

9 Thou shalt not bear false witness but honestly acknowledge that thou can't get better suited at Cardwell's for less money than any other place, get thy money's worth and the right change back.

10 Thou shalt not covet thy neighbor's garments, but take counsel of the wise and proceed straightway to Cardwell's and buy for thyself and be satisfied.

LEANDER BABBIT'S
TRUSS OFFICE

The latest and most approved Trusses; Female Supporters; Do. with shoulder braces attached; spinal elevator for curvature of the spine and projection of the shoulder blade. Suspensary shoulder braces. This instrument is so constructed that it not only acts the part of shoulder braces but carries the heft of the ladies' skirts on their shoulders; and, hence remedies the evil consequent to wearing them on the hips and sides. For gentlemen it not only serves for a shoulder brace, but acts the part of suspenders.

As to the importance and usefulness of the above named instruments, and their beneficial effects, their peculiar mechanism and superiority over other instruments of the same name, I need not say anything. They are so well known by physicians, and the multitude of persons that have had occasion to use them in this northern section of country, that I deem it not important to introduce a long catalogue of certificates; yet I have abundant evidence in my possession to justify me in all I claim or affirm, and deem it a privilege to give references to any who wish to make inquiries.

Office at Keeseville in the building on the corner of Main and Front street, opposite the Bank, up stairs.

Ladies will be waited on at my dwelling by Mrs. Babbit whose experience in adjusting braces and supporters qualifies her to give perfect satisfaction. 481—6m

Ploughs! Ploughs!!

PROUTY & MEARS'

Celebrated Centre Draughts—All Sizes.

THESE Ploughs wherever introduced, are fast superseding all others.

The most thorough trials of Ploughs on record in this country, and at the World's Fair in London, have demonstrated the important fact, that the Centre draught Plough is of much easier draught than any other, and therefore used with less fatigue to both Ploughman and Team; and, also owing to its peculiar form it pulverizes and prepares the ground to a good more perfectly than any other, leaving less work for the harrow, and securing better crops than by any other method of Culture.

The following implements among others of the best quality, and of the latest and most approved patterns, are constantly on hand, viz:

Harrows, Seed Sowers, Corn Planters, Corn Shellers, Straw Cutters, Corn and Cob Crushers, Cheese Presses, Threshing Machines, Potato Hoes, Manure Hooks, Cast from Ox Scrapers, Pruning Shears, Tree Scrapers, Budding and Pruning Knives, Hay Knives, Barn Door Rollers, Agricultural Furnaces, Corn Knives, Post Hole Augers, Wheelbarrows, Sheep Shears, &c. &c.

CONCURRENT RESOLUTION PROPOSING AN AMENDMENT TO THE CONSTITUTION.

Resolved, (if the Senate concur,) That the following amendment be proposed to the constitution of this state and referred to the legislature to be chosen at the next general election of senators, and be published for three months previous to making such choice, in pursuance to the provisions of the first section of the thirteenth article, of said constitution.

Substitute for section three of article seven the following:

After paying the said expenses of collection, superintendence and repairs of the canals, and the sums appropriated by the first and second sections of this article, there shall be appropriated and set apart in each fiscal year out of the surplus revenues of the canals, as a sinking fund, a sum sufficient to pay the interest as it falls due, and extinguish the principal within eighteen years of any loan made under this section and if the said sinking fund shall not be sufficient to redeem any part of the principal at the stipulated times of payment, or to pay any part of the interest of such loans as stipulated, the means to satisfy any such deficiency shall be procured on the credit of the said sinking fund. After complying with the foregoing provisions, there shall be paid annually out of said revenues into the treasury of the state two hundred thousand dollars, to defray the necessary expenses of government. The remainder shall, in each fiscal year, be applied to meet appropriations for the enlargement and completion of the canals mentioned in this section, until the said canals shall be completed. In each fiscal year thereafter the remainder shall be disposed of in such manner as the legislature may direct, but shall at no time be anticipated or pledged for more than one year in advance. The legislature shall annually, during the next four years, appropriate to the enlargement of the Erie, the Oswego, the Cayuga and Seneca canals, and to the completion of the Black River and Genesee Valley canals, and for the enlargement of the locks of the Champlain canal, whenever from dilapidation or decay it shall be necessary to rebuild them, a sum not exceeding two millions two hundred and fifty thousand dollars. The remainder of the revenues of the canals for the current fiscal year in which such appropriation is made, shall be applied to meet such appropriation, and if the same shall be deemed insufficient, the legislature shall at the same session provide for the deficiency by loan. The legislature shall also borrow one million and five hundred thousand dollars to refund to the holders of the canal revenue certificates issued under the provisions of chapter four hundred and eighty-five of the laws of the year one thousand eight hundred and fifty-one, the amount received into the treasury thereon. But no interest to accrue after July first, one thousand eight hundred and fifty-five, shall be paid on such Certificates. The provisions of section twelve of this article requiring every law for borrowing money to be submitted to the people, shall not apply to the loans authorized by this section. No part of the revenues of the canals or of the funds borrowed under this section, shall be paid or applied upon or in consequence of any alleged contract made under chapter four hundred and eighty-five of the laws of the year one thousand eight hundred and fifty one, except to pay for work done or materials furnished prior to the first day of June, one thousand eight hundred and fifty-two. The rates of toll on persons and property transported on the canal shall not be reduced below those for the year one thousand eight hundred and fifty-two, except by the canal board, with the concurrence of the legislature.—All contracts for work or materials on any canal, shall be made with the person who shall offer to do or provide the same at the lowest price, with adequate security for their performance.

FRAUD!

ALL who want Axes of the real Collins & Co. make should be particular to notice the stamps, as there are various counterfeits and imitations stamped Collins and labelled much like ours, which are fraudulently sold in some parts of the United States as our manufacture. They are made in different parts of the country by various axe-makers, and are generally of very inferior quality The genuine Collins axes, which have acquired such an extensive reputation are invariably stamped "COLLINS & CO. HARTFORD," and each axe has a printed label with my signature.—It is now more than Twenty-five years since we commenced the business with the stamp of "Collins & Co. Hartford," and I do not know of any other axe-maker by the name of Collins in the United States.

Miscellaneous.

21 Years Experience.

OLD ESTABLISHED HOSPITAL.

Quick Cures and Low prices. Private Diseases and their Antidote.

Dr. LISPENARD, author of the Marriage Guide, or Private Medical Treatise, Professor of Diseases of Women and Children, and Licentiate of the College of Physicians and Surgeons of the United States University, &c., &c., continues as heretofore to be confidentially and successfully consulted on all forms and variety of

PRIVATE DISEASES,

at his old quarters, No 5 Beaver str et ALBANY, N. Y.

The great success attending the use of Doctor L.'s remedies in secret diseases, and the many remarkable cures daily effected by him in recent and lingering attacks, is conclusive evidence that the well

SICK AND UNFORTUNATE

can do no better than consult the Doctor, whose whole time is devoted to the exclusive treatment of this much neglected branch of practice.

LOOK AT THIS.

Dr. Lispenard cures recent cases of disease in from three to six days, and chronic or long standing diseases in a very short period of time, without the use of Mercury, without the loss of time change of diet, or detention from

DAILY EMPLOYMENT.

In Syphillis, Gonorrhœa, Gleet, Strictures, Enlargement of the Testicles and Cords, Bubo, Chancres Pimples and Scaly Eruptions, Sore Throats and Noses, Chancres on the tongue, tender shin bones, and diseases of the skin, and impure blood. Dr. Lispenard's remedies are above all praise, and frequently cure when all others had failed

EVEN TO RELIEVE.

More than 5,000 patients have during the past year experienced the benefit of the Doctor's extraordinary skill in treating secret diseases—among which, diseases of the bladder and kidneys have formed a goodly proportion.

YOUNG MEN,

who by indulging in secret habits have injured their health and prostrated their intellectual faculties, and thereby deprived themselves of the pleasure of married life, should consult Dr. Lispenard without a moment's delay. Hundreds have been restored to health, society and friends, under my peculiar mode of treatment, although vast sums of money had been sacrificed without any benefit. My remedy for this disease is pleasant to take, has no offensive smell and

CURES WITHOUT FAIL

☞ Persons so unfortunate as to be diseased, although they may have visited half a dozen Doctors, and had medicine sent them a dozen times with no benefit would exhibit wisdom by making their case known to that Friend of the Sick, Dr. Lispenard, who never charges for advice and warrants all his cures. The sick are often at a loss where to apply for relief, and 'tis no wonder, as hundreds stand ready to plunder the unfortunate victim of Private disease, or secret habits without one thought for his life and health. All thus deceived will find a friend, and moderate charges, in consulting the Doctor who uses no mercury and cures every time.

N. B.—Persons from a distance when visiting the city in search of a physician and friend will be fortunate if they succeed in escaping the many dens of imposition, conducted by unprincipled men, destitute of character knowledge or name, who fleece the unfortunate victim of disease of his hard earned money, and his remaining health. Patients who have no acquaintance in the city should make inquiry of some respectable citizen, or the editor or proprietor of any of the city papers, to ascertain who is the most reliable physician to apply to.

FEMALE DISEASES.

Dr. Lispenard, from an experience seldom or never enjoyed by any other medical man, is enable to treat, with every hope of success, all and every variety of Female Complaints—with safe and pleasant remedies—and has without doubt cured within the past five years more than 3000 females afflicted with diseases of the Bladder, Womb, &c. &c. Ladies afflicted with suppression or stoppage of their monthly turns, will recollect that Dr. Lispenard is still the sole American agent for.

DR. VICHOI'S

FEMALE MONTHEY PILLS.

The unprecedented sale of more than 15,000 boxes of these excellent Pills, and the good results which always follow their use, is conclusive evidence of their utility in stoppages, &c. Caution—Married Ladies in certain delicate situations should not use them—for reasons see directions with each box. Price $1. Sent by mail to all parts of the world.

Married Persons and those about to Marry, should enclose 12½ cen's post paid to Dr. Lispenard, and obtain a copy of his Marriage Guide, or Private Treatise, a bewitching little work of nearly 100 pages, illustrated. Every thing that married persons can desire or wish to know, is here explained. Persons who from poverty or sickness have no desire to increase their family, will find necessary instruction in the Marriage Guide. One copy 12½ cents; 5 copies 50 cts ; 12 copies $1—mailed free to any part of the world.

N. B.—Patients treated by letter, and medicines sent, with full directions for use, to the writer's address, All communications destroyed or returned.

No mercury used in any case, and all cures warranted. No boys or precocious students allowed: timed persons take notice.

Friends of Dr. L, when recommending patients to our care will recollect our number, 5 Beaver st., three doors from South Broadway.

"Man Know Thyself."

An Invaluable Book for 25 Cents.

"EVERY FAMILY SHOULD HAVE A COPY."

20,000 Copies sold in less than 5 months. A new edition, revised and improved, just issued.

Dr. Hunter's Medical Manual and Hand Book for the Afflicted—

Containing an outline of the origin, progress, treatment and cure of every form of disease, contracted by promiscuous sexual intercourse, by self abuse or by sexual excess, with advice for their prevention, written in a familiar style, avoiding all medical technicalities, and everything that would offend the ear of decency, from the result of some twenty years successful practice, exclusively devoted to the cure of diseases of a delicate or private nature.

To which is added, receipts for the cure of the above diseases, and a treatise on the causes, symptoms and cure of the Fever and Ague.

Testimony of the Prof of Obstetrics in Penn. College, Philadelphia —"Dr. Hunter's Medical Manual."—The author of this work unlike the majority of those works who advertise to cure the diseases of which it treats, is a graduate of one of the best Colleges in the United States. It affords me pleasure to recommend him to the unfortunate, or to the victim of malpractice, as a successful and experienced practitioner, in whose honor and integrity they may place the greatest confidence.

JOSEPH LONGSHORE M. D.

From A Woodward M. D., of Penn. University, Philadelphia—It gives me pleasure to add my testimony to the professional ability of the author of the "Medical Manual." Numerous cases of diseases of the Genital Organs, some of them of long standing have come under my notice, in which his skill has been manifest in restoring to perfect health, in some instances where the patient has been considered beyond medical aid. In the treatment of Seminal weakness, or disarrangement of the functions produced by Self-abuse, or Excess of venery, I do not know his superior in the profession. I have been acquainted with the Author some thirty years, and deem it no more than justice to him as well as a kindness to the unfortunate victim of early indiscretion, to recommend him as one, in whose professional skill and integrity they may safely confide themselves. ALFRED WOODWARD, M.D.

"This is, without exception, the most comprehensive and intelligible work published on the class of diseases of which it treats Avoiding all technical terms, it addresses itself to the reason of its readers. It is free from all objectionable matter, and no parent, however fastidious, can object to placing it in the hands of his sons. The author has devoted many years to the treatment of the various complaints treated of, and with too little breath to puff,' and 'too little presumption to impose,' he has offered to the world at the merely nominal price of 25 cents, the fruits of some 20 years most successful practice."—Herald.

"No teacher or parent should be without the knowledge imparted in this invaluable work. It would save years of pain, mortification and sorrow to the youth under their charge."—People's Advocate.

A Presbyterian clergyman in Ohio, in writing of "Hunter's Medical Manual," says: "Thousands upon thousands of our youth, by evil example and influence of the passions, have been led into the habit of self pollution without realising the sin and fearful consequences upon themselves and their posterity. The constitutions of thousands who are raising families have been enfeebled, if not broken down, and the do not know the cause or the cure. Anything that can be done so to enlighten and influence the public mind as to check, and ultimately to remove this widespread source of human wretchedness, would confer the greatest blessing next to the religion of Jesus Christ, on the present and coming generations. Intemperance (or the use of intoxicating drinks,) though it has slain thousands upon thousands, is not a greater scourge to the human race. Accept my thanks on behalf of the afflicted, and, believe me, your co-worker in the good work you are so actively engaged in."

One copy, (securely enveloped,) will be forwarded free of postage to any part of the United States for 25 cents, or 6 copies for $1.—Address (post paid) COSDEN & Co., publishers, Box 196, Philadelphia. 478y

§ 1. In order to carry into effect and promote the benevolent design of Samuel DeVeaux, late of the county of Niagara, deceased, as expressed in his will bearing date the third day of August, in the year one thousand eight hundred and fifty two, by which certain real and personal estate is directed to be applied "for the purpose of establishing, founding and maintaining a benevolent institution, to receive and support orphan and destitute children; to train them up to industry; to learn them trades and professions, and to give them a mental and manuel, and a social and religious education;" William H. DeLancey, of the county of Ontario; William Shelton and Elijah Ford, of the county of Erie; Horatio Seymour, of the county of Oneida; Peter A. Porter, Richard H. Woodruff, Washington Hunt, Elias Ransom and Joseph M. Clarke, of the county of Niagara, and their successors duly chosen and appointed as hereinafter specified, are hereby constituted a body corporate, which shall be deemed and taken to be the corporation directed by the said will to be formed and as such shall and may take, hold and enjoy for the purposes expressed in the said will and no other, the real and personal estate therein directed to be applied to the said purposes, as fully to all intents and purposes, as if the said corporation had been formed at the time of the death of the said Samuel DeVeaux.

The said corporation shall have perpetual succession, and be capable of taking and holding by purchase, gift, grant or devise, any real or personal estate for the purposes aforesaid; but the yearly income of the same and of the property so acquired under the said will, shall not exceed the sum of fifteen thousand dollars, and shall possess the powers and privileges, and be subject to the liabilities and provisions contained in the third title, of chapter eighteen, of the first part of the Revised Statutes as the same may have been amended, so far as the same may be applicable, and not inconsistent with the provisions of this act

§ 2. There shall be nine trustees of the said corporation, who shall take charge and possession of the property directed by the said will of the Samuel DeVeaux, to be applied to the purposes aforesaid; and of all other funds and real or personal estate whatever that may be acquired by the said corporation, and manage, and dispose of the same, and apply the income and avails thereof to the purposes expressed as aforesaid in the said will, and, to no other.—The persons named in the first section of this act shall be the first trustees of the said corporation, and they, together with any others that may be chosen and appointed as herein after specified, should hold their offices during the pleasure of the bishop and standing committee of the Protestant Episcopal church, of the diocese of western New York.

The trustees for the time being shall furnish to the said bishop and standing committee, annually, and whenever required by them, a full statement of the property and funds in their charge, and the condition thereof, of the number, ages and sex of the children received by them, the course of training and education pursued, the items of all receipts ans disbursements with an accompanying certificate of at least three of their number that they have compared the same with the vouchers, and that they are full and satisfactory, and such other matters and things in relation to the business and purposes of the said institution as the said bishop and standing committee shall direct. § 3. This act shall take effect immediately.

State of New York, } I have compared Secretary's Office } the preceding with the original law on file in this office, and do certify that the same is a correct transcript therefrom and of the whole of said original.

The Ausable River and Falls---Iron Works---Scenery, &c.

KEESEVILLE, N. Y., August.

About five miles from Lake Champlain, embosomed among the high hills of Essex County, lies the pleasant village of Keeseville, of which and its vicinity the following account may interest the readers of your encyclopedic journal. It takes its name from a family by the name of Keese, who were among its first settlers, and has a population of 3,000 inhabitants, eminent for the intelligence and enterprise which are needed to develop the resources of a region as rich in mineral wealth as it is rugged in surface. The traveller will find here large manufactories, several handsome churches, a bank, a flourishing academy of a high order, and all the usual adjuncts of an enterprising manufacturing town. During the two past years two new and tasteful churches have been built—the Baptist, costing $6,000, and the Presbyterian, 12,000. The Episcopalians have also erected a neat chapel.

The great attractions of the village are the ironworks and the magnificent scenery of the immediate vicinity. Of these let me speak.

The growth and prosperity of Keeseville are derived principally from the immense water power supplied by the Ausable River, which flows through the center of the village. On its banks a large deserted woolen factory stands, a monument of the Free Trade Tariff. It has, however, been recently leased for a period of four years, and will soon be added to the iron works of the Messrs. Kingsland, of which I send you the following accurate account.

These works now consist of one rolling mill, which turns out the "nail plate" at the rate of 4,000 tuns a year, and two nail factories where are 55 nail machines, making 80,000 kegs annually.

The rapidity and precision of these machines are wonderful. The same firm are just finishing another large mill at a cost of $30,000, in which they will roll all kinds of iron; round and square, scroll and horse shoe, band and hoop.

These works consume annually 6,000 tons of iron, valued, at present prices, at about $500,000. One half of this is made from the native ore at their own works, and the remainder at small forgies in the vicinity. The works are known as the Eagle Nail Works.

Forty-nine thousand bushels of charcoal were used by them during the month of July. This is made about eight miles from the village.

In addition to the above, the same enterprising firm are engaged in manufacturing nuts and washers for screws, and wrought iron wagon axles.

With the patentee, a young man resident near by, they are now perfecting a most ingenious machine for making horse-shoe nails. It has already been successfully tried and produces a nail pronounced by blacksmiths themselves equal to those made by hands. Its products will soon be in the market, and it is expected will reduce the price of those nails three or four cents per pound.

The ore bed which mainly supplies these mills is about eight miles distant, and varies in depth from 50 to 300 feet.

Directly and indirectly, 800 men are employed by the Company. They are principally Irish and Canadian French. Of the latter, there are multitudes in Keeseville. I was struck with their diminutive size as a class of people. They intermarry within close affinities, and generally at a very early age. Many mere boys, 17 and 18 years old, are already husbands and fathers.

The scenery of the village and surrounding country is equally beautiful and remarkable; taking its rise from Lake Placid, at the foot of the old White Face Mountain, 40 miles away, which towers up nearly 5,000 feet above Lake Champlain, the Ausable (pronounced An-saw ble) pours its swift current along. It is a bold, wild river, rushing through the grand old hills, plunging over its rocky bed, turning graceful curves and sharp angles, leaping precipices, tearing through mighty chasms, and again gliding over more level planes, until, by two seperate forks, it empties into Lake Champlain.

To the mere tourist and the man of science, the locality is exceedingly interesting. Miss Frederika Bremer, the Swedish authoress, thought it second only in its wonders to Niagara. No geologist could pass it without minute investigation and professional enthusiasm.

Prof. Emmons, in the Natural History of the State of New York, has described its geological features at length, and gives a wood cut of its most striking locality.—The rock which forms the bed and banks of the river, (and of which there is enough to build many cities like London,) is known as the Potsdam sandstone. It lies in thin horizontal layers, is easily procured, and answers admirably for building purposes, as Keeseville itself may testify. The same kind of stone is found in the neighborhood of Ticonderoga, and in many localities bordering on Lake Champlain.

Half a mile below the village, the river takes its first plunge over a perpendicular rack falling thirty feet into an oval basin whose diameters are from 800 to 150 feet. From hence, it passes for half a mile between "munitions of rocks;" until at the little village of Birmingham it taks its last majestic leap, sixty feet over the jagged precipice. From the foot of the Falls, the course of the stream lies for a mile, through an awful chasm in the hills. Passing some distance down the banks, we find within a few hundred rods of each other, two stairways, built by citizens of the village for public use. One of these has 189 steps and is built in a huge rent in the rocks The other has about 230 steps, and lands you at one of the most remarkable points of view. The river, serpentine in its course, and narrowed down to twenty feet in width in some places, roars and rages against its walls. Looking upward, you are awed by the rude grandeur of the scene. The rocks towering on either side 150 feet high, surmounted by the whistling pines and cedars—the perfect solitude, where scarcely an insect's hum joins the song of the river—the great rifts in the rocks, as if split by Titans, all contribute to overpower the mind of the sensitive observer with a feeling of the majesty, and presence of the unseen maker of it all. When the water is low, as it was a few days ago, you may walk safely on the projecting pathway of rock to the very foot of the falls. We stood there amid the spray watching the rainbow in the mist, and thinking involuntarily of Him who hung his arch of promise there—and to whom the wild river sends up its "unceasing thunder "and eternal foam."

If, Mr. Editor, any of your readers would enjoy grand scenery, and spend a few pleasant days of an autumn trip away from the crowds of the city, and the din of its business, let them go to Keeseville, and see how rails are made and how the Ausable "fiercely "glad," leaps

"Down those precipitious, black, jagged rocks Forever shattered, and the same forever."

Letter from Greene C. Bronson, Collector of the Port.

NEW YORK, SEP. 22, 1853.

GENTLEMEN;—I have received your invitation to address a meeting of the democracy of the city at Tammany Hall, on Friday evening, and to participate with you in "ratifying our State ticket," meaning the ticket which was last nominated at the recent Syracuse Convention. Although it must be known to you that I am not in the habit of addressing political assemblies, candor requires me to add, that I do not intend in any form to support that ticket. As a lover of honesty in politics, as well as in other things, and of good order in society, I cannot approve of nominations brought about by fraud and violence. Those who introduce convicts and bullies into our conventions, for the purpose of controlling events, must not expect that their proceedings will be sanctioned by me, whatever course may be pursued by others.

Although this is ground enough for declining your invitation, I will add, that if all the nominees were otherwise unexceptionable, they come before the public under the leadership of men who have been striving to defeat the early completion of the public works; and after the shameless breach which we have witnessed of past pledges in relation to the canals, there can be no reasonable ground for hope that new promise will be performed.

The whole tenor of my life renders it unnecessary for me to make any professions of attachment to democratic principles, or to the good old-fashioned republican party, which has stood by the country, the constitution, and the laws, through all times and changes. And the fact that I accepted and still continue to hold office under the President makes it equally unnecessary for me, as an honest and honorable man, to say that this administration, of the government, in conformity with the principles announced in the Baltimore platform and his inaugural address, will at all times receive my cordial support.

You say of the "State Administration," that it "must be sustained." I am at a loss to know what you intend to do by way of upholding the State officers; for they have so conducted public affairs, for the past few years, that not one of them, (with the exception of Mr. Mather,) was so much as mentioned for a nomination in either branch of the Convention. The only way in which you can sustain them is by perpetuating their policy in relation to the canals; and in my judgement, nothing could be more injurious to the best interests of the city and State of New York.

I have deemed it proper, in these times of double-dealing, to speak plainly, but without any intention of giving offence.

I am, very respectfully, yours,
(Copy) GREENE C. BRONSON.

Messrs. William D. Kennedy, and others, Committee.

LETTER FROM CHARLES O'CONOR, Esq., THE UNITED STAETS DISTRICT ATTORNEY.

NEW YORK, Sept. 21, 1853.

GENTLEMEN—I have received your circular of the 19th inst, in which, on behalf of the Commitee of Arrangements, you extend to me an invitation to address a meeting of the Democracy of this city and county, to be held at Tammany Hall on Friday evening, desiring me to participate with you in ratifying your State ticket, "and cementing the bonds that unite the State of our confederacy."

There are two State tickets before the public nominated by two separate assemblies of professed democrats, which were convened by the same authority, and held at the same time and place. Which of these tickets is entitled to his support is a question now forced upon every Democrat. In public announcement of my name among those invited to address the meeting, it is rendered incumbent upon me to state frankly, and at this early period, how, for my own personal government, I have resolved it.

At the ensuing, and all future elections in which I may be allowed to participate, I shall give my full support to that State ticket, by whatsoever name it may be called, which shall be most distinctly and reliably pledged to "cementing the bonds that unite the State of our confederacy." All who know me will credit this avowal.

Although thus fully agreeing with the only principle taken notice of in your circular, I cannot advocate the election of what it calls your ticket. Judging the ticket before us by the names and known antecedents of the opposing candidates found upon them or by the names and published observations of the leading members of the conventions by which those tickets were respectively nominated, no reasonable doubt can be entertained which of [illegible] fellows these Softs!

most devoted to preserving union and harmony between the States of this confedreacy.

One of the conventions was uncontaminated by the presence of a single member ever known as an agitator of principles or practices tending in any degree, however slight, to disturb that union and harmony the candidates put forth by it are equally free from reproach. Turning to the contemplation of the other conventions, I find that all its leaders were but recently engaged in a course of political agitation directly tending to discord between the Northern and Southern States. It has indeed presented a platform of principle unqualifiedly denouncing that political agitation as dangerous to the permanency of the Union, and inadmissable among democrats; but when it is considered that the leaders, with one unimpressive exception, expressly withheld assent to that platform, or repudiated it, the resolution adopting it is not in my opinion entitled to any confidence whatever.

One of the candidates nominated by this body, who was himself a member of it, refused his assent to these very principles in the most emphatic manner as lately as the month of June, 1852. As far as is known to me, he still repudiates them. It is presumable that he fairly reflects the animus of the Convention which nominated him, and I know no reason for supposing that any of his associates on the ticket are in this respect unlike him.

My choice between tickets thus presented is easily made. I adopt that which was made by a convention of sound, unquestioned and unquestionable democrats, whose platform is unexceptionable in its terms, is admitted on all hands to have been adopted with sincerity, and corresponds with the political life and actions of its framers. I shall support to the best of my ability, the ticket first nominated at Syracuse, and headed George W. Clinton, for Secretary of State.

I am, gentlemen, with great respect, your obedient servant,

CH. O'CONOR.

County Superintendent of Poor;

Justice of Sessions,

HARVEY CARTER.

☞Lot Chamberlin, who was a candidate for Sheriff, in this county, in 1847, ran ahead of Hamilton Fish, candidate for Lieut. Governor, by 49 votes, and Millard Fillmore, by 16 votes. If Lot can outrun a Governor of the State and United States Senator, and a President of the United States, who says he cannot beat the present Locofoco Barnburner candidate, who was defeated in his own town, last spring, for Justice of the Peace, by 119 majority?—Clinton Co. Whig.

We rejoice in Lot's nomination, and sincerely hope he may be elected. He is a glorious good fellow, and if there is any body the people wish well it is him. The have almost elected him several times, and we hope they will accomplish it this time. The whig puts this problem: "If a man is beat in his own town by 119 majority, when by a party vote he ought to have had 40 majority, by how much will he be beat in the county when the party majority is 500?"

Lot don't ask as much majority as the answer to this problem would give him. He is a reasonable man, and will be content with a reasonable majority.

☞The Montgomery Co. Whig says that it is reported, that one of the delegates from that county to the State Convention, who so mysteriously deserted the adamantines, has received an appointment from Gov. Seymour. This may account for the milk in the cocoanut.—Troy Post.

Cheap at that, and it may account for the milk in another cocoanut. Mr. A. P. Grant, whose election as Delegate the Hunkers triumphantly carried in Oswego, went into their organization and proposed to return to Brinkal Hall and "fight it out" with the Softs—When, however, he found he was not to be their presiding officer, the overtures of the Softs were accepted and he sold himself for the high distinction of being made the President of the Barnburner Convention. Such is the historic fact which accounts for his change of fealty and the secret of a much boasted

The County Convention—the Ticket.

JUDGE BURNET was re-nominated by acclamation. The mention of his name was received with marked demonstrations of favor, followed by cordial calls for his appearance. As he appeared in response he was again applauded, and the applause was continued during his progress to the stand. Such unexpected cordiality deeply affected the Judge, and for some moments he could scarcely command his feelings sufficiently to proceed. Recovering himself, he proceeded to speak with his accustomed elegance, expressing his acknowledgements to the whigs of Essex, reviewing, briefly, his labors at Albany, and closed by a brief allusion to the past and present position of parties, in strains of unsurpassed eloquence, sarcasm, and wit.

The Judge has been eminently successful in all his labors, and most fortunate in all his positions.

It is stated at Albany, that Judge Burnet was the only man in the House, who could handle Mr. Loomis, the barnburner bear, who lead that faction in the last Legislature, whom he completely foiled and humbled, beating him not only on law and fact, but in an attempt to browbeat, in which the Judge completely cowed and shamed that gentleman into the quietness of a kitten. We have from time to time published the speeches of Judge Burnet, and whoever has read them need not to be told that he has a superior mind, thoroughly educated, and peculiarly adapted to the position he occupies. We congratulate the whigs of Essex County and the Judge on their mutual good fortune. We trust the vote at the coming election will be such as a faithful, competent, and successful public servant deserves at the hands of his constituents.

MR. SMITH, of Ticonderoga, and MR. CARTER of Keeseville, nominated for Co. Supt. of Poor, and Justice of Sessions, respectively, have served one term, and we believe with entire satisfaction. They are both men of strict integrity, and worthy of the confidence whigs place in them. We bespeak for them every whig vote in the county, and as many democrats as are pleased thus to acknowledge their superiority.

The Prospect of the "Hards."

A friend—one who has been more "woolly" than ourself—writing us from the South on business, says—

"It looks now as if the hards were going to poll some votes. Although I agree with neither, I must own that such a letter as Bronson's pleases me. I should be apt to vote for that man if I could get a chance. There is no humbugging about him."

Such is the view of every dispassionate man in the State, as between the hards and the softs. The latter have so outraged every feeling of honor and decency, their abasement for place and power has been so flagrant and barefaced, that as between those two factions there is but one sentiment among all honest men.

This sentiment is taking deep root in the democratic party, and it is destined to increase in intensity to the time of election. If that period could be delayed three months there would not be enough barnburners left to put in tea. In the outset, the prospect of the hunkers was dubious indeed, but every hour adds to their moral and numerical force.—Deserted by the genuine hunkers, and the sincere free soilers, there will be left at the time of election only the trading, rowdy demagogues What will become of these, time only can tell. They deserve only to be outcasts on the face of the earth, the objects of scorn, a prey to their own evil imaginations; "outlawed and under ban," their hand against everybody, and everbody's hand against them.

N. Y. S. Militia.

At a meeting of the Officers of the 31st Regt. N. Y. S. Militia, at the "Pavillion" at Old Ti. Fort, Sept. 28th, 1853, Lt. Col. John L. Merriam was called to the Chair, and Capt. M. F. Nicholson appointed Secy.

On motion: Resolved, that the officers of the 31st tender to Brig. General Gray their heart felt thanks for his efforts in endeavoring to promote the welfare of our Regt.: and that, in him we repose our entire confidence, and will ever be ready to follow his lead wherever our duty as citizen soldiers may call us.

Resolved, That a copy of these Resolutions be presented to Gen. Gray.

Resolved, That these Resolutions be published in the several papers in this Brigade District.

JOHN L. MERRIAM, Ch'n.
M. F. NICHOLSON, Sec'y.

We give place to the above with very much pleasure. Confidence and brotherly feeling among officers is as necessary as it is a harbinger of brighter days for the militia. We trust, also, that this is but the first of other meetings and other resolutions.—Our Legislators should be made to know that the Militia is not to be "whistled down the wind" without resistance.

Of the Review at Ti we learn many interesting particulars—tents were pitched—guards mounted and relieved—tattoo and reveille were beat—'rounds' of the officer of the day—drill—dress parade—all were practiced in due military style. Of the excitement, the emotions, the incidents, the ennobling influences, the proud consciousness of duty of these occasions we have the most lively recollections.

Success to the 31st.

FOURTEENTH SENATE DISTRICT.—We learn that Senator ROGERS has been nominated for re-election by the free soilers and coalitionists, on the 21st. They did not venture to pass resolutions approving the course of the rowdies at Syracuse—but, with a view of course of "harmonization," took to themselves not only the nomination, but the exclusive control of the organization. Like the rowdy State ticket, this Senate ticket was, of course, "not made to be elected"—Albany Argus

We don't know what it might have been "made" for, it is certainly not fit to be elected.

☞Commissioner Mather is turning the tables on his accusers, becoming Plaintiff instead of Defendant. He has commenced an action for Libel against the proprietors of the Albany Atlas and another against those of the New York Evening Post.

Clinton County Fair.

A cold, driving storm during both the appointed days of this Fair greatly diminished the number of entries, as well as the number of visitors. There were, however, many objects of attraction. The show of horses was really fine, and there were also some splendid cattle. There were also some nice specimens of bloom iron sent by Wm. H. Brockway & Sons, Clintonville. Two half blooms weighing 348 lbs. were made in four hours, with soft coal, John Burnham, fireman, Ambrose Phelps, hammersman.

Wm, Brigham & Co. also presented a half blooms weighing 251 lbs., being 3-4 of a 4 hour loop.

Miss Charlotte White presented several specimens of her skill in needle and worsted work, and crayon drawings, deserving of praise. Without knowing her at all, we guaranty she is a valuable woman. Miss F. Josephine Peabody presented a basket of artificial flowers that attracted a great deal of attention. So perfect were they that many were led to smell them, and declared them truly fragrant.

A model fruit basket worked with cruel, by Miss Balch, was meritorious.

Col. Harkness of Ausable, presented a large and rare variety of table-apples.

The great attraction was the space occupied by Mr Battey of the Union Nurseries with his Dahlias and Fruit. There were 120 varieties of the former, and of the latter, there were the choicest of apples, pears, &c., &c. What he has not, there is no use in naming.

The Republican office presented specimens of the superior skill of Mr. John Nash, foreman, in the printing art.

These are a few of the articles deserving of notice.

The President, Hon. Richard Keese, and the Secretary, James Keese, have spared neither time nor money to prepare for the exhibition, and but for the warring elements, their most ardent wishes would have been realised. The Address of Mr. Houghton was brief, but beautiful. It created a Paradise for an humble farmer—a small house well filled, a small farm well tilled, wife, children, books, virtue, knowledge, happiness, these were portrayed in glowing language under the leading subject of the Address: "The Utility of Labor."

☞We publish Hon. W. C. Watson's letter of acceptance to-day, for the benefit of those democrats that read our paper.—Its dignified and manly language should cause the blush of shame to mantle the cheek of the 'short boy' editor,—and 'short boy" has a remarkable appropriateness in his case as bullying and senseless bravado are his great forte,—for his unprovoked attack upon Mr. Watson, because he (the "Short Boy" Editor,) happens to hold a position to which he was elevated by the force of circumstances, and in which he is sustained, principally, by a few brawling, windy, ale-house politicians, who like himself are in their natural element when sustaining men nominated through the influence of hireling "short boys" and discharged convicts from the State Prison.—None but an outlaw in principle would have been guilty of such a gross attack.

PORT KENT, Essex Co. Sept 20, 1853.

GENTLEMEN: I have duly received your communication advising me officially of my nomination by the recent Democratic State Convention as the Democratic candidate for the office of State Treasurer. I feel deeply sensible of the honor conferred on me by this unexpected expression of the confidence of my political friends.

I recognise in it, however, a concession rather to the just claims of the Democracy of the district in which I reside than to any personal pretensions of my own.

Always obedient to the behests of the great party to which I have been uniformly attached, whether in triumph or adversity, I can have no hesitation in cordially and greatfully accepting the distinction you announce.

I regard the principles affirmed in the platform established by the last National Democratic Convention at Baltimore, and the policy enunciated with so much force and eloquence in the Inaugural Address of General Pierce, as the true and safe doctrines of the Democracy, and the only guarantee of the preservation and perpetuity of the Union.

Whilst I fully endorse each of the entire series of resolutions adopted by the State Convention, to which you have called my attention, I deem it proper from the fact of my residence in a section of the State in which the popular mind has not been particularly agitated on the question of the canal policy, to express my earnest and unqualified approbation and adoption of the principles and pledges embraced in the resolution on that subject. This sentiment formed by the precepts familiar to my early youth, has been confirmed and strengthened by the observation and convictions of my mature years.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,
W. C. WATSON.

To Gideon J. Tucker, &c., Secretaries.

THE NEW YORK NATIONAL DEMOCRAT.—We have been in the receipt of this able Journal for some time. It is the size of the Herald, and always well filled with able, and readable articles. There is a piquancy and freshness about its editorials that we like. It supports the adamantine State Ticket, and the way it belabors the "freemen and witnesses," Van Buren and, his set of political rascals, and the grannies of the Washington Union, is a caution to the lesser lights of 'the Short boy' party. It is evident from the writhings of the Union, that the democrat's stalwart blows are felt in the right quarter. We commend this paper to all democrats who want an able independent spoken Journal.

THE GEORGIA ELECTION.—The returns, so far as received, indicate that the "Democrats" have elected their candidate for Governor, H. V. Johnson, and a majority in the Legislature. The Congressional returns are very incomplete, but it is probable that the delegation will be principally composed of Domocrats.

Disunion in 1850.

The following are a few selections from the southern democratic press, who ayer disunion in 1850, but who are now the special friends of Pierce, having been warmed into life by his patronage. If there are any sincere Free Soilers of 1848 yet left, these quotations must be a source of profound reflection. They show in what company northern free soilers are now associating, and the discovery must be anything but agreeable if patriotism yet remains in their breasts. We believe at least that the people will repudiate the connexion in the coming election.

"For our own part, we are for SECESSION, for resistance, unqualified RESISTANCE. The argument being exhausted, we must stand to our arms."—Macon Telegraph.

"We abandon the UNION as an engine of infamous oppression. We are for SECESSION, OPEN, UNQUALIFIED, NAKED SECESSION. Henceforth we are for WAR upon the Government; it has existed but for our ruin, and to the extent of our ability to DESTROY it, it shall EXIST NO LONGER."—Columbus Sentinel.

"It will then, there can be no alternative, determine upon RESISTANCE. It may be that the Convention will decide upon separate action, by this State, in other words, immediate SECESSION."—Federal Union.

"Our honest conviction is, that there is no other way now for the South to save herself, but to get out of this Union as soon as possible."—Georgia Jeffersonian.

THE ASPECT.—As an honest chronicler of the times and an impartial observer, we are compelled to state that the national line, or Old Hunkers of the "harmonious democracy" in the southern and central sections of the State are far in the ascendant over their rivals, the barnburners. In the cities of Troy, Albany and New York, the "short boys," or "shoulder hitters" hardly number a corporal's guard. The hunkers are also sweeping the line of the Canals like a whirlwhind. It is estimated by judicious persons that five out of every six democrats in those cities and on the line of the Canals go into the Hunker organization. The ratification meetings of the Hunkers have been largely attended and highly enthusiastic, while those of the barnburners have been mere fizzles, and in several instances entire failures. They are reaping the reward of their moral and political depravity and after election they will be known only in history.

☞The Syracuse Chronicle gives the following exclusive piece of "news." No other paper has it. Referring to PRINCE JOHN, the Chronicle says:—

"There never was anything low in Mr. Van Buren's associations; and, besides, he is not in the habit of using profane language."—Ex.

If JOHN was a candidate for the Presidency, he could be proved to be a member of the church, and of the temperance society. Affidavits of "respectable" people, and the certificates of Priests would be abundant. Anything to the contrary would be "whig lies" and "persecution"! Viva la humbug!

We pledge to the amendments of the constitution, so honorably carried through the late Legislature, by the aid of Independent and Patriotic Democrats, our cordial support, and that we hail with satisfaction the prospect of a speedy completion under whig management, of these magnificent works so necessary to the greatness and prosperity of the Empire State.

☞Not a great while since we were reading a very interesting and instructive article on the manufacture of shawls, and it was forcibly brought to our mind yesterday, on examinig the extensive assortment at Garfield's, which are remarkable for their beauty and fineness of texture. He also makes a dazzling show in the way of prints and Dress Goods. Ed. is a "brick,"—he must be.

☞We publish the letters of Bronson and O'Conor to-day. We commend particularly the admirable manner in which Judge Bronson bears himself in his manly repudiation of the rotten-hearted barnburners. Such instances of political integrity are truly refreshing in these times of political treachery.

☞It is said that the cholera has broken out with considerable violence in Sharpsburgh, Maryland.

☞B. B. Boynton has got a very large and the ladies say—to whose opinions we always pay deference in these matters—the nicest stock of Dress Goods ever brought into Keeseville. This we know is a pretty broad assertion, but a visit to his store will confirm our opinions.

KEEP THESE COMMANDMENTS AND THOU SHALT YET BE SOMEBODY!

1 Thou shalt have no other place to buy thy Clothing.

2 Thou shalt not choose to thyself any other Clothier. Thou shalt not bow down to them nor listen to their fair speeches, for Cardwell is a reliable Clothier, capable and willing to dress his customers to the third and fourth Generation.

3 Thou needst not search for Cardwells, Clothing Store in vain; it is in the Adirondac Hotel Building," and has the most splendid Sign in the State.

4 Thou shalt keep in remembrance the above location; six days shalt thou labour, and on Saturday night come and buy thy Sunday outfit.

5 Thou shalt honor the judicious adorner of thy person and long may thy days be upon the land to enjoy the fruits of his services.

6 Thou shalt not commit an outrage upon propriety, by purchasing your Clothing, of any wandering Jew that may come hither, nor of any one else that has not courage enough to adhere strictly to one branch of trade.

7 Thou shalt not take unto thyself foreign fashions by adulterously wedding strange garments to thy body thereby converting an American citizen into a foreign ambassador.

8 Thou shalt not rob Cardwell! for he sells so Cheap 'twould be a sin.

9 Thou shalt not bear false witness but honestly acknowledge that thou canst get better suited at Cardwell's for less money than any other place, get thy money's worth and the right change back.

10 Thou shalt not covet thy neighbor's garments, but take counsel of the wise and proceed straightway to Cardwell's and buy for thyself and be satisfied.

CONCURRENT RESOLUTION PROPOSING AN AMENDMENT TO THE CONSTITUTION.

Resolved, (if the Senate concur,) That the following amendment be proposed to the constitution of this state and referred to the legislature to be chosen at the next general election of senators, and be published for three months previous to making such choice, in pursuance to the provisions of the first section of the thirteenth article, of said constitution.

Substitute for section three of article seven the following:

After paying the said expenses of collection, superintendence and repairs of the canals, and the sums appropriated by the first and second sections of this article, there shall be appropriated and set apart in each fiscal year out of the surplus revenues of the canals, as a sinking fund, a sum sufficient to pay the interest as it falls due, and extinguish the principal within eighteen years of any loan made under this section and if the said sinking fund shall not be sufficient to redeem any part of the principal at the stipulated times of payment, or to pay any part of the interest of such loans as stipulated, the means to satisfy any such deficiency shall be procured on the credit of the said sinking fund. After complying with the foregoing provisions, there shall be paid annually out of said revenues into the treasury of the state two hundred thousand dollars, to defray the necessary expenses of government. The remainder shall, in each fiscal year, be applied to meet appropriations for the enlargement and completion of the canals mentioned in this section, until the said canals shall be completed. In each fiscal year thereafter the remainder shall be disposed of in such manner as the legislature may direct, but shall at no time be anticipated or pledged for more than one year in advance. The legislature shall annually, during the next four years, appropriate to the enlargement of the Erie, the Oswego, the Cayuga and Seneca canals, and to the completion of the Black River and Genesee Valley canals, and for the enlargement of the locks of the Champlain canal, whenever from dilapidation or decay it shall be necessary to rebuild them, a sum not exceeding two millions two hundred and fifty thousand dollars. The remainder of the revenues of the canals for the current fiscal year in which such appropriation is made, shall be applied to meet such appropriation; and if the same shall be deemed insufficient, the legislature shall at the same session provide for the deficiency by loan. The legislature shall also borrow one million and five hundred thousand dollars to refund to the holders of the canal revenue certificates issued under the provisions of chapter four hundred and eighty-five of the laws of the year one thousand eight hundred and fifty-one, the amount received into the treasury thereon. But no interest to accrue after July first, one thousand eight hundred and fifty-five, shall be paid on such Certificates. The provisions of section twelve of this article requiring every law for borrowing money to be submitted to the people, shall not apply to the loans authorized by this section. No part of the revenues of the canals or of the funds borrowed under this section, shall be paid or applied upon or in consequence of any alleged contract made under chapter four hundred and eighty-five of the laws of the year one thousand eight hundred and fifty-one, except to pay for work done or materials furnished prior to the first day of June, one thousand eight hundred and fifty-two. The rates of toll on persons and property transported on the canal shall not be reduced below those for the year one thousand eight hundred and fifty-two, except by the canal board, with the concurrence of the legislature.—All contracts for work or materials on any canal, shall be made with the person who shall offer to do or provide the same at the lowest price, with adequate security for their performance.

FRAUD!

ALL who want AXES of the real COLLINS & Co. make should be particular to notice the stamps, as there are various counterfeits and imitations stamped Collins and labelled much like ours, which are fraudulently sold in some parts of the United States as our manufacture. They are made in different parts of the country by various axe-makers, and are generally of very inferior quality. The genuine Collins axes, which have acquired such an extensive reputation are invariably stamped "COLLINS & CO. HARTFORD," and each axe has a printed label with my signature.—It is now more than TWENTY-FIVE YEARS since we commenced the business with the stamp of "Collins & Co. Hartford," and I do not know of any other axe-maker by the name of Collins in the United States.

M. D. ESTABLISHED HOSPITAL.

Quick Cures and Low prices. Private Diseases and their Antidote.

Dr. LISPENARD, author of the Married Guide, or Private Medical Treatise, Professor of Diseases of Women and Children, and Licentiate of the College of Physicians and Surgeons of the United States University, &c., &c., continues as heretofore to be confidentially and successfully consulted on all forms and variety of

PRIVATE DISEASES,

at his old quarters, No 5 Beaver-street, ALBANY, N. Y.

The great success attending the use of Doctor L.'s remedies in secret diseases, and the many remarkable cures daily effected by him in recent as well as old lingering attacks, conclusive evidence that the well

SICK AND UNFORTUNATE

can do no better than consult the Doctor, whose whole time is devoted to the exclusive treatment of this much neglected branch of practice.

LOOK AT THIS.

Dr. Lispenard cures recent cases of disease in from three to six days, and chronic or long standing diseases in a very short period of time, without the use of Mercury, without the loss of time change of diet, or detention from

DAILY EMPLOYMENT.

In Syphillis, Gnnorchœa, Gleet, Strictures, Enlargement of the Testicles and Cords, Bubo, Chancres Pimples and Scaly Eruptions, Sore Throats and Noses, Chancres on the tongue, tender shin bones, and diseases of the skin, and impure blood. Dr. Lispenard's remedies are above all praise, and frequently cure when all others had failed

EVEN TO RETIEVE.

More than 5,000 patients have during the past year experienced the benefit of the Doctor's extraordinary skillin treating the most diseases—among which, diseases of the bladder and kidneys have formed a goodly proportion.

YOUNG MEN,

who by indulging in secret habits have injured their health and prostrated their intellectual faculties, and thereby deprived themselves of the pleasure of married life, should consult Dr. Lispenard without a moment's delay. Hundreds have been restored to health, society and friends, under my peculiar mode of treatment, although vast sums of money had been sacrificed without any benefit. My remedy for this disease is pleasant to take, has no offensive smell and

CURES WITHOUT FAIL

☞ Persons so unfortunate as to be diseased, although they may have visited half a dozen Doctors, and had medicine sent them a dozen times with no benefit would exhibit wisdom by making their case known to that FRIEND OF THE SICK. Dr. Lispenard, who never charges for advice and warrants all his cures. The sick are often at a loss where to apply for relief, AND IT IS NO WONDER, as humbreds stand ready to plunder the unfortunate victim of PRIVATE DISEASE, or secret habits with at one thought for his life and health. All thus deceive' will find a friend, and moderate charges, in consulting the Doctor who USES NO MERCURY and cures every time.

N. B.—Persons from a distance when visiting the city in search of a physician and friend will be fortunate if they succeed in escaping the many dens of imposition, conducted by unprincipled men, destitute of character knowledge or name, who deece the unfortunate victim of disease of his hard earned money, and his remaining health. Patients who have no acquaintance in the city should make inquiry of some respectable citizen, or the editor or proprietor of any of the city papers, to ascertain who is the most reliable physician to apply to.

FEMALE DISEASES.

Dr. Lispenard from an experience seldom or never enjoyed by any other medical man, is enable to treat, with every hope of success, all and every variety of Female Complaints—with safe and pleasant remedies—and has without doubt cured within the past five years more than 3000 females afflicted with diseases of the Bladder, Womb, &c. &c. Ladies afflicted with suppression or stoppage of their monthly turns, will recollect that Dr. Lispenard is still the sole American agent for.

DR. VICHOI'S
FEMALE MONTHLY PILLS.

The unprecedented sale of more than 15,000 boxes of these excellent Pills, and the good results which always follow their use, is conclusive evidence of their utility in stoppages, &c. Caution—Married Ladies in certain delicate situations should not use them—for reasons see directions with each box. Price $1. Sent by mail to all parts of the world.

Married Persons and those about to Marry, should enclose 12½ cents post paid to Dr. Lispenard, and obtain a copy of his Marriage Guide or Private Treatise, a bewitching little work of nearly 100 pages, illustrated. Every thing that married persons can desire or wish to know, is here explained. Persons who from poverty or sickness have no desire to increase their family, will find necessary instruction in the Marriage Guide. One copy 12½ cents; 5 copies 50 cts; 12 copies $1—mailed free to any part of the world.

N. B.—Patients treated by letter, and medicines sent, with full directions for use, to the writer's address. All communications destroyed or returned

No mercury used in any case, and all cures warranted.

No boys or precocious students allowed: timed persons take notice.

Friends of Dr. L when recommending patients to our care will recollect our number 5 Beaver st., three doors from South Broadway.

Dr. Hunter's Medical Manual and Hand Book for the Afflicted—

Containing an outline of the origin, progress, treatment and cure of every form of disease, contracted by promiscuous sexual intercourse, by self abuse or by sexual excess, with advice for their prevention, written in a familiar style, avoiding all medical technicalities, and everything that would offend the ear of decency, from the result of some twenty years successful practice, exhlusively devoted to the cure of diseases of a delicate or pirvate nature.

To which is added, receipts for the cure of the above diseases, and a treatise on the causes, symptoms and cure of the Fever and Ague.

Testimony of the Prof of Obstetrics in Penn. College, Philadelphia.—"Dr. Hunter's Medical Manual."—The author of this work unlike the majority of those works who advertise to cure the diseases of which it treats, is a graduate of one of the best Colleges in the United States. It affords me pleasure to recommend him to the unfortunate, or to the victim of malpractice, as a successful and experienced practitioner, in whose honor and integrity they may place the greatest confidence.

JOSEPH LONGSHORE, M. D.

From A Woodward M. D., of Penn. University, Philadelphia—It gives me pleasure to add my testimony to the professional ability of the author of the "Medical Manual." Numerous cases of diseases of the Genital Organs, some of them of long standing have come under my notice, in which his skill has been manifest in restoring to perfect health, in some instances where the patient has been considered beyond medical aid. In the treatment of Seminal weakness, or disarrangement of the functions produced by Self-abuse, or Excess of venery, I do not know his superior in the profession. I have been acquainted with the Author some thirty years, and deem it no more than justice to him as well as a kindness to the unfortunate victim of early indiscretion, to recommend him as one, in whose professional skill and integrity they may safely confide themselves. ALFRED WOODWARD, M.D.

"This is, without exception, the most comprehensive and intelligible work published on the class of diseases of which it treats. Avoiding all technical terms, it addresses itself to the reason of its readers. It is free from all objectionable matter and no parent, however fastidious, can object to placing it in the hands of his sons. The author has devoted many years to the treatment of the various complaints treated of, and 'with too little breath to puff,' and 'too little presumption to impose,' he has offered to the world at the merely nominal price of 25 cents, the fruits of some 20 years most successful practice."—Herald.

"No teacher or parent should be without the knowledge imparted in this invaluable work. It would save years of pain, mortification and sorrow to the youth under their charge."—People's Advocate.

A Presbyterian clergyman in Ohio, in writing of "Hunter's Medical Manual," says: "Thousands upon thousands of our youth, by evil example and influence of the passions, have been led into the habit of self pollution without realising the sin and fearful consequences upon themselves and their posterity. The constitutions of thousands who are raising families have been enfeebled if not broken down, and the do not know the cause or the cure. Anything that can be done so to enlighten and influence the public mind as to check, and ultimately to remove this widespread source of human wretchedness, would confer the greatest blessing next to the religion of Jesus Christ, on the present and coming generations. Intemperance (or the use of intoxicating drinks,) though it has slain thousands upon thousands, is not a greater scourge to the human race. Accept my thanks on behalf of the afflicted, and, believe me your co-worker in the good work you are so actively engaged in."

One copy, (securely enveloped,) will be forwarded free of postage to any part of the United States for 25 cents, or 6 copies for $1.—Address (post paid) COSDEN & Co., publishers, Box 100, Philadelphia. 478y

LEANDER BABBIT'S
TRUSS OFFICE

The latest and most approved Trusses; Female Supporters; Do. without der braces attached; spinal elevators for curvature of the spine and projection of the shoulder blade, suspensary shoulder braces. This instrument is so constructed that it not only acts the part of shoulder braces but carries the heft of the ladies' skirts on their shoulders; and, hence remedies the evil consequent to dragging them on the hips and sides. For gentlemen it not only serves for a shoulder brace, but acts the part of suspenders.

As to the importance and usefulness of the above named instruments, and their beneficial effects, their superiority over the instruments of the same name, I need not say anything. They are too well known by physicians, and the multitude of persons that have had occasion to use them in this section of the country, that I do not consider it most important to introduce a long catalogue of certificates; yet I have abundant evidence in my possession to justify me in all I claim or affirm, and deem it a privilege to give references to any who wish to make inquiries.

Office at Keeseville in the building on the corner of Main and Front street, opposite the Bank, up stairs.

Ladies will be waited on at my dwelling by Mrs. Babbit, whose experience in adjusting braces and suspenders qualifies her to give perfect satisfaction. 482—3m

American Independence.

The late Elkanah Watson, for many years a resident of Albany, was present as a spectator in the House of Lords when the Independence of the American Colonies was formally acknowledged by George the Third. The following extract from Mr. Watson's journal affords a vivid picture of that interesting event:—

LONDON, Thursday, December 4, 1782.

The great glorious day has arrived, when our unconditional independence will be solemnly recognized by George III., in the presence of God and man. Such, at least, are the well earned fruits of a sanguinary and eventful contest of eight long, long years, in which period one hundred thousand brave Americans have cemented, on the altar of their country, with their precious blood, a prize which will bless unborn millions, and in its eventful effects, prodice a new era over the entire surface of this benighted world.

At an early hour, in conformity to previous arrangements, I had the honor to be conducted by the Earl of Ferrers to the very entrance of the House of Lords. At the small door he whispered softly into my ear: "Get as near the foot of the throne as possible; maintain your position; fear not." I did so with all the assurance of a traveled Yankee, and found myself exactly in front of the throne, elbow to elbow with the celebrated Admiral Lord Howe, who had just returned from a successful relief of Gibraltar.

The ladies of the nobility occupied the lord's seat on the woolsack, so called as an emblem of the wealth mainly derived from wool. The lords were standing here and there promiscuously as I entered.

It was a dark and foggy day—a proper English hanging day. To add to its gloomy effects, the old Saxon windows stand high up, with leaden bars to contain the diamond-cut panes of glass; the walls also hung with dark tapestry, representing the defeat of the Spanish Armada in 1588. I had the pleasure of recognising the celebrated American painters West and Copley, and some American, with many American royalists, some of whom were my near relatives, with long dejected faces, and rage and despair depicted in every lineament of their features. After standing for two hours in painful suspense, the approach of the king was announced by a tremendous roar of cannon. He entered the small door on the left of the throne, and immediately seated himself in the chair of state, decorated in his royal robes, in a graceful, formal, and majestic posture, with his right foot resting on a stool. He was evidently agitated, and drew slowly from his pocket a scroll containing the humiliating speech. I was exactly in his front, six or eight feet distant, with my foot braced upon the last step of the throne, to sustain my position from the pressure in my rear, and critically watched, with the eye of a Lavater, in that moment, every motion of his agitated countenance. He began: "My lords and gentlemen," and in direct reference to our independence, said:

"I lost no time in giving the necessary orders to prohibit the further prosecution of offensive war upon the continent of North America.

"Adopting, as my inclination will always lead me to do, with decision and effect, whatever I collect to be the sense of my parliament and my people, I have pointed all my views and measures in Europe, as in North America, to an entire and cordial reconciliation with the colonies. Finding it indispensable to the attainment of this object, I did not hesitate to go the full length of the power vested in me, and therefore I now declare them. [Here he paused and hesitated for a moment, and was in evident agitation. The pill he had to swallow in the next breath was repugnant to his digestive organs. In 1775 he repelled our humble petion with indignity, but in 1782 he found himself prostrate at our feet. He recovered himself by a strong convulsive effort, and proceeded thus.] I declare them free and independent States. In thus admitting their separation from the Crown of their Kingdom. I have sacrificed every consideration of my own to the wishes of my people. I make it my humble and ardent prayer to Almighty God that Great Britain may not feel the evils which might result from so great a dismemberment of the empire, and that America may be free from calamities which have formerly proved in the mother country how essential monarchy is to the enjoyment of constitutional liberty. Religion, language, interests, and affection may, and I hope will, prove a bond of permanent union between the two countries."

It is impossible to describe the sensations of my rebellious mind at the moment when the king hesitated to pronounce the words free and independent, and to notice with what a bad grace he had to swallow the dose; every artery was in full play, and beat high in unison with my proud American feelings. It was impossible not to revert my eyes across the Atlantic; review in rapid succession the miseries and wretchedness I had witnessed in the several stages of the war, prior to my leaving America; the wide spread desolation resulting from the obstinacy of this very man turning a deaf ear to God, but now prostrate in his turn. In his speech he tells us in one breath that he has sacrificed every personal consideration; in other words, not yet satiated with innocent bloodshed by his Indian allies; and in the next hypocritically invoking high heaven to guard us against calamities. &c.

The great drama is now closed. The ball was opened at Lexington, where the British red-coats were taught to dance down to Charlestown to the tune of "Yankee Doodle." On this occasion it fell also to my lot to march from Providence, Rhode Island, with a company of twenty-five well disciplined young men, all dressed in scarlet, on our way to Lexington, with packs on our backs; but they had fled before we could reach the scene of action.

From the House of Lords I proceeded to Mr Copley's dwelling in Leicester square to dine; and through my ardent solicitations, he mounted the American stripes on a large painting in the gallery the same day—the first which ever waved in triumph in England.

In leaving the House of Lords I jostled in side by side with West and Copley, enjoying the rich political repast of the day, and noticing with silent gratification the anguish and despair of the Tories.

In the House of Commons the ensuing day there was not much bitter debate, but a good deal of acrimony. Commodore Johnson attacked Lord Howe's expedition to Gibraltar, because he had not gained a decisive victory over the combined fleet of forty-five sail of the line with thirty-seven ships. Burke then rose, indulging in a vein of satire and ridicule, a severe attack on the King's speech the day previous on the subject of American independence, saying it was a farrago of nonsence. The Chancellor of the Exchequer then rose and handled Burke with dignified severity, charging him with buffoonery and levity.

Having received from Alderman Wood a card of admission to the gallery of the House of Commons, as the House was rising, the Alderman (who is a member) came into the gallery and invited me to descend with him to the floor of the House. I met Mr. Burke, with whom I had breakfasted, who introduced me as a messenger of peace to Pitt, Conway, Fox, Sheridan, and two or three other members grouped on the floor. I never felt more elevated in my life. In describing this scene to a friend in France, in a moment of exultation, I subjoined:

"Figure to yourself, my dear friend, a young American traveler of twenty-four in the full gaudy dress of a Parisian, hailed in the public papers and standing on the floor of the British House of Commons (where the destiny of dear America in its infancy has been so often agitated) as a messenger of peace, surrounded by a group of the blightest constellation of political men that ever graced the annals of English history."

Whig State Nominations.

Having outgrown the habit of puffing Whig candidates because they are Whig, we proceed to tell our readers just what we know and think of these:

GEORGE WOOD, a native of New Jersey, is a resident of Brooklyn, and long regarded as one of the ablest and surest counsellors at the Bar of our City. He is growing old; but our State has few other citizens, if any, so well qualified for this high position.

JOSEPH MULLIN was a member of the XXXth Congress, and would have been re elected had he not declined. He is a very independent man, of sound judgement and liberal acquisitions, who has several times been a Whig candidate and always run far ahead of his ticket in the County where he is best known. He ought to be voted for by discerning men of all parties; for he is immeasurably superior as a lawyer and as a man, to Hiram Denio.

GEN. E. W. LEAVENWORTH is a successful lawyer at Syracuse, in the prime of life—a man of progressive instincts and popular manners. Throughout the late schism in the Whig ranks, he has been so fortunate as to be regarded with favor by both sections; and this has probably aided his nomination. He is intelligent, ambitious, and, if elected, will try hard to win honorable distinction; and we heartily hope he may succeed. But the office to which he aspires is decidedly the most important, the most arduous, the most difficult to fill acceptably, of any in the State—immeasurably more so than that of Governor. Our Common School System needs a new and vigorous impulse—needs the restoration of County (or Senate District) Superintendents, Reform in the selection and management of School Libraries, in the mode of raising District School Moneys; and in short, almost every where. We need a Secretary not only thoroughly capable and indefatigable, but willing to be misapprehended, hated and execrated, if thus only he may signally advance the cause of Popular Education. We will hope that Gen. Leavenworth, if elected will prove such a one.

Gen. JAMES M. COOK is a thrifty banker and manufacturer at Ballston Spa—a skillful business man, understood to be quite wealthy. We consider him eminently qualified for Controller, having been already made familiar with our State Financers by his experience as a State Senator and Treasurer. He was on the Whig ticket for Treasurer two years ago, and the official returns elected him; but he was ousted by the Court of Appeals, which decided that votes cast for his opponent and not counted should have been, electing Welch. We have never doubted that Cook received a majority of the legal votes cast in that election; but we have not been impelled to blame the Judges for their decision adverse to him, on the state of facts established by the evidence. Gen. Cook and his personal friends have felt sore ever since that decision; and this feeling has doubtless given him his present nomination.

OGDEN HOFFMAN is one of our most popular citizens, and proved it by running far ahead of Gen. Scott and Gov. Hunt when a candidate for Corporation Counsel of our City last fall. Mr. Hoffman has one serious fault—indolence—but for which he might have been Governor or Cabinet Minister ere this: for he is a most effective popular orator, and always had 'troops of friends' outside of his party. Every body likes him, and he, though sometimes beaten as a candidate, has always run ahead of his ticket, as we think he will now. If elected, he will be a brilliant Attorney-General in Court, but not a hard working member of the Canal Board.

ELBRIDGE G. SPAULDING is a citizen of Buffalo—formerly a merchant, we believe—a Member of the XXXIst Congress, wherein he warmly supported the policy of Gen. Taylor, whose personal confidence he enjoyed. He was not a candidate for reelection, having lost his wife as well as the President of his choice shortly before the election. Mr. Spaulding is a cautious unassuming, capable man, and will make an excellent Treasurer.

CORNELIUS GARDINER we don't know.

JOHN T. CLARK ditto; but we have heard his ability and fitness for the place very highly recommended. He is a practical engineer, and has lately been engaged in constructing Railrouds in Canada.

BENJ. F. HARWOOD is an active Whig politician, and has been a member of Assembly.—[N. Y. Tribune.

Whig Nominations.

We place in our columns the Whig ticket nominated at Syracuse, on the fifth.—In doing so, we regard it as a duty which we owe to the Whig party, and especially that portion of it known as the National Whigs, as well as to ourself, to define to some extent our position in regard to that ticket.—It will be evident on a glance at the names of the candidates, that there is not one National Whig on the ticket, save the persons named for the Court of Appeals—that care has been taken to exclude them from all participation in the offices and honors to be disposed of at the coming election. * * *

But what then? Shall the Whig party be dissolved? Shall it falsify its great mission, because wisdom has not in this instance characterized its counsels? Shall it present to the world the same spectacle of dissension, of disorganization, of strife and consequent weakness that its opponents now present? These are grave questions, and the answers to them should not be dictated by passion, or given under the influence of feelings of indignation engendered by wrongs suffered, or injuries received.—Wrongs there have been, such as are hard to be borne. We have no disposition to mitigate or conceal the fact, and we have still less disposition to suffer it in silence. Those who inflict the wrong must know that we are neither insensible to its infliction, nor have any fear of speaking our sentiments of the injustice they have done us. Still the question remains, what then?—What is to be done? Speaking of ourself, the answer is plain. The Whig party has a great mission to perform—a mission which should not be thwarted or retarded by the action of any of its members who may have suffered temporary wrong as its hands. It will always in the end do right. Devotion to its principles will be appreciated, and whatever error it may have committed will be retrieved. Interests too momentous are at stake to be sacrificed to individual feeling or personal resentments. We belong to the hopeful class of men who always look for "a good time coming," and who believe that the right will always at last prevail, through whatever of trial it may be forced to pass. What this Convention failed to accomplish another will effect.—If it does not a second or a third will, and if those fail, then the masses of the Whig party will do that which conventions failed to accomplish, Thus much we have felt constrained by circumstances, to say; and we appeal to the better judgement of the Whig masses, if what we have said are not the words of truth and soberness. We know what the answer will be from that division of the Whig party to which it is our good or illfortune to belong. But the question is asked again, what shall be done? Let us be magnanimous, if our opponents have not been. The ticket which has been presented, so far as the individuals whose names are placed upon it, are concerned, aside from their political associations, is unexceptionable, they are men of great personal worth and ability, who will do no discredit to the offices for which they have been named. The great interests of the State will be safe in their hands. Let us then yield it our support—not a reluctent or laggard one, but an energetic, active and efficient one. Let us exhibit by our example and our efforts that magnanimity, that absence of selfish spirit which those who were instrumental in forming the ticket, so signally failed to exhibit. Let us save the Whig party from the reproach of discord and dissolution. Its principles remain and will remain through the long future. Let us sustain them, and the great Whig party will one day appreciate the error into which it has been led in regard to us If it does not, we shall have done our duty.

Besides, the candidates themselves are in no fault. The responsibility rests not with them of excluding a large portion of the party from a representation upon the ticket, presented by the Convention. They should not be met by opposition because injustice has been done by others. We repeat, they are good men, able men, qualified by their intelligence and integrity for the office to which they have been proposed, and remembering this, let us yield them a frank and cordial support.—[Register

The State Ticket.

Having spoken thus generally of the convention and the Ticket, we will proceed to speak more particularly of the candidates presented.

George Wood, of N. York, and Joseph Mullen, of Jefferson, are good and satisfactory candidates for the Court of Appeals.

For Secretary of State, Elias W. Leavenworth, of Syracuse, is in nomination.—Mr. Leavenworth is a lawyer of some eminence locally, was a candidate for the same office in the convention two years ago, but was defeated by the since absconding James C. Forsyth. He has every necessary qualification for the office of Secretary of State, we believe, a man of irreproachable character for integrity and high-toned morals, and for these qualities he occupies a high position in the esteem of all who know him.

James M. Cook, of Saratoga, the nominee for Comptroller, is a leading son of a neighboring county. As Senator and State Treasurer he has won a favorable reputation for energy and ability, and could bring into the Comptroller's Department many qualities requisite to the prompt and satisfactory discharge of the arduous duty of that post. Two years ago he was a candidate in the Convention, and defeated by George W. Patterson, and was afterwards nominated for State Treasurer. He has warm friends in all quarters of the State, who will take pleasure in recommending him and in contributing to his success.

For State Treasurer, Elridge G. Spaulding, of Buffalo, received the nomination. Mr. S. was a prominent candidate for Comptroller, and if elected will be a safe custodian of the keys of the Treasury.—Mr. Spaulding was elected to Congress in 1848, and is a wealthy citizen of Buffalo. We believe he is a lawyer.

Ogden Hoffman, one of the most honored names in the State, is the nominee for Attorney General. Mr. Hoffman needs no commendation. He is one of the first men of our State, and would adorn the post of State Attorney.

Cornelius Gardinier, of Montgomery, was placed in nomination for Canal Commissioner. Mr. G. is a new man, and but little known to the State at large. He lives on the line of the Canal, has been a contractor, and is now engaged in the forwarding business. He was urged on the ground of his political acquaintance with the Canal interests.

John T. Clark, of Onondaga, was unanimously nominated for State Engineer.—Mr. Clark is a capable man for the office, and had no competition in the Convention, as no ballot was taken.

Thomas Kirkpatrick, of Albany, is the nominee for Prison Inspector. He is the favorite of a large circle of friends, by whom he is said to have the necessary qualifications for the office.

Whigs! the Ticket is before you! Be true to yourselves and your principles.—[Troy Whig.

As an indication of the disaffection which is caused by these nominations, and the coolness, to say the least, with which they will be supported, we may mention that the Albany Register, the organ of the Silver Grays, does not yet put up the ticket in its columns.—N. Y. Eve. Post.

The Evening Post is mistaken, so far at least as the Register is concerned. We "put up the ticket" in our first issue after the nomination was known. It is mistaken in another respect. We enter upon this campaign with no feeling of coldness towards the gentlemen nominated. They are good men, able men—men who will perform faithfully all the duties pertaining to the offices which, for the next two years, they will be called upon to fill. We shall yield them a warm and cordial support. Some of them are our personal friends, whom we have known and respected from early youth and whose qualifications of head and heart we can commend. * * * *

The gentlemen nominated we know to be men who, when elected will do their duty—who cannot be used as instruments of corruption—who are, so far as independence and integrity are concerned, right, and who will be the tools of no faction.—We can vote for and support them with great good will, because of their personal merits, and because, so far as we are concerned, we feel entirely certain that the great interests of the State will be safe in their hands.—[Albany State Register.

DOWN ON GOV. SEYMOUR.—Mr. Dickinson, in his speech at Buffalo, scores Gov. Seymour for going to the Syracuse Convention, as follows.—It is rather epigramatic, and in 'scripture Dick's" best style.

'But these men [the short boys,] I regret to say it, were not the only ones present at that Syracuse Convention, who should not have been there. The Governor of the State—I alludo to it with sorrow—the Governor of the State of New York was there. Perhaps he was there merely to amuse himself by making augur-holes with a gimlet but there he was. It was the first time that ever a Governor of the State of New York, was found in a Convention, lobbying and bargaining with its members, and I believe it will be the last. I know indeed, that it will be the last time that Governor will be guilty of such an impropriety, and I do not think we could readily find another who would emulate his example. Other State officers were there also. The Comptroller and some others went up from the Capital, probably to prevent their own nomination. I am very happy to say they were entirely successful. But in spite of all these appliances, Union and Harmony were, after all, defeated. It is a singular fact, but so it is. The members of the Convention had the Governor of the State tempting them on with the spoils in front, and the Short boys of New York pricking them up with bowie-knives in the rear, and yet they failed to harmonize. They had everything under heaven to induce united action; and yet behold the result!"

COMPLIMENTARY.—We notice in the New York Evening Post the following pungent paragraph When influential presses, that did so much to secure the election of President PIERCE, go on in this sort of style, there must be something very 'rotten in Denmark" Patronage is a regular Pandora's Box to Executives, against which they can only secure themselves by appointing men with an eye single to their capacity, fidelity and faithfulness. Wet think, or rather, fear, that the President has deviated very materially from this rule. But here is the paragraph alluded to:

'The Sun, of this morning, after considering the appointments of Belmont and Sickles to important positions abroad, recommends Captain Isaiah Rynders for the mission to France, with Joe Jewell as the Secretary of Legation; Mike Walsh as Charge to Vienna, and Yankee Sullivan for the Commissionership to Constantinople. The selections are consistent with the exception of Walsh, whom we think a man of too much character and ability to serve in the connection."

Oughtn't TOM HYER to be sent to St. Petersburgh, with JOHN AUSTIN, the Tammany Hall rioter, for Secretary? None of the distinguished rowdies who have fought and bled for the great cause of democracy should be neglected!—N. O. Com. Bulletin.

NEWPORT AND SARATOGA have come to New York. We met them yesterday on Broadway. Their cheeks were rosy, and their bosoms barely but not concealed with snowy laces.—The nice pictures in the shop windows are looked at no longer now, for you can see them 'all alive" on every block. Art, which long had a monopoly of the voluptuous, holds it no more. Nature has come out of her hiding places to shame her sister; not to be ashamed herself. Well, we don't know what we are coming to. We see to-day, we remember yesterday, but it is useless to take thought for the morrow. Nudities are now chiefly confined to statuary; we may live to see them walking down Broadway, and taking ice cream at Taylor's.—Day Book.

☞ The Hunkers, in anticipation of the arrival of Mr. CHAMPLIN among his constituents, prepared a massive canvass to throw across the street, bearing upon its folds the single sentence, "Mather is acquited." Mr. C. knew this before he vacated the post of Manager of the trial; but, as he has an exceedingly short memory, it was feared he would forget it before his return to canvass for a reelection.—Albany Journal.

The State Ticket.

In view of the peculiar circumstances in which we enter upon the present campaign we quote fully from our exchanges in regard to the nominees presented for the suffiages of the people. The Albany Journal is well known. The Tribune now professes to be Independent. The Register and Troy Whig are Silver Grey. The two latter while they support the ticket would have liked it better had the offices been equally divided between the two wings of the party. We omit their complaints, and give the reasons which induce them to support the nominees of the convention. As these are conclusive to them, so they will be to whigs all over the State, with the exception of a few who had determined to be locofocos any way, and had they not one excuse, would have found another. The ticket does not entirely suit us—we should liked to have seen Judge Everest of Clinton the candidate for State Prison Inspector, and Hon. D. S. Wright, of Washington, for Canal Commissioner, or some other candidate located in Northern New York, and we should also liked to have seen the offices proportionally divided (if they are not) between the respective wings of the party (if it is proper to regard these old divisions, which we doubt.) But all cannot be suited, and we yield to the majority. We are assured by the Journals from which we quote so liberally, and by men to whom the candidates are personally known, that the ticket is one of great strength, the candidates are men of irreproachable character, and will be above the influence of cliques, looking only to the interest of the State, and the integrity of the whig party. Under such circumstances what genuine whig can hesitate as to the course to pursue? Not one. In fact, we believe Ogden Hoffman is a most decided Silver Grey, tho' not an 'ultra' one. Mr. Leavenworth has been a Silver Grey but of the moderate, and deliberate kind, as we are informed by those who know him. These facts however are not material. The ticket is whig and nothing but whig, and whigs who are whigs will give it their cordial support, and with the assurances we give to day it can be with a right good will. In this spirit we run up the Old whig banner, and "under it will fight on, fight ever, till a triumphant victory crowns our efforts."

JOHN VAN BUREN and the rest of the Barnburner outlaws went on their knees to the Hunkers at Syracuse, were willing to take Hunker candidates, and a Hunker platform—all Hunker—anything—everything—were willing to let the Hunkers make the ticket and the platform, and promised their most faithful support if the Hunkers would only receive them!

Now, forsooth, they call the Hunkers a set of dishonest rascals, corrupt, treasury plunderers, bank-breaking, speculating, worthless, vagabonds!

"Circumstances alter cases," truly.—It strikes us that the Barnburners convict themselves of an inconsistency which is too grossly apparent, and the people will so regard it.

The Democracy of Warren Co. met in convention on the 5th inst. and after a distracted and a protracted session in which they failed to agree, adjourned to the first of November.

Whig Senatorial Convention.

We have the satisfaction of laying before our readers the proceedings of this Convention, in which we take peculiar pleasure for several reasons. In the first place, the nomination was unanimous on the first ballot, it was one generally expected and desired, and all who were present, outsiders, as well as members of the Convention, were highly pleased with the result, and with the candidate, who was present. In the next place, it is generally conceded that the candidate will be elected. Hence, we feel elated of course.

The candidate is a son of Pelatiah Richards, long well known as a man of large business, and undoubted integrity. The family, we believe, consists of the father, Pelatiah, and two sons, George and Samuel, all of whom are now doing business together. They are men of great personal popularity, and the Warren County is democratic by 500 majority. George has been once elected to the Assembly, and last fall run within 25 of another election.—He was educated a lawyer, but his whole attention is devoted to the business of the family, lumbering, tanning, merchandizing, and farming. He will make an able, useful, and popular Senator.

Whig Senatorial Convention.

Pursuant to notice, the Whig Delegates of the 14th Senatorial District, composed of the counties of Clinton, Essex and Warren, convened at the Ausable House, in the village of Keeseville, Tuesday, Oct. 11th, 1853, at 12 o'clock, M.

PUTNAM LAWRENCE, Esq., was appointed Chairman, F. W. AMES, Secy.

The following Delegates were admitted on credentials:

Clinton Co.: PUTNAM LAWRENCE, JAMES S. SHEDDEN, HENRY GREEN,

Essex Co.: JOHN L. MERRIAM, JACOB PARMERTER, F. W. AMES,

Warren Co.: JOHN H. VAN BENTHUYSEN, SAMUEL T. RICHARDS.

The Convention then proceeded to ballot for a candidate for Senator, which resulted in the unanimous nomination of HON. GEORGE RICHARDS of Warren Co.

Voted, That the proceedings of this Convention be published in all the whig papers in this Senatorial District. also in the Albany Register and Albany Evening Journal.

The convention then adjourned.

CHAPTER I.—SLAVERY IN 1848.

"The voice of the FREE NORTH must and will be heard in tones not to be misunderstood in favor of Human Liberty, national progress, and Free Labor on Free Soil."—"The Fugitive Slave law must be resisted unto death."

"Resolved, That this Convention holds that the federal government possesses the legislative power over slavery in the territories, and ought to exercise it so as to prevent the extension of slavery there."

'Resolved, That we inscribe upon our banner Free Soil, Free Speech, Free Labor and Free Men, and under it will fight on and fight ever, until a triumphant victory shall reward our exertions."

"If ever I cast a vote for slavery may I die forsaken by man and accursed by God."

"The opposers of the Wilmot Proviso should be gibetted here and damned hereafter."

'The object of the free soil party is to annihilate the slave power in the federal government."

'The fugitive slave law insults the sovereignty of the States, tramples upon the rights of citizens, outrages every sentiment of humanity, and violates the law of God.'—Resolutions of Conventions, and sentiments of the Press and speakers of that party in 1848.

CHAPTER II.—SLAVERY IN 1853

'Resolved, That all efforts of Abolitionists or others made to induce Congress to interfere with the question of slavery or to take incipient steps in relation thereto are calculated to lead to the most alarming consequences, and that such efforts ought not to be countenanced by any friend of our political institutions."

'Resolved, That the foregoing proposition covers, and was intended to embrace the whole subject of slavery agitation in Congress; and, therefore, the Democratic party of the Union, standing on this National Platform, will abide by, and adhere to, a faithful execution of the acts known as the Compromise Measures, settled by the last Congress, the 'Act for claiming fugitives from service' included.

If territory is acquired by the United States, it should, in respect to slavery, be left as it is found. If slavery exists therein at the time of the acquisition, it should not be the subject of legislation by Congress.

'Resolved, That the Democratic party will resist all attempts at renewing, in Congress or out of it, the agitation of the Slavery question, under whatever shape or color the attempt may be made."

"Three cheers for the Fugitive Slave Law."—John Van Buren, John A Dix and other lights in 1853.—Barnburner resolutions, Syracuse, 1853.

CHAPTER III.—THE CANALS.

The bitter, unrelenting hostility of the Barnburners to the Canals, is a part of the history of the State. They called the Erie Canal, the "big ditch." They passed the 'stop and tax' law of 1842, by which the State has paid in damages to contractors sufficient to have completed the Canals.—Last year the surplus receipts were reduced from $900,000 to $200,000. Their uncompromising opposition last winter caused the extra session, and the whig and hunker plan for the completion of the Canals was at last adopted in spite of their opposition, to which they profess to give their adhesion. John Van Buren in his speech at Albany a few days since, said of the barnburner ticket and of the doubts of their fidelity to the Canals, "They are all so pledged by the strongest resolutions that could be drawn."

Pledged by resolutions! What a farce! They have falsified resolutions on the slavery question, and here is a written pledge which elected these men to office in 1852, and yet in the face of it they went to work to undermine that law, and in the Legislature which followed they contested every Canal project inch by inch :

Albany, Wednesday, Oct. 22, 1852.

Gentlemen : We have respectively received your communication of the the 13th inst., and, in reply, beg leave to assure you that the rumors referred to by you have no foundation whatever in fact.—On the contrary, we have not hesitated to say, as we now repeat, that if elected to the places for which we have been nominated, we shall faithfully and fairly carry out the provisions of the law adopted at the late Extra Session of the Legislature for the Enlargement of the Erie and Oswego, and the completion of the Genesee Valley and Black River Canals.

We regard an early enlargement of the Erie and Oswego, and the completion of the lateral Canals, as a measure of public necessity, to which the energies of the State should be steadily directed.

Respectfully yours,
John C. Wright, Levi S. Chatfield,
Henry S. Randall, Benj. Welch, Jr ,
Horace Wheaton, Wm. J. McAlpine.

Messrs. Asa D. Wood, O. C. Hubbard, Jas. H. Mallory, Jas. H. Sherrill and W. W. Wright.

CHAPTER IV.—THE QUESTION STATED.

Were these men deceiving the people on the Slavery question in 1848, or are they now? And if they violated a written pledge on the Canals in 1852, will they be likely to regard the "strongest resolutions that could be drawn" in 1853? Judge Bronson, in the letter published last week, says of these scamps :

"If all the nominees were otherwise unexceptionable, they come before the public under the leadership of men who have been striving for the last two or three years to defeat the early completion of the public works ; and after the shameless breach which we have witnessed of past pledges in relation to the canals, there can be no reasonable ground for hope that new promises will be performed."

An answer at the hands of the people may be expected on the 2nd Tuesday of November.

Winslow C. Watson.

We understand that a dirty little free-soil sheet, printed at Keeseville, called the Northern Gazette, is assailing Mr. WATSON, our candidate for Treasurer. Such things can do Mr. Watson no harm where he is known, and to set the matter right here, a correspondent in Keeseville sends us the following.—Malone Jeffersonian.

KEESEVILLE, Oct. 1, 1853.

MR EDITOR :—

The following extract is cut from the file of the Gazette in this place, and was published in the fall of 1851. It is from the press which is now assailing the democratic candidate for Treasurer with so much indecency. It is taken from an article in that paper by a New York correspondent, who is a prominent democrat, formerly of Essex county, but then residing in that city :—

"I was glad to see the name of the President of your Convention among its delegates. He is a veteran and pioneer in the cause of democracy, and his name is a host wherever it is connected with the good and prosperity of his party. His zeal and the ability and success which accompany it, may be judged of when we consider the almost universal prevalence of democratic principles in the village where he lives. He has been to that benighted county a preacher of righteousness and good principles, and when we consider the unanimity and good feeling that pervade his village, we think it a great pity that he has not lived in every village, town and hamlet in Essex county. And it is not only his precepts and good examples in his political career that have won the hearts of his fellow men and caused them to believe that the principles of such a man cannot be wrong, but many a poor and honest hearted democrat has been warmed, fed and clothed from the store-house of his generosity, and if there is a man in the State of N. York, or in the United States, that deserves well of his party, or justly merits all the honor, praise, profits, or emoluments within the gift of that party, that man is WINSLOW C. WATSON, Esq., a democrat dyed in the wool and warranted not to fade.

I hope you will excuse this digression, Mr. Editor, it is but a feeble effort to pay a just tribute due from every member of the democratic party to the high minded, straight forward, and worthy gentleman whom I have named. Success to his noble efforts, I say, and may he yet reap a harvest in some small degree proportioned to the good seed he has sown."

Senator Cooley.

We understand that the presence of this gentleman in our county has very much disturbed the free-soilers. No doubt, for he has so long been a thorn in their sides, and has dealt such heavy blows upon the coalition, that they may well be alarmed at his appearance. But we will so far take compassion on these nervous gentlemen, as to assure them that on this occasion he is up at his accustomed haunts at Chateaugay Lake—which he is in the habit of visiting several times in a year—catching fish and shooting deer ; and that if he makes any shots at his political foes, while up here, it will be only because he is such an inveterate sportsman in that line, that he cannot possibly refrain from pulling trigger, when a free-soiler or soft-shell comes under his eye. He has brought down many of that kind of game in past encounters, and we advise them to keep out of his way, if they would avoid the consequences of his unerring aim and irresistable shots.—Malone Jeffersonian.

☞ So far the "Ratification" Meetings of the 'Softs" have proved mortifying failures. The word 'Fizzle" seems to have been invented for the purpose of describing these abortive attempts to create enthusiasm. At Syracuse, a city with 25,000 inhabitants, it is said that less than 100 "Unterrified" Democrats responded to the call for a Ratification Meeting'—Albany Journal.

☞ In two respects the Barnburners made clean work at Syracuse. They threw their State Officers, from the Comptroller to the Clerk of the Court of Appeals, overboard ; and then, by Resolution, voted away their Principles. What they have left, besides the Atlas, John Van Buren and the 'Short Boys" is not to the naked eye, perceptible.—Albany Journal.

The State Ticket.—The remarks of the Albany Journal are too lengthy for this week. We shall give them next.

Obituary.

Died at Essex, on the 24th Sept. ult. at the residence of his father, the Hon. Samuel Shumway, Edward S. Shumway Esq. aged 36 years.

His disease was the chronic disease of the digestive organs. He died in the full enjoyment of a christian Faith and Hope.

Such is the brief record of one who was but recently among us full of life and blissful anticipations—a record over which we have pondered long and silently, of which we fain would rather think than write, and which will be read by a large number of acquaintances and friends, as it has been by us with mingled emotions,

"Which we can ne'er express,
Yet cannot all conceal."

The subject of this notice was widely and favorably known in this section of the State, as a young man of brilliant talents, of pure and upright motives, and of an amiable disposition, and it was believed and hoped by all that he would be a "bright particular Star" in the West, where he had removed. He was a graduate of Middlebury College, and as a student was indefatigable. He left College in broken health from too close application, and probably contracted disease which proved fatal at last. He was the first county Supt. of Common Schools of this county soon after leaving College, the duties of which he preformed with as much satisfaction to the Department as any in the State. Entering the practice of law at his native place, he was immediately elected Dist. Atty. which office he filled in such a manner as to add greatly to his reputation

In 1852 he removed to Chicago, where he entered into his profession with unsurpassed zeal, and with a prospect of unbounded success.

Surrounded by a happy family, blessed in all his family relations, and adored by a doting father, life was just opening to him in happiness and hope.—Stricken down by over exertion, he returned to his fathers house for a change of air, and for medical advice, but in vain—he returned but to die amid the scenes and friends of his youth.

His death has been noticed by several newspapers, and by the members of the bar in Chicago, and in this county. The proceedings of the latter we give below. We also give the substance of the remarks of Genl. Ross, and Messrs. Kellogg, Hale, and Butler, from notes taken at the time.

A meeting of the bar of Essex County, held at the Court House in Elizabethtown on the 8th day of October 1853, was called to order by Hon. H. H. Ross, who stated the object of the meeting, and on his motion Hon. A. C. Hand, was called to the chair and J. F. Havens, Esq. appointed Secretary.

On motion of Robert S. Hale Esq., a committee of three was appointed by the chair to draft resolutions ; and Messrs. Hale, McVine and J. P. Butler, were appointed, and reported the following : which on motion of Judge Ross, seconded by Messrs. Hale, Kellogg, and J. P. Butler, with remarks on the character of the deceased, were unanimously adopted.

Resolved, That the recent death of Edward S. Shumway Esq., in the morning of life, and in the midst of his usefulness, is deeply deplored by his late associates, the members of the bar of the county of Essex; who take this occasion to bear testimony to the ability, purity of character, worth and excellence of our deceased brother.

Resolved, That the widow and family of the deceased, in their bereavements, have our most heartfelt sympathy ; and we respectfully tender to them our sincere condolence.

Resolved, That as a mark of respect to the memory of the deceased, the Supreme Court in special term now in session in this County, be respectfully requested by the chairman to order the proceedings of this meeting to be entered in the minutes of the court, and an engrossed copy thereof transmitted to the widow of the deceased. A. C. HAND, Chairman.

J. F. HAVENS, Secretary.

On the adjt. of the court on the 8th inst. the members of the bar were requested to remain for the purpose of giving some testimonial of their respect for their late brother, Edward S. Shumway Esq. deceased.—Genl. Ross, called the meeting to order by moving that Judge Hand take the chair.—He excused himself from making any remarks by saying, that the deceased had been an esteemed member of the bar, a clerk in his office, and a friend, and he could not trust his feelings to undertake to do justice to the subject.

Mr. Hale moved a committee of three to report resolutions for the consideration of the meeting, and in doing so, said, that the deceased had been for some years a worthy and respected member of this bar—and had held the office of Dist. atty. with great credit to all. Two years since he removed to Chicago, where he had made a most favorable impression, and a brilliant career had opened before him. But he had been cut down in the morning of life. Two months since he returned to his fathers house struck down by a disease, which in a few short weeks, terminated fatally. He was known to us all as a man of scholarship, talent, accomplishments, and learning in his profession. Altho cut down in the morning of his days, his was an example to older men. He left friends, father, mother, brother, wife, and children to whom it will be a melancholly satisfaction to know in what estimation he was held by the members of the bar.

Mr. Kellogg, said, I do not feel competent to do justice to the occasion. Our late brother S. was a man about my years with whom I had the most familiar intercourse. Death had evidently marked him for a victim. He was himself fearful of an early death. But he had commenced life where most of us leave it off. He strikingly exemplified the sentiment that "it is not all of life to live, nor all of death to die." I am pleased to bear witness to our fondness for our departed brother. I was hopeful that his career in the west would be long and brilliant, and can now only regret that the members of the bar could not have taken him by the hand after his return.—My sympathies will only permit me to bear record to his worth, (and Mr. K. overcome by his feelings, sat down unable to proceed.)

Mr. Butler, said, "Death ever loves a shining mark." Our brother appeared like a bright star, grew brighter and brighter, and then vanished from our sight. We were boys together at school, where we contracted a friendship that ever continued. Standing, as I do in his footsteps, his death struck me with peculiar and indescribable feelings. I can bear witness to the purer and better virtues which he possessed in an eminent degree. Dying as he did in the Faith of a Christian's Hope, I will only add the wish that we may all come to a like good end.

BEWARE.—If any democrat dares to refuse and return the Plattsburgh Republican, or the Northern Gazette, the latter declares that an immediate retaliation will be made by a reduction of the circulation of the Argus! So, beware! Ye, old democrats, who were such when the ancestors of the author of this threat were fighting the battles of the King agst. this country, ye hard fisted democracy, who furnish this dandy with his victuals and clothes, ye who have saved him from starvation and a sale at the hands of the Shff.—beware how ye dare to refuse the administration organ, or to cross the wishes of this adventurer.—We are enabled to explain how it is that few have thus far dared to exercise their judgement in this matter : While at court numbers of democrats who have not voted a whig ticket for 20 years, stated to us that while they considered the Gazette a mere hireling affair, and the Editor an advenurer, they dared not to stop their paper, for fear of being attacked in its columns !

When we come to that to retain subscribers, may our pen refuse its office! Shame, shame—every sentiment of our nature cries shame—the very rocks if they could speak would cry, shame. And you democrats, who are thus threatened if you dare to exercise your better judgement, while it is not our affair and none of our business, we can but exclaim to you from the very bottom of our souls, in the language of an orator in the good old days of '76. "The blood of our fathers cries to you from the ground : my sons, SCORN TO BE SLAVES."

"What has the Administration done ?"

This question has been extensively discussed and the solution is but just at hand. In the first place, Marcy brought his 'great mind' to bear on the cut of the coat of Foreign Ministers, and now Guthrie, the Secretary of the Treasury, has 'covered himself all over with glory' as thick and as filthy as mud by issuing a cabinet edict on the disposition of the minor offices in the N. Y. Custom House. It appears that the President and Cabinet have been gravely sitting in counsel on the subject and the letter is the result of their collected wisdom.—Such is the mercenry spirit of the letter, such the disgrace to the positions once honored by Washington, Jefferson, and Madison, now reduced to the pitiful occupation of trading politicians, and official charlatans, insulting to every sensible mind, and disgraceful to the country, that one universal cry of abhorence has gone up from the Press all over the country. What may we not expect from this administration ?

"How we apples swim."—The Editor of the Northern Gazette presumes to endorse the character of the Editor of the Troy Budget ! "WE have only to say, that WE know Mr. Whitman, its talented Editor !' It is an unfortunate acquaintance for 'Mr. Whitman.' If in earnest, its egotism is equalled only by the pleasantries of the Old Settler in his funniest mood, when he is pleased to condescend to allow Thurlow Weed to sit at dinner on the one hand, and Gov. Hunt on the other ! "Get out."

☞ The letters of Messrs. BRONSON and O'CONNOR, the speeches of Mr. DICKINSON and others at the New York Ratification Meeting, and the signal failures of the meetings of the Softs, and other circumstances, have had the effect to stiffen the Hunker stock very perceptibly. The Hunkers have pluck and are satisfied with the turn things have taken. The Softs are quite the contrary. They don't quite know what they are to do, or where they are going to. There is no hope now, and the future is unpromising. The prospect of their becoming a mere faction, or fading away as the attractions of power cease, has an unfavorable influence on rank and file. Their boldness is assumed, while that of the Hards is real.—Troy Post.

CARPETS.—We would call attention to the advertisdment of F. K. Nichols of Burlington, Vt. His large stock, and low prices are attracting a great many people from this side of the lake.

☞ We find in the Daily Star printed at Washington, D. C. the name of our old friend Benj. H. Baldwin, late of Ticonderoga, now of the former place, at the head of a movement in that city to prevent licenses to sell liquor. The 'Sons' in Ticonderoga will be glad thus to hear from their old companion.

☞ The strength of the Whig Ticket is universally conceded. The Convention was fortunate in the selection of Candidates. They challenge the respect of the People, and deserve their suffrages ; for the several departments will be faithfully and honorably administered if entrusted to their supervision.—Albany Journal.

☞ John Van Buren's body guard, the N. Y. "short boys," have just had some sport in the shape of a prize exhibition in the "manly art of self defence" between Morrissey and yankee Sullivan.

☞ A "short boy" entered the store of H. Danis at Ausable Forks, on the 7th inst., and stole property to the amount of $140.

☞ We call the attention of our readers to Mr. Tousley's advertisement.

Married,

On Wednesday, the 5th inst., in St. Peter's Church, Freehold, N. J., by Rev. Harry Finch, Rev. FERNANDO C. PUTNAM, of Keeseville, N. Y., to Miss JULIA A., daughter of Thomas C. Throckmorton, Esq., of Freehold, N. J.

Died.

At Boquet village, N. Y, Sept. 18, 1853, Ellen M, youngest daughter of Seth and Ellen Crossman, aged 7 years and 11 months.

A little Angel came on earth,
And seven short years remained,
That we might see what holy things
God's heavenly home contained.
We thought she was a mortal child,
So gave her mortal name :
The softest, sweetest, we could find,
And called her Ellen M.

Our little Ella, called we her,
In tones the most endearing,
But they seemed cold, compared to those
She had been used to hearing.
She thought this earth too drear, and so
Resumed her Angel form ;
Then took herself to brighter realms,
And left us here to mourn.

But little Angels should not steal,
And she did steal our love ;
Then bore it off in triumph, to Her Heavenly home above.
But she at parting, smiled, as if
To bid us not despair,
And say, though from us she must go,
She'd give us welcome there.

CONCURRENT RESOLUTION PROPOSING AN AMENDMENT TO THE CONSTITUTION.

Resolved, (if the Senate concur,) That the following amendment be proposed to the constitution of this state and referred to the legislature to be chosen at the next general election of senators, and be published for three months previous to making such choice, in pursuance to the provisions of the first section of the thirteenth article, of said constitution.

Substitute for section three of article seven the following:

After paying the said expenses of collection, superintendence and repairs of the canals, and the sums appropriated by the first and second sections of this article, there shall be appropriated and set apart in each fiscal year out of the surplus revenues of the canals, as a sinking fund, a sum sufficient to pay the interest as it falls due, and extinguish the principal within eighteen years of any loan made under this section. and if the said sinking fund shall not be sufficient to redeem any part of the principal at the stipulated times of payment, or to pay any part of the interest of such loans as stipulated, the means to satisfy any such deficiency shall be procured on the credit of the said sinking fund. After complying with the foregoing provisions, there shall be paid annually out of said revenues into the treasury of the state two hundred thousand dollars, to defray the necessary expenses of government. The remainder shall, in each fiscal year, be applied to meet appropriations for the enlargement and completion of the canals mentioned in this section, until the said canals shall be completed. In each fiscal year thereafter the remainder shall be disposed of in such manner as the legislature may direct, but shall at no time be anticipated or pledged for more than one year in advance. The legislature shall annually, during the next four years, appropriate to the enlargement of the Erie, the Oswego, the Cayuga and Seneca canals, and to the completion of the Black River and Genesee Valley canals, and for the enlargement of the locks of the Champlain canal, whenever from dilapidation or decay it shall be necessary to rebuild them, a sum not exceeding two millions two hundred and fifty thousand dollars. The remainder of the revenues of the canals for the current fiscal year in which such appropriation is made, shall be applied to meet such appropriation; and if the same shall be deemed insufficient, the legislature shall at the same session provide for the deficiency by loan. The legislature shall also borrow one million and five hundred thousand dollars to refund to the holders of the canal revenue certificates issued under the provisions of chapter four hundred and eighty-five of the laws of the year one thousand eight hundred and fifty-one, the amount received into the treasury thereon. But no interest to accrue after July first, one thousand eight hundred and fifty-five, shall be paid on such Certificates. The provisions of section twelve of this article requiring every law for borrowing money to be submitted to the people, shall not apply to the loans authorized by this section. No part of the revenues of the canals or of the funds borrowed under this section, shall be paid or applied upon or in consequence of any alleged contract made under chapter four hundred and eighty-five of the laws of the year one thousand eight hundred and fifty-one, except to pay for work done or materials furnished prior to the first day of June, one thousand eight hundred and fifty-two. The rates of toll on persons and property transported on the canal shall not be reduced below those for the year one thousand eight hundred and fifty-two, except by the canal board, with the concurrence of the legislature.—All contracts for work or materials on any canal, shall be made with the person who shall offer to do or provide the same at the lowest price, with adequate security for their performance.

FRAUD!

ALL who want AXES of the real COLLINS & Co. make should be particular to notice the stamps, as there are various counterfeits and imitations stamped Collins and labelled much like ours, which are fraudulently sold in some parts of the United States as our manufacture. They are made in different parts of the country by various axe-makers, and are generally of very inferior quality. The genuine Collins axes, which have acquired such an extensive reputation, are invariably stamped "COLLINS & CO. HARTFORD," and each axe has a printed label with my signature.—It is now more than TWENTY-FIVE YEARS since we commenced the business with the stamp of "Collins & Co. Hartford," and I do not know of any other axe-maker by the name of Collins in the United States.

20 Years Experience.
OLD ESTABLISHED HOSPITAL.
Quick Cures and Low prices.
Private Diseases and their Antidote.

Dr. LISPENARD, author of the Marriage Guide, or Private Medical Treatise, Professor of Diseases of Women and Children, and Licentiate of the College of Physicians and Surgeons of the United States University, &c., &c., continues as heretofore to be confidentially and successfully consulted on all forms and variety of

PRIVATE DISEASES,
at his old quarters, No. 5 Beaver-street, ALBANY, N. Y.

The great success attending the use of Doctor L.'s remedies in secret diseases, and the many remarkable cures daily effected by him in recent as well as old lingering attacks, is conclusive evidence, that the

SICK AND UNFORTUNATE
can do no better than consult the Doctor, whose whole time is devoted to the exclusive treatment of this much neglected branch of practice.

LOOK AT THIS.

Dr. Lispenard cures recent cases of disease in from three to six days, and chronic or long standing diseases in a very short period of time, without the use of Mercury, without the loss of time, change of diet, or detention from
DAILY EMPLOYMENT.

In Syphilis, Gonorrhœa, Gleet, Strictures, Enlargement of the Testicles and Cords, Bubo, Chancres, Pimples and Scaly Eruptions, Sore Throats and Noses, Chancres on the tongue, tender shin bones, and diseases of the skin, and impure blood. Dr. Lispenard's remedies are above all praise, and frequently cure when all others had failed
EVEN TO RELIEVE.

More than 5,000 patients have during the past year experienced the benefit of the Doctor's extraordinary skill in treating secret diseases—among which, diseases of the bladder and kidneys have formed a goodly proportion.

YOUNG MEN,
who by indulging in secret habits have injured their health and prostrated their intellectual faculties, and thereby deprived themselves of the pleasure of married life, should consult Dr. Lispenard without a moment's delay. Hundreds have been restored to health, society and friends, under my peculiar mode of treatment, although vast sums of money had been sacrificed without any benefit. My remedy for this disease is pleasant to take, has no offensive smell and

CURES WITHOUT FAIL

☞ Persons so unfortunate as to be diseased, although they may have visited half a dozen Doctors, and had medicine sent them a dozen times with no benefit, would exhibit wisdom by making their case known to that FRIEND OF THE SICK, Dr. Lispenard, who never charges for advice and warrants all his cures. The sick are often at a loss where to apply for relief, AND TIS NO WONDER, as hundreds stand ready to plunder the unfortunate victim of PRIVATE DISEASE, or secret habits, without one thought for his life and health. All thus deceive will find a friend, and moderate charges, in consulting the Doctor who USES NO MERCURY and cures every time.

N. B.—Persons from a distance when visiting the city in search of a physician and friend, will be fortunate if they succeed in escaping the many dens of imposition, conducted by unprincipled men, destitute of character knowledge or name, who fleece the unfortunate victim of disease of his hard earned money, and his remaining health. Patients who have no acquaintance in the city should make inquiry of some respectable citizen, or the editor or proprietor of any of the city papers, to ascertain who is the most reliable physician to apply to.

FEMALE DISEASES.

Dr. Lispenard, from an experience seldom of never enjoyed by any other medical man, is enable to treat, with every hope of succes, all and every variety of Female Complaints—with safe and pleasant remedies—and has without doubt cured within the past five years more than 3000 females afflicted with diseases of the Bladder, Womb, &c. &c. Ladies afflicted with suppression or stoppage of their monthly turns, will recollect that Dr. Lispenard is still the sole American agent for.

DR. VICHOP'S
FEMALE MONTHLY PILLS.

The unprecedented sale of more than 15,000 boxes of these excellent Pills, and the good results which always follow their use, is conclusive evidence of their utility in stoppages, &c. Caution—Married Ladies in certain delicate situations should not use them—for reasons see directions with each box. Price $1. Sent by mail to all parts of the world.

Married Persons and those about to Marry, should enclose 12½ cents post paid to Dr. Lispenard, and obtain a copy of his Marriage Guide or Private Treatise, a bewitching little work of nearly 100 pages, illustrated. Every thing that married persons can desire or wish to know, is here explained. Persons who from poverty or sickness have no desire to increase their family, will find necessary instruction in the Marriage Guide. One copy 12½ cents; 5 copies 50 cts.; 12 copies $1—mailed free to any part of the world.

N. B.—Patients treated by letter, and medicines sent, with full directions for use, to the writer's address. All communications destroyed or returned.

No mercury used in any case, and all cures warranted.

No boys or precocious students allowed: [illegible] persons take notice.

Friends of Dr. L. when recommending patients to our care, will recollect our number, 5 Beaver st., three doors from South Broadway.

Hospital open from 7 A. M., to 9 P. M., and on Sundays from 1 to 4 P. M.

No charge for advice, although no medicine may be desired.

Good board and private rooms for those who desire to remain in the city.

Dr. Hunter's Medical Manual and Hand Book for the Afflicted—Containing an outline of the origin, progress, treatment and cure of every form of disease, contracted by promiscuous sexual intercourse, by self abuse or by sexual excess, with advice for their prevention, written in a familiar style, avoiding all medical technicalities, and everything that would offend the ear of decency, from the result of some twenty years successful practice, exclusively devoted to the cure of diseases of a delicate or pirvate nature.

To which is added, receipts for the cure of the above diseases, and a treatise on the causes, symptoms and cure of the Fever and Ague.

Testimony of the Prof. of Obstetrics in Penn. College, Philadelphia —"Dr. Hunter's Medical Manual."—The author of this work unlike the majority of those works who advertise to cure the diseases of which it treats, is a graduate of one of the best Colleges in the United States. It affords me pleasure to recommend him to the unfortunate, or to the victim of malpractice, as a successful and experienced practitioner, in whose honor and integrity they may place the greatest confidence.
JOSEPH LONGSHORE M. D.

From A Woodward. M. D., of Penn. University, Philadelphia—It gives me pleasure to add my testimony to the professional ability of the author of the "Medical Manual." Numerous cases of diseases of the Genital Organs, some of them of long standing have come under my notice, in which his skill has been manifest in restoring to perfect health, in some instances where the patient has been considered beyond medical aid. In the treatment of Seminal weakness, or disarrangement of the functions produced by Self-abuse, or Excess of venery, I do not know his superior in the profession. I have been acquainted with the Author some thirty years. and deem it no more than justice to him as well as a kindness to the unfortunate victim of early indiscretion, to recommend him as one, in whose professional skill and integrity they may safely confide themselves. ALFRED WOODWARD, M.D.

"This is, without exception, the most comprehensive and intelligible work published on the class of diseases of which it treats. Avoiding all technical terms, it addresses itself to the reason of its readers. It is free from all objectionable matter, and no parent, however fastidious, can object to placing it in the hands of his sons. The author has devoted many years to the treatment of the various complaints treated of, and 'with too little breath to puff,' and 'too little presumption to impose,' he has offered to the world at the merely nominal price of 25 cents, the fruits of some 20 years most successful practice."—Herald.

"No teacher or parent should be without the knowledge imparted in this invaluable work. It would save years of pain, mortification and sorrow to the youth under their charge."—People's Advocate.

A Presbyterian clergyman in Ohio, in writing of "Hunter's Medical Manual," says: "Thousands upon thousands of our youth, by evil example and influence of the passions, have been led into the habit of self-pollution without realizing the sin and fearful consequences upon themselves and their posterity. The constitutions of thousands who are raising families have been enfeebled, if not broken down, and the do not know the cause or the cure. Anything that can be done so to enlighten and influence the public mind as to check, and ultimately to remove this wide-spread source of human wretchedness, would confer the greatest blessing next to the religion of Jesus Christ, on the present and coming generations. Intemperance (or the use of intoxicating drinks,) though it has slain thousands upon thousands, is not a greater scourge to the human race. Accept my thanks on behalf of the afflicted, and, believe me, your co-worker in the good work you are so actively engaged in."

One copy, (securely enveloped,) will be forwarded free of postage to any part of the United States for 25 cents, or 6 copies for $1.—Address (post paid) COSDEN & Co., publishers, Box 196, Philadelphia. 478y

Holding the Mirror up to Nature;

Or, sketches of the "lights" of the Pierce Party—Designed to illustrate the requisites of a Pierce Democrat.

The N. Y. Herald discribes the present a "piebald administration." Maroy is a soft. Davis a fire-eater. Cushing a renegade whig. This is the character of the cabinet, and their appointments. The same characteristics, only in a greater degree, prevade their followers. Like Jacob's cattle they are 'ring, streaked, and speckled,' and whether from laying strips of bark in their 'trough' we cant say. Or, like Joseph's coat, their politics are of many colors. Cushing eased off into the democratic ranks thro' Tylerism and the Mexican War. Whether his moonlight walks with the Senoritas had any effect upon his change it is not necessary to inquire. Rev. C.W. Dennison, appointed to a foreign consulship, was whilom preacher, abolition lecturer, then suddenly went to saving the Union as a Webster man, from whence he took to the stump for Pierce. He has his reward. But we need not to look abroad for this discription of politicians. They are all about us—on every hand. There is the Editor of the administration organ.—He indulges in a 'noble' ancestry, not one of whom was ever a 'whig.' Not but that a 'cow boy' is just as good a democratic Editor as a better man, but he helps fill out the character. And there too is the 'delegate from Clinton. Everything by turns & nothing long—Bucktail, Clintonian, National Republican, Adams man, Jackson man, Russell, Tabor, Cass, Marcy, Hunker Barnburner, Soft, Hard, 'All right.' He is 'all right.' In 1840 hard cider, and coons. In 1842, Tyler too 'and got the Keeseville Post Office, and that too was 'all right.' Since then he has been a good democrat, except a slight interregnum when he went for Tabor, and a Free Trade speech, when he was in the Assembly, written by a Troy lawyer, made for a reelection, but it didn't win. 'Heads up, I win—tails up you lose.' He lost. Last fall he and others were ready to make affidavits that they were all for Protection. Under the 'mollifying influences of a seat in Congress' he became a Soft, and at the late Senatorial convention he was willing to be magnanimous in case the convention failed to agree. He has done a vast sight of 'button-holding, horse shedding and heavy standing round' since the Syracuse convention, but like the 'shoulder fitters' at their State convention he has failed to unite the discordant elements of his party.

And there too is the dem. candidate for dist. atty. in Clinton. He set out in life a whig, but the clanking of the chains of Southern Slavery reached his ear, and like the 'prancing war horse, he 'snuffed the battle from afar off.' The evils of slavery 1844, he swore by Birney; Clay was a monster—a duelist and a Slave holder.—For such a demon he could not go, and he raised his hands in horror at those who did. He 'resolved to fight on, and fight ever, for free soil and free men,' and 'ne'er to give oc'r' till 'a triumphant victory crowned their efforts.' We have not enquired, but it may be that he went into the Pierce party by way of leaven—a sort of missionary and that he is still laboring to instill free soil into that benighted party. It must be so; it is the only rational conclusion. His somerset was so sudden and the heighth from which he fell was so high, it is not to be supposed that a man would run such risks to reputation for consistency for paltry office. On the hypothesis we suggest, his position is at once noble, and self-sacrificing. Though he suffer for a season, the end will be the more glorious—his triumph the more brilliant. Only to think that the Pierce party is to become abolitionised through the sacrifice of such apostles as John Van Buren, candidate for Dist, Atty. in Clinton, and the like. The thought is exquisite. In this view, those resolutions to 'fight on, fight ever,' resistence unto death, to the disgraceful and inhuman Fugitive Slave Law, wicked institution, and damnable doctrines remain 'in full force, and virtue.'

Anon, a vision passes before our mind—The campaign of '52 is recalled to recollection. The late standard bearers of freedom were the standard bearers of Slavery, from the foremost ranks of Free Soil, they became the van guard of slavery, the fugitive slave law suddenly became constitutional, and ceased to be odious, its execution lawful and a duty; and agitation a crime. Again, the vision passes—a stake—faggots,—martyrs—the veritable Rogers and the nine small children besides one at the breast—are dimly presented to view and all is explained. Ah, no—the vision continues—a Pharisee appears with the borders of his garments enlarged, exclaiming, 'stand thou back—I am holier than thou!' Following close is a man bearing a cup containing '40 pieces of silver'—and—what? who? No,—it cannot be—it is the year 1852—the democratic candidate for Congress—the black flag of slavery—a roll of bills—the new dem. candidate for dist. atty. for Clinton, expresses his belief that there is more hope of Pierce and the democracy for abolition than of the whigs—now he is on his 'winding way' to the Saranac Lakes to take the initiatory in that great freesoil stampede which is to abolitionise the great democratic party—and the vission passes.

1853—the vision is passed—we come now to the sober relatives of life, and without stopping to enquire further into the motives of the changes alluded to, or whether the abolitionist has swallowed the Baltimore Platform, or the Platform the abolitionist, we conclude by expressing the hope that the democracy of Clinton are satisfied that they have disinterested patriots and democrats for leaders. If they are satisfied, who has a right to find fault?

OUR DANGER AND OUR DUTY.—Our only danger this fall is in over confidence. The quarrels of the democracy will draw out every vote of theirs, and if whigs secure the State they must do the same.—This is all that is necessary to cary every branch of the state Government. If by over confidence, whigs neglect to get out their votes and thus lose from 10 to 50 votes in every town in the state; if whigs go to sleep and dream that the divisions of their opponents are to give them the state without any effort on their part they will wake up after election with the mortifying reflection that the Harvest was ripe but they neglected to put in their sickles.

The Whig Press & the Whig Masses.

Every reliable, unfaltering, and consistent whig paper in the State has placed the whig State Ticket at its head, Even Mr. Fillmore's own paper, the Buffalo Advertiser, does not hesitate. And so far as our observation goes, the masses will be equally unanimous. We speak only of our own section of the State. If other portions are as right, the State is safe. We believe whigs are disposed to embrace the opportunity offered them of redeeming the character of the State, and that every necessary effort and arrangement will be made to have every whig vote in the ballot box on the 2nd Tuesday of November. In the language of the Troy Post, we say:—

"Whigs of New York, you have never had a better ticket presented for your approval and support. A united effort will elect it.—Shall it be done? Will you not improve the opportunity to wrest the State canals from the hands of their enemies and spoilers, and commit them to the charge of friends? Blistered be the tongue and palsied the hand that falters or fails in so good a cause"

BE NOT DECEIVED.—We have fallen upon strange and extraordinary times—'wars and rumors of wars' from abroad, and at home political events crowd upon each other faster than the press can deal them out to the people. To day the tide swells in favor of one candidate, and tomorrow another. Now we have rumors of coalitions, and anon they are void. Again, the cry is 'lo, here,' and then, 'lo, there.' Upon the dews of evening comes reports that are to blast the prospects of this candidate, or of that one, but they disappear before the rays of the morning sun. Whigs, be not deceived nor seduced. Stand to your colors. March on in solid, unbroken columns. Stand, or fall, 'sink, or swim, survive or perish' together. If Whigs are to seek new political associations, if they wish to enter into coalitions, all should go together, unthe caprice of the moment, or the influence of passion, but after mature deliberation, on proper conditions, and for wise ends. We say then, be not deceived, stand shoulder to shoulder,—one fire more—another charge—and the victory is won.

The State Ticket.—We have indulged in no extravagant eulogies of the nominees, nor endeavored to get up any false enthusiasm. We have rather desired to enter upon the campaign coolly and deliberately, and to present candidates and questions, truthfully. All our information, however, from the press, and from those acquainted with the gentlemen nominated, enable us to say that, in point of ability and integrity, they have never been exceeded, and possess every element of popularity upon which to raise popular enthusiasm to the highest pitch. This, however, is not necessary. A full whig vote only is required, and is expected. Whigs will be false to the friends and professions of years, false to themselves, false to the party, false to the Canals, false to every cherished prinoiple if they fail to get out A FULL WHIG VOTE.

The Judicial Nomination

We give the proceedings of the Judicial Convention, and wish to urge upon whigs an active canvass for its nominee. On the adoption of the elective system whigs proposed to the democracy to unite on judicial nominations, so as to take the judiciary out of the slough of party politics. These honorable overtures were scorned by the democracy, who can never elevate their motives above the spoils, and nothing is left to whigs but to fight it out. With a candidate in the prime of life, and every way qualified for an able and honorable discharge of the duties of the office, whigs have every inducement to enter into this matter in earnest. We would not disparage Judge Willard, whose virtues and abilities are duly appreciated; but, he has been on the bench for 20 or 30 years, and is approaching that age when forms and precedents have too much weight. The times and our present practice demand a fresh and vigorous mind. Such is Mr. James. Washington County at the last election gave Judge Allen a majority, when Mr. James should have had 2,000. We hope, and indeed, we are assured by the Whitehall Chronicle that Washington County will do her duty this time. If every County, and every whig will but take hold of this matter, the election of our candidate is beyond a peradventure. We have only to do it once to do it again. There are plenty of whigs in this district both deserving and able, and they may as well have these posts of honor and emolument, as our unscrupulous and uncompromising foes.—Whigs have only to do their duty to ensure the future success of their judicial ticket in this district.

HUNKER NEWS.—We favor this section of the democracy with a movement in favor of their candidate for State Treasurer.—We do these favors, and shall continue to do them because as between the hunkers and barnburners our sympathies, like those of all parties, and all honest men in the State, without regard to their peculiar views on some points, are with the hunkers, and would vote for their ticket if necessary to reclaim the canals from the barnburners. Denied a hearing in their party paper, the hunkers shall have a place in the Republican, in 'spite of lamentations here, or elsewhere.'

The Candidate for state Treasurer

It will be seen by reference to the Independent Ticket for State officers at the head of our columns, that we have withdrawn the name of E. G. Spaulding, the Whig candidate for Treasurer, and substituted the name of Winslow C. Watson, the nominee of the Adamantines. We have have been compelled to make this change by the "outside pressure" against Mr. Spaulding on the ground of his political Abolitionism. These charges come to us from all quarters, backed up by irrefragable evidence; and after waiting a week to hear something from Mr. Spaulding's friends in the way of refutation, vindication, or explanation, no one, so far as we have seen or heard, has ventured a word in his defence.—Of course, we cannot consistently vote for a candidate whose political proclivities run to Anti-Unionism; and in such an emergency, there is nothing left for honest conservatives but to "bolt" the nomination and "scratch" the ticket.

Winslow C. Watson, the Adamantine candidate, is reputed to possess every personal and political qualification for the office. He ranks among the hardest of the "Hards," and his character is above reproach. We learn from distinguished Whigs that the "Enlargement policy" has no warmer or truer friend than Mr. Watson. His father, Elkanah Watson, was an intimate friend of De Witt Clinton, and an original advocate of the Erie Canal. The son has been educated in that school of enlightened economists who are zealously devoted to the cause of Internal Improvements, legally and honestly prosecuted. He is about forty-five years of age—a farmer on a large scale, and a man whose private character is even above the reproach of his political enemies. If the 'Silver Greys' are the men we take them to be, Mr. Watson will be elected, together with the entire "INDEPENDENT TICKET. —N. Y. Mirror.

OLD SAWS.—There used to be a saying that 'sauce for the goose is sauce for the gander,' but it seems that Free Soil in N. Y. is in favor at Washington, and a recomendation for office but in an applicant from Missouri it is an unpardonable sin.—So it appears by a letter from the Post Master General to Col. Benton.

THE GUTHRIE LETTER.—The Troy Whig says:

This is the first instance we remember of where a Cabinet Minister has taken to mousing among the candle ends and cheese parings of his party. It has never had but one parallel in the whole history of politics—and that was when the 'vexed question' arose whether the repairs on Marcy's pantaloons should be paid for by the State, or by himself out of his own pocket.

The Whig State Ticket.

The Whig State Convention met, organized, performed its duty and adjourned yesterday. Its deliberations throughout were characterized by a calmness, discrimination and wisdom which might have been anticipated from the intelligence and firmness of the Delegates by whom it was composed. Rarely, if ever, have we seen a body of men actuated by a truer sense of the dignity and delicacy of their important trust. The very best, and many of the oldest and most experienced men of the Party were in the Convention. Of past differences little was said, and that little disregarded. The Convention, in its selection of Candidates, sought only for men of integrity, capacity, experience and Whig fidelity. And in its selection it was eminently fortunate. The Ticket is all that the crisis demands—all that the public sentiment anticipated.

James M. Cook has rendered good service to the People. He was an efficient Member of the Constitutional Convention. He was a most influential and hard working Senator for four years. He was an honest State Treasurer and a valuable Member of the Canal Board until, by means of which we will not speak, but which we cannot forget, he was superseded. Gen. Cook is a capable and thorough business man. He has high administrative qualities, and is in all respects practical and industrious. The important and manifold duties of the Office of Comptroller will be performed ably, promptly and honestly.

Gen. Leavenworth is highly endowed and qualified by nature, education and discipline for the duties of Secretary of State. He is a Lawyer and a Scholar. Though known and appreciated as Mayor of his City and as a Member of the Legislature, he enters for the first time now upon a broader field of duty, in which we predict for him a useful and honorable career.

Of Ogden Hoffman, our Candidate for Attorney General, we need hardly speak, for his name is a 'house-hold word' thrnughout the State. From the day he stood, as the "boy midshipman" upon the deck of the U. S. Ship United States, bravely defending her stripes and stars in the engagement with the British Frigate Macedonian, till the present hour, his meteor-like course has been illumined by gallantry and eloquence.

The Hon. E. G. Spalding was brought forward by Western New York as a Candidate for Comptroller, a station that he would have adorned. That question having been decided, in the most amicable spirit, in favor of Gen. Cook, the business men of the West, unwilling to loose Mr Spalding's services in the Canal Board, brought his name forward for State Treasurer, and though not a Candidate for that Office, his Nomination was made with great unanimity and hailed with warm acclamations. Mr. Spalding has been Mayor of Buffalo, Member of the Legislature and Representative in Congress. He brings to the discharge of every duty, talents, diligence and probity.

Cornelius Gardiner, our Candidate for Canal Commissioner, is just the man for the responsible and laborious duties of that Office. He is a highly intelligent Merchant who grew up on the banks of the Canal, has been long connected with the business of the Canal as a Forwardor, and 'knows the whole duty' of a Commissioner. As far as he is known, his character for enterprise and integrity as a man and of indomitable perseverance and zeal as a Whig, are 'fixed facts.'

John T. Clark, the Nominee for State Engineer and Surveyor, has attained the highest rank in his profession. In view of the Completion of the Public Works the office of State Engineer is the most important in the Administration. More depends upon the wisdom and integrity of this officer than any other in the Government. And it was these considerations that pointed to Mr. Clark for the station; and though not a candidate for the office, his great fitness for it was so manifest that no other name was presented to the Convention.

Thomas Kirkpatrick, the Candidate for State Prison Inspector, is well qualified for its duties. He will bring to the discharge of these duties honesty, application and humanity. Though there were many and worthy competitors, they were overborne in the canvass by the energy and zeal of Mr. Kirkpatrick's warm personal friends.

The same spirit, coupled with a lively remembrance of the enduring, reliable, full and heaped-up Whig majorities of the County of Livingston, produced the Nomination of Benjamin F. Harwood, an upright and capable man, for Clerk of the Court of Appeals.

The Candidates for Judges of the Court of Appeals are eminent Jurists. George Wood stands at the head of the Bar of our State. Mr. Mullin is a mature and sound Lawyer. As Judge of the Jefferson County Court, and Representative in Congress, Mr. Mullin earned the reputation of being learned and useful. Both of these gentlemen would be an acquisition and an honor to our highest Judicial Tribunal.

As a whole and in its parts, therefore, we repeat, that the Whig State Ticket is all that Whigs desired, and worthy of their united and zealous support.—Albany Journal.

The Barnburners in Pursuit of the Spoils.

Their abandonment of principle, their humiliating supplications to the Hunkers at Syracuse, and their bare-faced roadiness to barter principle for spoils, is thus finely touched in a recent speech of Hon. D. S. Dickinson, the Hunker leader in this State:

"There was once a poor preacher who supplied an equally poor congregation up somewhere in the woods, under a contract to have so much rye for his year's preaching, if they saw fit to retain him for a year. He was very fearful that he should get the sack prematurely, and did all he knew how to fend off that appalling calamity; among other precautions, going round to the leading members of the congregation to learn how his preaching suited them.—"Brethren," said he, anxiously, 'just tell me how you like my doctrine, if you don't like it, let me know in time, I shall preach to please you, I must have that rye."

Signs of Woe.

The following is an extract from a communication in the Plattsburgh Republican of last week. We should not wonder if all, and more than is there stated, should prove true. As the almanac makers say: "look out for a severe storm about these days." The "short boys" of Clinton County are doomed. Disaffection in the democratic ranks is deep and wide-spread. No county in the State presents such a spectacle of political corruption, as Clinton. Controlled by cabals and cliques for selfish ends, the party has become a mere automaton in the hands of the managers. Gored to madness, the masses are about seeking vengeance on their heartless leaders. The communication from which this is an extract, is but a premonitory symptom. The truthor falsehood of the particulars stated, we know nothing. We only know that the democracy of Clinton are standing on a volcano. The writer of the letter possibly and very likely thought to frighten democrats into submission, by shaking the bones of the Abolitionists at them, or perhaps, wild with dismay, at the fearful prospect before them this fall, is blind to the real cause, and vainly seeks to cast the reproach upon some object without the pale of his own party. Vain delusion—the decree has gone forth—the cabals of Clinton must fall:

"Mr EDITOR:—The abolition party of this county held a convention at Chazy, a short time since, and appointed a committee with power to call future conventions. Thomas Armstrong, present District Attorney, is a member of that committee and openly opposed to the democratic ticket and in favor of the whig ticket. A movement is now on foot to sell out the abolition party to Mr. Hoyle and others on the whig ticket. A secret emissary from Champlain and another from Moores, came here on Monday last, en route for the southern towns of the county, to induce persons of that party to vote for Hoyle."

NOT MUCH TO BRAG OF.—One of the speakers (Mr. S. W. Cone, a member of the Young Men's Democratic Union Club) who addressed the Democratic ratification meeting at Tammany Hall, last Friday Evening, concluded his speech with the triumphant declaration, "that there never had been a member of his family, as far back as he could trace, who was a Whig."

Very likely this may be true; indeed, we are inclined to yield it full credence. Mr. W. S. Cone is not the first of his race. He is not filius nullus. He has antecedents. He has had a father, and a grandfather, and can trace his descent from a period long anterior to the revolution, and from the beginning of his illustrious line, not one has been a Whig. We shouldn't wonder! Well, most people in this country would rather like, in tracing their genealogy back to the period of '76, to find a Whig with whom he could claim kindred. Not so with Mr. W. S. Cone. People differ in their tastes as to such matters.—Albany Register.

"Mr W. S. Cone" is not peculiar to Albany County. We have such this way. The Editor of the Administration Organ at this place "has had a father and a grandfather, and can trace his descent from a period long anterior to the revolution, and from the beginning of his illustrious line, not one has been a whig!" Indeed, his ancestors fled the U. S. and sought British protection on the firing of the first gun of the American Revolution, so that they were not merely not whigs, but worse—tories. So far from this being any disqualification, we think his organ is more in accordance with the general piebald character of the party whose mouth-piece it is. He, too, glories in his shame; boasts that Lord Nelson was his uncle. Without questioning the right, we merely submit that "people differ in their tastes as to such matters." These things are only worthy of notice in consequence of the airs and assumptions of these "degenerate sons of a tory stock." If a man is unfortunately descended he is not "per se" the worse for it—but if he make it his boast—if his characteristics indicate that the line will end where it began, at the galley, on the scaffold, or in the blood of a traitor, it is well enough, by way of "taking the starch out of 'em," to remind such that "people differ in their tastes as to such matters." and that if democrats who boast so much of their democracy and declaim against whigs as identified with federals, are content with such standard bearers they are quite free to do so. That's all.

John Van Buren on Gov. Marcy.

"No one can deny his signal ability, his unswerving integrity, his uniform exemption from schemes of plunder and speculation, and above all, his intimate, precise, and unvarying knowledge of every rogue in the State of New York. [Roars of laughter.)"

And, having that "knowledge," he "governs himself accordingly"—buying up the Barnburners with the spoils of office.—'Cheap as dirt.' John was right—Marcy has an 'unvarying knowledge of every rogue in the State."

ALBANY "SHORT BOYS"—Treading in the footsteps of their illustrious predecessors.—At a democratic ward meeting in Albany recently the 'short boys' assumed control and threatened to whip any man who should interfere. They controlled the convention, but they cant the election.

EVERY MAN TO HIS TRADE.—Napoleon once said of a General, that 'he would make a first rate tailor.' It turns out that Soulo, Pierce's minister to Spain, has mistaken his calling. It is said, that being a fierce democrat he could not dress in full uniform, and desiring to show proper respect for the customs of the court, he has invented what the Albany Journal calls a 'Compromise' coat, being a black velvet, trimmed with silk instead of gold and silver. The Tribune calls it a 'Shad belly,' and insists that it be sent to the Crystal Palace for the inspection of the democracy.—If the Tribune thinks they would 'spit' upon it he is mistaken, for if only christened democratic, they would defend it with their blood, and vote for it for President if put in nomination by a regular convention.—Bellmont adopts a blue coat, standing collar and fancy buttons.

No You Dont!—An Interesting Correspondence—Official Dictation Rebuked!

KEESEVILLE, Oct. 10, 1853.

J. F. POTTER, Esq.

DEAR SIR:—At our last Co. Convention you were placed upon the Democratic Town Committee for Schroon. You will, therefore, allow me to suggest that you urge upon your friends the necessity of using every proper exertion to sustain the regular, State, Senatorial and Co. Tickets, now before us.

The division that has sprung up so unfortunately in our ranks, the results of which aim directly at placing the Administration in a minority in this State, ought to be frowned down by every man who cast his vote for Gen. Pierce last Fall; and we should spare no pains to resist the insidious attempts of the factious opponents of the Administration to dupe democrats into the support of the spurious Ticket under Mr. Cooley's leadership.

It would be well therefore, to extend the circulation of Administration newspapers in your town; and for that purpose you may transmit me any sum—however small—which may be contributed in you neighborhood, and I will see that "Campaign" papers to the amount sent, are promptly addressed you, or any active democrat whose name you may suggest.

For your guidance, I append the conditions on which you can obtain the necessary papers.

Respectfully yours,
A. C. NELSON,
Ch'n Democratic Committee.

Family Influence.

This subject has been under discussion among democrats lately, and a synopsis of their comments may interest the public—They think one family has had its share of the honors and emoluments, and that the pertinacity with which it sticks to the pursuit is getting rather obnoxious. The question begins to be discussed, whether this family does not think it has a right to the use of the party for its own benefit?—

They take issue on that question and appeal to the ballot box. Here is their only chance of success for if they appealed to the courts they would get beat on the principle of law that 20 years uninterrupted use and occupation under claim of title, establishes the claim. This family has received the 'rents and profits' of the party for nearly 25 years, amounting almost to a prescriptive right. We give a few examples:

Reuben Whallon,	County Judge.
—do do	Member of Congress.
Jas. S. Whallon,	Com. of Loans.
do	Senator,
do	Post Master.
Jas. S. Whallon,	Free Soil Elector.
Eli W. Rogers,	Candidate for Sheriff
do	Co. Supt. Schools.
Jas. S. Whallon,	do for Assembly.
do	would be candidate for Congress in 1852.
do	would be delegate to State Convention 1853. Named both and would have named himself but for public opinion.
Reuben Whallon,	Post Master.
Eli W. Rogers,	Senator,
do	Candidate 1853.

Jas. S. Whallon, Reuben Whallon, Eli W. Rogers, Wm. Van Vleck, candidates, and delegates, an infinitude of times.

It is to be decided at the coming election whether the party owns itself, or whether this family have a life lease of it.

This is a family affair in which we take no interest only to see the fun go on and give the news.

The Party of Broken Pledges.

The serpentine policy of the barnburners in this State is thus graphically portrayed by the Albany Journal:

They set out to put down Slavery, and they are this day, its firmest reliance.—They pledged themselves to "fight ever," and then fled the field in the midst of the battle. The 'Compromise' was passed, and they agreed to it. The Fugitive Slave Law was passed, and they agreed to that. The Baltimore Platform was passed and they agreed to that. South Carolina kidnapped Seamen, and they were silent.—Illinois exiled laborers, and they were dumb. The Inaugural endorsed the whole and they endorsed the inaugural. They swore to speak their minds, and then took bribes to hold their tongues. They pledged support to the Enlargement, and then stopped the work. They resolved to sustain their State Officers, and then refused every one of them a renomination. They impeached Mather, and he was adjudged innocent. They Charged the Whig State Officers with corruption, and were proved to be guilty of it themselves. They confessed that their first Platform was a cheat, and now they beg that their last may be considered a lie.

From Buffalo to Baltimore, from Albany to Washington, and back again to Syracuse, his character has been the same. It ends as it began—the Party of Broken Pledges.

OFFICIAL INSOLENCE REBUKED AND EXPOSED.—The correspondence we publish to day between the 'administration 'short boy' Editor of this place and that estimable citizen and staunch democrat Joel F. Potter Esq., of Schroon, explains itself. It is a just rebuke of the dictatorial and pompous assumptions of a roving fortune hunter who happens to have cheated the democracy out of a little Post Office at Keeseville, who at the end of his next 'tramp' will be found on opposite issues if there should be an office, or spoils to be gained by it. The firmness which refuses to follow such a leader will be admired, and the publication of the correspondence is due to the cause of truth. We ought to say, that it came to us by mail, plainly superscribed to 'Jonathan Tarbell, Esq. Editor &c.' and that there might be no dispute we have preserved the envelope. It may have been designed for Nelson, and directed to us by mistake, or it may have been purposely sent to us. As to this we care nothing, and the rightful owner can reclaim his letters if he wishes, and look them over at his leisure—they are of no further use to us.

Darkness is being brought to light and crooked paths made straight. Let the good work go on.

"All's Well!"

The political signs could not be more auspicious. The Whig Party is cordially united in the determination to rescue the State from the hands of its present incompetent and profligate Rulers. The tone of the Press, with scarcely an exception, is in harmony with the wishes and determination of the Party. It is a State contest, waged for the triumph of vital State issues, and whatever differences may have hitherto existed on questions of a more general character, there never has been and there never can be a difference among Whigs in regard to those issues with which interests and supremacy of the State are identified. It is their chief glory that they have always, from the first, been the inflexible and uncompromising "friends of Internal Improvements. And experience has shown that the Canals of the State are only safe in the hands of the representatives of the Whig Party.

This—with Economy and Accountability in the Administration of the Government—is the prominent issue of the Campaign. It is becoming most gratifyingly apparent that irrelevant issues will not be attempted to be pressed into the Canvass. These signs of union, harmony and concession are the harbingers of success. And unless the future, (which we do not believe,) shall beeloud the bright prospects of the present, the administration of the affairs of the 'Empire State' will be speedily again placed in the hands of the Representatives of Whig Principles—Albany Journal.

The Old Guard.—We are in receipt of this able and spicy paper published by Hon. Edmund Burke, Polk's Commissioner of Patents, and a talented democrat. We quote below from an Editorial, and in doing so we can but enquire, what is the united and harmonious democracy coming to? If the half that is said be true, they are unworthy of the confidence of the American people. "When rogues fall out," &c:—

"We now give notice that the Old Guard is permanently established, and it will be devoted to the work of showing up the contemptible gang of pickaninny politicians—half-breed democrats—renegades from whiggery and abolitionism—mere neophytes in politics—as they deserve to be. The time has gone by when such dregs from the bottom of the political cauldron, can rule the democracy of New Hampshire.

The Military Encampment at Ti.—Col. Stone of the Plattsburgh Republican thus alludes to this occasion and to some of the 'good boys' who were along. We will take the liberty to say that, the complimentary remarks of the Col are cordially reciprocated by the young and gallant officers named, some of whom have treated us to the particulars, in which the Col. bears no small part:—

"Gen. Gray and staff were out in full uniform, as were the officers and men of Colonel Person's regiment, the 31st. Gen. Blanchard and Inspector General W. L. G. Smith were present and witnessed the inspection and review. Gen. Smith addressed the command at length on the subject of the present militia system—the duties of officers and soldiers, of the assessors, supervisors, &c., and spoke encouragingly of the working of the "new system" in all parts of the state. The weather during the time of the encampment was most inclement, but the officers and soldiers stood it bravely. The 31st is a new regiment, but promises to take hereafter a high position in the militia force, for discipline and military appearance. The officers are well equipped, good disciplinarians, and most excellent companions: And in this connection we shall be pardoned for mentioning the names of Lt. Col. Merriam, Capts. M. F. Nicholson, Richards, E. R. Persons, Smith (of Warren Co.) and Lieuts. Steel and B. F. Holcomb, to whom we were particularly indebted for much very considerate attention during our first encampment with this Brigade."

THE U. S. COAT OF ARMS.—A correspondent of the National Intelligencer furnishes a new coat of Arms for the U. S. as indicated by the Pierce democracy: To deprive the American Eagle of its heraldic thunderbolt and substitute in its terrible talons a gigantic pair of shears!

A Peep into Life at Washington.—Another Cabinet Edict.—The Clerks in the Treasury Department at Washington are required to labor only 6 hours a day, and during office hours "indulgence in ardent spirits" is not permitted. So we go. As pay increases, labor diminishes. These clerks are paid as much a day as they could earn in 24 hours, but they are kept at work by a democratic Secretary only about long enough to get sober if ordinarily pickled. People in the country, who "earn a living by the sweat of the brow," labor from 10 to 18 hours a day, but democratic "pets" only 6! and as we may infer that they are a set of tipplers, they should be credited about 4, or rather not at to be employed at all. This Dirty Quibbling.—The 'dirty little Free Soil paper' denies what no one asserted, that the extract re-published by us last week in an article from the Jeffersonian 'was published in the Northern Gazette.' That low concern was not by that name in existence in 1851. The extract the imported editor and his man in Clinton County well knew was published 'from the same press, in a paper then called the 'Ausable River Gazette' published by D. Turner, who was the predecessor of Nelson.

The St. Albans Messenger, says:

"The St. Albans Democrat is defunct and its Editor gone to parts unknown.—☞ The democrats of St. Albans should have bestowed upon the Editor the Post Office! Post Offices are convenient things to keep up worthless presses and more worthless Editors, who lack brains to earn a living. The Vermonters are 'cute' about some things, but they evidently dont understand the 'spoils' system. Why, we knew a democratic press, insolvent by hundreds, its stuff levied on by the Shff. an article on the galley announcing its demise, and the Editor about to 'leave for parts unknown,' yet brought to life by the bestowal of a Post Office, as quickly as ever a patient was revived by stimulants. Uncle Sam has capacious pockets, and "short boys" know the way into 'em.

The Spirit of the Press.

The (Malone) Jeffersonian, (dem.) says, the Barnburners for years past have made the State Capitol a "huckster shop and sunk official conduct and political character to the lowest level of chicanery, intrigue, and corruption."

True every word of it.

The same paper says of the same individuals, that "they feel that justice is overtaking them, and despair has seized their guilty souls, and paralysis holds their energies in its unyielding grasp. They have been insolent in their day of power, and we must expect to see them display the most abject meanness and pusillanimity when their fall comes."

'Hit 'em agin,' neighbor—'served 'em right.'

The N. O. Commercial Bulletin says, 'If Pierce only had spoils enough he could make the Northern Barnburners and Southern Secessionists as quiet and gentle as dovos."

No doubt of it. John Van Buren himself in his Albany speech says, that Marcy "has the most unvarying knowledge of every rogue in the State." Hence, the use he makes of the spoils.

Complimentary.

Quoting our notice of Judge Burnett, the Albany Journal says:

This is as it should have been. Judge Burnett is worthy of the whole confidence of his party and his constituents.

The Register, says:

We are glad to see that the Whigs of Essex Co. appreciate the value of Judge Burnett's services. He was one of the few "solid men" in the last Legislature, who were always at their posts, watchful of the public interests. He is an able as well as an eloquent debator. He did not fritter away his influence by constant speaking, and as a consequence whenever he had the floor he commanded the attention of all.—Possessing a clear judgment, sound good sense, and right moral perception, he was seldom in the wrong, and could always give excellent reasons for the faith that was in him. He belongs to a class of men who give stability and character to Legislation, who direct it by reflection rather than impulse, and who are always safe guides in an emergency.

4th Judicial Dist. Whig Convention

The delegates to the 4th Judicial District Convention, met at Whitehall, pursuant to notice, on the 11th of Oct. 1853.—The Convention was called to order by Benjamin Squires, Esq., of St. Lawrence co., on whose motion, Hon. S H. Johnson was chosen chairman, Augustus Haight and M. F. Nicholson, were appointed secretaries.

On motion of Hon. J, Gibson, Amaziah B. James, of St. Lawrence co., was unanimously nominated for Justice of Supreme Court for the 4th Judicial District.

Resolved, That the next Judicial Convention be held at Whitehall, and that the same be called by the chairman of this committee.

Resolved, That the proceedings of this Convention be published in the Whig papers of the District, and also in the Albany Evening Journal and State Register.

News from Europe.—It is said that war has already began between Turkey and Russia. The news is also said to be a hoax. A little time will determine. Speculators are, however, improving the opportunity. Flour is $8, a barrel, and other things in proportion. We have not raised on the Republican, but cant tell how soon we shall.

Pierce Democracy in Georgia.—The Atlanta Ga. Republican says, that 3 things are required to make a Pierce democrat in that State:

1st, He must be a Fire eater. 2nd, He must be a Pierce man. 3d, He must fraternize with the Freesoilers of the North.

IRON ORE.—We have noticed large quantities of this valuable ore, at different times during the season, at the Depot of the Northern Railroad. It is brought here by rail from Port Henry on Lake Champlain, to be shipped to Erie Pa., and thence by Rail to Pittsburgh. There are also large quantities of this ore taken to Cleveland, Ohio, Detroit and Milwaukee, and is found to be very profitable to the purchaser.—The facts speak well for the iron regions of Northern New York, which are filled with the richest ore in the world. It has become an article of export, of considerable importance to our growing commerce.

An Important Movement in Schroon.

A New Democratic Senatorial Convention—Rogers Repudiated—Copy Proceedings.

A Democratic Senatorial Convention was held at H. L. Weatherhead's Inn, in the town of Schroon, on the 17th inst. Jacob Foster, Esq., was called to the chair, and J. B. Oakley and A. S. Tripp were chosen Secretaries. Delegates from different counties were present. After the meeting was called to order by the president, the Convention nominated a committee of three to draft resolutions, expressing the object and views of the Convention in relation to the present nominee for the State Senate in this District, who reported by their Chairman, Col. Andrew L. Ireland, the following resolutions, to wit:—

Resolved, That the Democratic party has always embodied in its principles that "the majority should govern;" and, that rotation and a distribution of office should be given to those that the people select.—Not by Central Committees or private cliques.

Resolved, That the town of Schroon has always been the back bone of the Democratic party, and consequently, has been obliged to stand the brunt of the Democratic battle—and has been the means of electing every democratic candidate in the Senatorial District for a number of years; and yet, Schroon has never had a candidate for any office, but through the instrumentality of a certain clique, who have arrogated to themselves all the offices, deeming it as a hereditary right so to do.

Resolved, That Schroon will no longer submit to such dictation if others will. Therefore, Resolved that Schroon will now exercise her independence, and therefore, nominate a Senator of her own—and upon the common principles of self-home protection in conjunction with her sister towns.

Resolved, That Hon. Oliver Keese be supported by the Democrats of this Senatorial District for the next Senator at the next election.

Resolved, That we support the Ticket headed George W. Clinton, and endorse the Resolutions of that Convention.

Resolved, That the proceedings of this meeting be published in the Glens Falls Republican and Albany Argus.

The above resolutions were unanimously adopted by the Convention, and Hon. OLIVER KEESE was substituted in place of Mr. Rogers, as the next candidate for Senator in this District.

JACOB FOSTER, Chairman.

FOURTH JUDICIAL DISTRICT.—The Whigs of this District have nominated for Supreme Court Justice AMAZIAH B. JAMES of St. Lawrence.—This is an excellent nomination. Mr. JAMES stands foremost among the legal profession in Northern New York, and if elected, will bring to the bench as much legal acquirement, experience, and natural fitness, as could any man in the District. We hope to have the pleasure of announcing his election. The accounts which we have from the different localities of the District assure us the nomination bids fair to be ratified by the people—Troy Whig.

LAKE CHAMPLAIN.—The Saranac, Captain Mayo, leaves Whitehall for St. Johns every Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays, at One o'clock, P. M., and St. Johns for Whitehall every Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays, at 10 o'clock, A. M. This is a very convenient arrangement, as we have frequently found, and Capt. Mayo, as everybody knows, is an obliging and attentive Captain. As a sea boat, the Saranac has no superior. Success to the enterprise.

Albany County.—The Whigs of that county have nominated Hon. Hamilton Harris for Dist. Atty. He is a brother of Judge Harris, and was once a member of the Assembly. He is one of the pure minded, hardworking, reliable young men who are worthy of, but who too seldom receive the confidence of the people.

By way of variety, the democrats of that county have two tickets.

☞ Bronson and O'Connor have replied to Guthrie's circular on the appointments in their respective offices, and they have completely annihilated the thick skulled Secretary. Either Bronson must be turned out, or the Secretary of the Treasury, if not the majority of the Cabinet, must resign. The Secretary issued his instructions and Bronson refuses to obey. The President must choose between them—both cannot honorably remain in office. We shall see what we shall see.

Be Warned in Time.—Whigs should not trust to the divisions of the democracy to elect their ticket. It can only be elected by votes, and the most votes too. It wont do to trust to half a vote, or a light vote, 'luck and chance;' a full vote only will ensure success. To get out a full vote, requires some effort, and it is time to begin preparations. 'A stitch in time saves nine.'

THE BATTLE.—The missiles fired into the enemies camp this week are only by our advanced guard—our light troops.—We shall get our heavy guns in battery next week, when, we shall 'let strip the dogs of war' in earnest. What we have said this week, is only in fun—merely a prelude to some 'plain talk' next week.—We would not be understood as hating those Pierce democrats personally, and individually, but take 'em together, we think their trading truckling, time serving place hunting, spoils seeking propensities demoralizing, and not to be tol[erated]. The race is a bad one, and we sh[all] what we can to exterminate it.

Whig State Ticket.—Read the

(From the Albany Journal.)

The True Distinction.

It is not more perfectly understood by the People that in whatever Whigs may say in favor of the Canals they are honest and sincere, than that in whatever the discarded Atlas faction profess they are dishonest and hypocritical.

These are as instinctively for, as Loco Focoism is instinctively against, that system; and it is because this fact is appreciated by the People that the Barn Burners are despised and discarded. They constitute a mournful illustration of the fact, that the practice of falsehood and treachery is not the best mode of securing public confidence or respect.

Proscription.—The barnburner canal board have removed every hunker in office under them from Troy to Buffalo. Mr. Mather offered a resolution that they be not removed without cause, and that they be allowed to be heard. This resolution was laid on the table, and their heads were taken off without warning, and without mercy simply because they would not support the barnburner ticket. This question is propounded; 'Will taking off the hands of the hunker office holders make 'short boys' of them?' The vote at election will reply.

Voice of the Whig Press—The Tone of the Whig Party.

The selections which we publish embrace we believe, extracts from every paper claiming to be Whig in the State. It is possible that we may have overlooked one or two of our exchanges; but the Ticket is supported by every paper recognized as a Whig journal from Suffolk to Chautauque. No nominations have been presented for many years which have been more cordially endorsed, or more cheerfully supported. In regard to them, the Whig Party is a unit.

And yet the election of this Ticket should not be taken for granted. Now, as ever, systematic organization and effort, can afford the only sure guarntees of success. No mass meetings are necessary. Excitement is rather to be deprecated than desired. But A FULL WHIG VOTE is necessary to secure such a victory as is demanded by the position of parties, and as is necessary to place beyond a contingency the speedy triumph of the Great Principle, and the important measures, for which the Whig Party has been laboring for the last ten years.

Over-confidence is the only danger to be apprehended. Without a full vote, the victory within our reach cannot be attained. The Anti-Canal faction are alike active and unscrupulous. They have the patronage of both the State and National Governments, and this patronage will be brought to bear upon the Ballot Box. But it will be futile if met with becoming zeal and energy on the part of those who abhor deceit and eschew fellowship with pledge-breakers—Albany Journal.

THE WAY TO DO IT.—The Silver Greys desired a different ticket in some respects. The State convention, however, passed off pleasantly—no ill feelings were engendered—and at a social gathering after the labors of the convention were closed Mr. Hammond of the Register, the Silver Grey Organ in this State, challenged any Editor in the State to do more for the election of the ticket than he would." and this is the way he talks in his paper:

The Whig party came together and nominated good men for office, and we go for them without stopping to ask whether they have trained under this or that leader. They are Whigs and were regularly nominated; they are men of solid worth, and we are willing to confide the great interests of the State to their hands.

We have an abiding faith in the Whig party, and Whig principles. They will all come out right in the end, even if it is conceded that the party may not be perfect now. We shall stand by the party and its candidates—we regard it as infinitely wiser and better to do so, than to abandon the good ship to the breakers and the rock, because we may not believe in the infallibility of some of her officers. The Whig party is the party of order, the great conservative party, of rational progress, as such we shall cling to it, and its candidates, regardless alike of the taunts of its enemies, or the indiscretions of its friends.

And again:

THE RIGHT SPIRIT.—We give below a brief but sensible article from the Buffalo Rough Notes. It speaks our sentiments quite as well as we could express them ourself. We concur heartily in its suggestions, and hope to see the Whig party a unit, when the voting time comes:

The ticket put in nomination by the Whig State Convention will be found at the head of our column this morning. On the whole, though not exactly what we were prepared to expect, it is a good and strong one, such as the Whigs of the State can heartily support, and one that can and will be triumphantly elected. We shall, therefore, labor for its success, with the same zeal as we should have shown had our individual preferences been regarded, and so, we have no doubt, will the Whig voters generally. All that now remains is to organize thoroughly and promptly for the campaign. Our candidates are all good and true Canal Enlargement men, and as such deserve the earnest support of every man having the best interests of the Empire State at heart.

CONCURRENT RESOLUTION PROPOSING AN AMENDMENT TO THE CONSTITUTION.

Resolved, (if the Senate concur,) That the following amendment be proposed to the constitution of this state and referred to the legislature to be chosen at the next general election of senators, and be published for three months previous to making such choice, in pursuance to the provisions of the first section of the thirteenth article, of said constitution.

Substitute for section three of article seven the following:

After paying the said expenses of collection, superintendence and repairs of the canals, and the sums appropriated by the first and second sections of this article, there shall be appropriated and set apart in each fiscal year out of the surplus revenues of the canals, as a sinking fund, a sum sufficient to pay the interest as it falls due, and extinguish the principal within eighteen years of any loan made under this section; and if the said sinking fund shall not be sufficient to redeem any part of the principal at the stipulated times of payment, or to pay any part of the interest of such loans as stipulated, the means to satisfy any such deficiency shall be procured on the credit of the said sinking fund. After complying with the foregoing provisions, there shall be paid annually out of said revenues into the treasury of the state two hundred thousand dollars, to defray the necessary expenses of government. The remainder shall, in each fiscal year, be applied to meet appropriations for the enlargement and completion of the canals mentioned in this section, until the said canals shall be completed. In each fiscal year thereafter the remainder shall be disposed of in such manner as the legislature may direct, but shall at no time be anticipated or pledged for more than one year in advance. The legislature shall annually, during the next four years, appropriate to the enlargement of the Erie, the Oswego, the Cayuga and Seneca canals, and to the completion of the Black River and Genesee Valley canals, and for the enlargement of the locks of the Champlain canal, whenever from dilapidation or decay it shall be necessary to rebuild them, a sum not exceeding two millions two hundred and fifty thousand dollars. The remainder of the revenues of the canals for the current fiscal year in which such appropriation is made, shall be applied to meet such appropriation; and if the same shall be deemed insufficient, the legislature shall at the same session provide for the deficiency by loan. The legislature shall also borrow one million and five hundred thousand dollars to refund to the holders of the canal revenue certificates issued under the provisions of chapter four hundred and eighty-five of the laws of the year one thousand eight hundred and fifty-one, the amount received into the treasury thereon. But no interest to accrue after July first, one thousand eight hundred and fifty-five, shall be paid on such Certificates. The provisions of section twelve of this article requiring every law for borrowing money to be submitted to the people, shall not apply to the loans authorized by this section. No part of the revenues of the canals or of the funds borrowed under this section, shall be paid or applied upon or in consequence of any alleged contract made under chapter four hundred and eighty five of the laws of the year one thousand eight hundred and fifty one, except to pay for work done or materials furnished prior to the first day of June, one thousand eight hundred and fifty-two. The rates of toll on persons and property transported on the canal shall not be reduced below those for the year one thousand eight hundred and fifty-two, except by the canal board, with the concurrence of the legislature.—All contracts for work or materials on any canal, shall be made with the person who shall offer to do or provide the same at the lowest price, with adequate security for their performance.

STATE OF NEW YORK, }
In Assembly, June 14, 1853. }

The foregoing proposed amendment to the constitution of the state was this day agreed to by a majority of all the members elected to the Assembly.

THE MARRIAGE STATE;

Shall Happiness and Health, or Misery and Sickness, attend it?

MOST STARTLING CONSIDERATIONS!

Reflections for the Thoughtful.

Strange that countless human beings exist and drag through life as do the beasts of the field, or the insects of the earth, evincing no more thought or reflection than though the noble faculties of mind were not vouchsafed to them.

Many such are husbands and fathers, upon whom are dependent the health, the well-being, and the happiness of a confiding and affectionate wife, with perhaps a family of children.

HOW OFTEN IT HAPPENS THAT THE

WIFE LINGERS FROM YEAR TO YEAR

In that pitiable condition as not even for one day to feel the happy and exhilerating influence incident to the enjoyment of health.

She may not be an invalid confined to her bed, or even to her room; as her pride, ambition and energy induce and nerve her to take personal charge of her household, even when her health will not admit of it; but she is nevertheless perceptibly sinking from day to day, and always ailing.

Thus, day after day, and month after month transpire. Her health daily sinks, till finally even the hope of recovery no longer remains. And thus

THE BLOOMING BRIDE,

But a few years ago in the flush of health and youth, and buoyancy of spirits, rapidly, and apparently inexplicably, becomes a feeble, sickly, debilitated wife, with frame emaciated, nerves unstrung, spirits depressed, countenance bearing the impress of suffering, and an utter physical and mental prostration.

Sometimes this deplorable change may and does arise from organic or constitutional causes. But oftener, by far oftener, to gross and inexcusable ignorance of the simplest and plainest rules of health as connected with the marriage state, the violation of which entails disease, suffering and misery, not only to the wife, but often

"UNTO THE THIRD AND FOURTH GENERATION,"

Transmitting CONSUMPTION, SCROFULA, HYPOCHONDRIA, INSANITY, GOUT, KING'S EVIL, and other diseases, as a

DREADFUL INHERITANCE

from the Parents.

And must this continue? Shall we be wise in all that concerns the cattle of our fields, our horses, our sheep, our cows, our oxen, the nature and character of the soil we possess, the texture and quality of our goods and merchandise; but in all that concerns ourselves as human beings, with human functions and passions, subject to great derangement, involving our future peace and happiness—in all that concerns the health and welfare of the wife of our affections, and the mother of our children; in all that concerns the mental and physical well being of those children, we should be immersed in the darkest and most

BENIGHTED IGNORANCE,

AS CULPABLE AS INEXCUSABLE!

How long shall this ignorance prevail so productive of its bitter fruits? How long shall the wife and mother be ignorant of the nature, character and causes of the various womb and sexual complaints, embittering her days by suffering—suffering often prolonged to years, eventuating in a complication of diseases utterly and hopelessly incurable? Shall we for ever close our eyes to the results of physiological science by which we may arrive at an understanding of ourselves as men and women, subject to serious life-long enduring diseases, and perpetuating them to our children.

LET EVERY WIFE AND HUSBAND PONDER!

No husband or wife need be ignorant of what concerns them most to know to secure their health and happiness. That knowledge is contained in a little work entitled

FRAUD!

ALL who want AXES of the real COLLINS & Co. make should be particular to notice the stamps, as there are various counterfeits and imitations stamped Collins and labelled much like ours, which are fraudulently sold in some parts of the United States as our manufacture. They are made in different parts of the country by various axe-makers, and are generally of very inferior quality. The genuine Collins axes, which have acquired such an extensive reputation are invariably stamped "COLLINS & CO. HARTFORD," and each axe has a printed label with my signature.—It is now more than TWENTY-FIVE YEARS since we commenced the business with the stamp of "Collins & Co. Hartford," and I do not know of any other axe-maker by the name of Collins in the United States.

"EVERY FAMILY SHOULD HAVE A COPY."

20,000 Copies sold in less than 5 months. A new edition, revised and improved, just issued.

Dr. Hunter's Medical Manual and Hand Book for the Afflicted—

Containing an outline of the origin, progress, treatment and cure of every form of disease, contracted by promiscuous sexual intercourse, by self abuse or by sexual excess, with advice for their prevention, written in a familiar style, avoiding all medical technicalities, and everything that would offend the ear of decency, from the result of some twenty years successful practice, exhlusively devoted to the cure of diseases of a delicate or private nature.

To which is added, receipts for the cure of the above diseases, and a treatise on the causes, symptoms and cure of the Fever and Ague.

Testimony of the Prof of Obstetrics in Penn. College, Philadelphia —"Dr. Hunter's Medical Manual."—The author of this work unlike the majority of those works who advertise to cure the diseases of which it treats, is a graduate of one of the best Colleges in the United States. It affords me pleasure to recommend him to the unfortunate, or to the victim of malpractice, as a successful and experienced practitioner, in whose honor and integrity they may place the greatest confidence.

JOSEPH LONGSHORE M. D.

From A Woodward M. D., of Penn. University, Philadelphia—It gives me pleasure to add my testimony to the professional ability of the author of the "Medical Manual." Numerous cases of diseases of the Genital Organs, some of them of long standing have come under my notice, in which his skill has been manifest in restoring to perfect health, in some instances where the patient has been considered beyond medical aid. In the treatment of Seminal weakness, or disarrangement of the functions produced by Self-abuse, or Excess of venery, I do not know his superior in the profession. I have been acquainted with the Author some thirty years, and deem it no more than justice to him as well as a kindness to the unfortunate victim of early indiscretion, to recommend him as one, in whose professional skill and integrity they may safely confide themselves. ALFRED WOODWARD, M.D.

"This is, without exception, the most comprehensive and intelligible work published on the class of diseases of which it treats Avoiding all technical terms, it addresses itself to the reason of its readers. It is free from all objectionable matter and no parent, however fastidious, can object to placing it in the hands of his sons. The author has devoted many years to the treatment of the various complaints treated of, and with too little breath to puff,' and 'too little presumption to impose,' he has offered to the world at the merely nominal price of 25 cents, the fruits of some 20 years most successful practice."—Herald.

"No teacher or parent should be without the knowledge imparted in this invaluable work It would save years of pain, mortification and sorrow to the youth under their charge."—People's Advocate.

A Presbyterian clergyman in Ohio, in writing of "Hunter's Medical Manual," says: "Thousands upon thousands of our youth, by evil example and influence of the passions, have been led into the habit of self pollution without realizing the sin and fearful consequences upon themselves and their posterity. The constitutions of thousands who are raising families have been enfeebled if not broken, down, and the do not know the cause or the cure. Anything that can be done so to enlighten and influence the public mind as to check, and ultimately to remove this widespread source of human wretchedness, would confer the greatest blessing next to the religion of Jesus Christ, on the present and coming generations. Intemperance (or the use of intoxicating drinks,) though it has slain thousands upon thousands, is not a greater scourge to the human race. Accept my thanks on behalf of the afflicted, and, believe me, your co-worker in the good work you are so actively engaged in."

One copy, (securely enveloped,) will be forwarded free of postage to any part of the United States for 25 cents, or 6 copies for $1.—Address (post paid) COSDEN & Co., publishers, Box 196, Philadelphia. 478y

This certifies that I have for a number of years been acquainted with the composition and mode of manufacture of Morse's Compound Syrup of Yellow Dock Root. I have also been acquainted with its modus operandi in disease, and can say that in all respects it is admirably calculated to remedy that class of Diseases for which it was designed. It is especially valuable in indigestion and all its attendant symptoms, it excites to healthy action the Liver, removes Torpor, and inactivity of this organ, and stimulates healthy action in all the system. HENRY S. RANDALL, Secretary of State.

Henry's Invigorating Cordial,

PURELY VEGETABLE IN ITS COMPOSITION.

This invaluable Cordial, is extracted from Herbs and Roots, which have been found after years of experience by the most skilful Physicians, to be possessed of qualities most beneficial in the diseases for which it is recommended, and hence whilst it is presented to the public, as an efficacious remedy it is also known to be of that character on which reliance may be placed as to its safety. In cases of Impotency, Hoemorrhages, Disordered Sterility, Menstruation, or Suppression of the Menses, Fluor Albus or Whites, or for arising from any cause, such as weakness from sickness, where the patient has been confined to bed for some time, for Females after Confinement, Abortion or Miscarriage, this Cordial cannot be excelled in its salutary effects; or injloss of Muscular Energy, Irritability, Physical Prostration, Seminal Weakness, Palpitation of the Heart, Indigestion, Sluggishness, Decay of the Procreative Functions, Nervousness, &c., where a TONIC Medicine is required, it will be found equal, if not superior, to any Compound ever used.

TO FEMALES

Henry's Invigorating Cordial is one of the most invaluable Medicines in the many Complaints to which Females are subject. It assists nature to brace the whole system, check excesses, and creates renewed health and happiness. Less suffering, disease and unhappiness among Ladies would exist, whose they generally to adopt the use of this Cordial. Ladies who are debilitated by those obstructions which females are liable to, are restored by the use of a bottle or two, to bloom and vigor.

YOUNG MEN.

That solitary practice, so fatal to the existence of man and it is too young who are most apt to become its victims, from an ignorance of the danger to which they subject themselves, causes

NERVOUS DEBILITY.

Weakness of the System, and Premature Decay. Many of you may now be suffering, misled as to the cause or source of disease. To those, then, who by excess have brought on themselves Premature Impotency, Involuntary Seminal Emissions, Weakness and Shrinking of the Genital Organs, Nervous Affection, or any other consequences of unrestrained indulgence of the sexual passions, occasioning the necessity of renouncing the felicities of lessening both mental and bodily capacity, Hold! Henry's Invigorating Cordial a Medicine that is purely Vegetable, will a dmin e to restore those important functions to a healthy state, and will prove of service to you. It possesses rare virtues, is a general remover of disease, and strengthener of the system.

AS A TONIC MEDICINE,

it is unsurpassed. We do not place this Cordial on a footing with quack medicines, and, as is customary, append a long list of Recommendations, Certificates, &c., beginning with "Hear what the Preacher says," and such like; it is not necessary, for "Henry's Invigorating Cordial," only needs a trial to prove that it will accomplish all we say.

THE GENUINE "HENRY'S INVIGORATING CORDIAL,"

is put up in 8 oz. Panuel Bottles, and is easily recognized by the Manufacturer's signature on the label of each Bottle (to counterfeit which is forgery) as well as his private Seal on the cork of each Bottle.

Who is Winslow C. watson ?

Mr. Watson is a son of Elkanah Watson, well known in connection with the mission of Franklin to Europe, during the war that established our national Independence. For a portion of that eventful period, his father had the management in Europe of shipments of arms and other materiel for the use of the Army of the Revolution. A gentleman of liberal education and enlarged views, he gave much attention to the public improvements of Europe—particularly the canals of Holland. On his return to this country, he visited Gen. Washington, when the question of the improvement of the Potomac River was discussed, which led to an expression of opinion that the great Lakes, Ontario, Erie, Huron, &c., must be, at no distant day, connected by the Hudson River with the ocean.

Not long after his return to the State of New York, he made examinations from Albany as far as Fort Stanwix, now the site of the village of Rome, ascending the Mohawk with Gen. Schuyler and others, through a wilderness to the Oneida and Cayuga Lakes, and found the project feasible. These examinations led him to associate himself with Gen. Schuyler and others for the construction of an improved navigation of the Mohawk River, at that early day; and afterwards, to lend all his influence and aid for the construction of the Erie Canal.

He was mainly instrumental in bringing that project to the favor of the public in his maturity, which, in his old age, he saw perfected by the energy and activity of younger men. His son, the subject of this sketch, imbibed from his father a sincere devotion to the Canal policy of this State; and although a long resident in that portion of it which has been least benefited by its success, he has ever maintained the policy which his early tuition as well as the judgement of maturer years, convinced him would be to the great interest of the people, and the public finances of the State.

After many years of industrious application to the study of the law, Winslow C. Watson became a distinguished member of the bar of Clinton and Essex counties, from 1825 to 1832. He was particularly prominent in the Northern counties of the State, in Chancery practice, which he was obliged to abandon in 1833, in consequence of ill health. He then removed to Manchester, Vermont, where he married a daughter of Governor Richard Skinner. During his residence there, he was twice elected to the Senate of that State, and was known as one of the most active and influencial members of the Democratic party. On the death of his father, Elkanah Watson, in 1840, he returned again to this State, and devoted his life to agricultural pursuits, in which his father had already taken great interest. The results of his labors in this sphere, are well known to intimate with the agricultural history of the country. For several years he has been President of the Agricultural society of Essex county.

The political career of Mr. Watson has been patriotic and consistent. While steadily maintaining the principles of the Democratic party, he has uniformly opposed the isms introduced by demagogues and disorganizers, to distract the integrity of party, or peril the peace and safety of the Republic. He has never asked nor sought office, contenting himself with competency, a home, surrounded by an interesting family, and an agreeable association with his friends and neighbors. In 1851 he was appointed one of the Democratic Central Committee of the State, and sustained the election of the Baltimore delegates by districts. Having been elected to the Baltimore Convention in 1852, he gave his vote with a majority of that Convention, on every ballot, for Gen. Cass; not alone from his personal intimacy with that distinguished statesman, but because of the principles avowed by the opponents of that gentleman, in this State—principles which were calculated to sever the Union, and the maintenance of which, upon the floors of Congress, had more than once endangered our system of national government, the glorious fabric of the Union of the States.

Winslow C. Watson, still inherits all the enthusiasm of his father for internal improvements, and is a warm and decided friend of the project for the extension and enlargement of the canals. He feels a deep interest in Agriculture, and during his leisure is engaged in publishing for the State, in the 'Documentary History,' of New York, an interesting Mineralogical, Geological, and Historical description of Northern N. York. But few men, if any, in this State, excel Mr. Watson in literary and scientific attainments. In uprightness of character, and moral and personal worth, he is above reproach.

Such is a brief sketch of the man whose name we have placed on the Mirror's Independent ticket for State Treasurer, in place of Mr. Spaulding. We have ample vouchers for all we have said of Mr. Watson, and we regard him, therefore, as in every respect, worthy the support of all friends of the true interests of our State and Union—of all who wish to sustain the institutions of the sovereign States of our Union, and to maintain between the several States that harmony which is so essential to the continued existence and success of our National Government.—N. Y. Mirror.

SAFE AT LAST.—The Washington Union declares that the other Union—the union of the States—'is not and cannot be in danger.' This declaration is called out by the coalition in Mississippi between Union Whigs and Democrats. It denounces this as an organization for unworthy purposes, and styles their plea of 'preserving the Union' a 'pretence.'

We differ with The Union. The Union is in danger when its rulers make hypocrisy the main qualification for office. Sectional disputes are not more dangerous than an unprincipled National Government. The Union is in as much danger as it ever was.

Duty of Whigs.

It is conceded by all fair minded Democrats that the Whig party will be successful, It will be so from present appearances; but by no means certainly—The Whigs may lose, as they often do, the election by means of this very concession and their own consequent supineness. There is just as much need for exertion on the part of the Whigs now, as ever there was. Their opponents, of both shades, will be very zealous, not only in getting out a large vote in the aggregate for their tickets, but more so in their efforts to outnumber one another in their vote for their respective tickets, and each faction will make strong appeals to Whigs sympathy for aid and comfort. For this Whigs will be on their guard. More especially will an effort be made to increase the vote if not to elect commissioner Mather, in whose behalf the cry of persecution will be set up. Let it be borne in mind, that if Mr. Mather is a persecuted man, the persecution belongs to his own political family—the Whig party has had nothing to do with it. He must stand or fall by his own merits, and on the estimation with which he is held by his own party.—Whigs should accept no overtures from him nor offer any. Each Whig has an integrity to uphold, as well as a duty to perform to his party and its friends.—Schenectady. Cabinet

A PLUG MUSS.—Quite a scene was enacted in our streets on Monday last, by the democratic performers, who are bound to amuse us until after the election. Our old friend, Col. John Norton, is the unfortunate individual selected by the Board of Barnburners, at Albany, to fill the post of Superintendent of Canals, on this Division, in place of Gen. Barret. Armed with his Commission, he made his advent on Monday about 10 o'clock A. M., and demand, pro forma, the books, papers and other chattels, belonging to or pertaining to the aforesaid office of Superintendent, of Gen. Barrett. Everybody who knows the General, should have seen him, when the demand was made, to have appreciated its comicality, otherwise they are left to imagine the look he gave the new-fledged officer, when he told him to go to——, he had no books or papers for such as he, and advised him, as a prudent man, to keep as far away from the towpath as though he were afflicted with hydrophobia—for water, if not dangerous to him, would be a source of no comfort to him. The Col. left.—Whitehall Chronicle.

INSUBORDINATION.—This word 'insubordination' is of new coinage, when applied to the personal conduct and tastes of individual officers. It will sound strange in republican ears. 'Insubordination" in what? The building up of a party opposed to the Administration? The dissemination of principles adverse to those professed by the President? Certainly not. But a disregard of the will of a Secretary in the choice of individuals with whom he is to be associated, and for whose official acts he is by law responsible. The Secretary, upon this theory, can say to every postmaster in the State, 'employ this or that clerk, it is my will that you shall have around you your personal enemies and my personal friends, or you shall be ejected from office for 'insubordination.' This military language, we repeat, is new to republican ears. It smacks of despotism. It may be submitted to. The power of spoils is prodigious. But we venture to say that there is a rough time ahead of those who have introduced it, and that the people will talk about it a good deal before it shall receive their sanction.—Albany Register.

Whig Judicial Nomination.

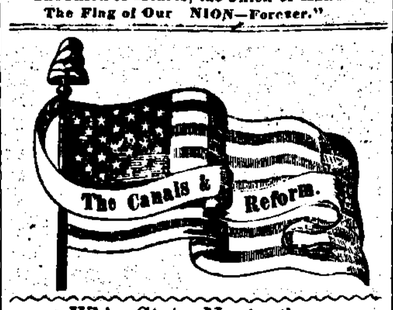
The Saratoga Whig, says: AMAZIAH B. JAMES, of Ogdensburgh, St. Lawrence Co, was the man universally agreed upon, as with one voice, by the Whigs of the whole district, and the Convention was a mere matter of form to put his name regularly before the people. He is a superior lawyer and an honest, fair minded man, one that we confidently believe will do honor to the station to which HE IS TO BE ELECTED. He ran for the same office two years since against his Honor Judge Allen, and was defeated by a very small majority, in consequence of the personal popularity of Mr. Allen in the strong Whig county of Washington. We bespeak for him the active exertions of every true Whig of the county of Saratoga as one well worthy of their support.

Of the Cabinet Edict, on the distribution of the offices in the N. Y. custom House, the Boston Atlas, says:

There are many points of view from which this extraordinary document may be looked at. We are struck with the indecorum—nay, the indecency—of a high functionary's setting his hand to a miserable electioneering hand bill. Party considerations apart, as Americans, sensitive to the honor of our country, we feel mortified to see a member of the Cabinet stooping to such dirty work. In the mind's eye, we see the flag of our country draggled in the mire, when we read such a paper.

We look upon this step of the Secretary as a hardy experiment upon the moral sense of the American people. If they can stand that, we apprehend they can stand anything. There is something so coarse and bald in the whole letter—its tone is so low—the motives it addresses are so mean and selfish—its very language is so clumsy and unscholarlike—that if it be endured and forgotten, it will be because we like official dictation, and are pleased to see place and power abused to party purposes, and degraded by vulgar contract.

GUTHRIE'S LETTER TO BRONSON.—The N. Y. Courier and Enquirer utters but the common sentiment when it says:



As far as our knowledge goes, it is in its entire and in the condition of things which it reveals without exception the most degrading, pitiable and despicable communication which has ever been sent from any one important officer of this Republic to another. It covers the whole nation with shame, except its authors, for they must be shameless.

FOREIGNERS &c.—The Northern Gazette says, the Rep. takes very good care not to say a word about the Kozta difficulty,' and that its 'notorious hatred of foreigners leads it to hush up what its Native Americanism cannot sanction.'

We are induced to reply to above, because if we neglect to do so, the Editor of the Gazette will parade us as confessing by their truth by our silence!

1. We spoke of the conduct of Capt. Ingraham in the Kozta affair in the most cordial terms—we were delighted—proud of him and his conduct—and we felt more than we could express, as we said at the time. As to 'Marcey's exposition' it was 'no great shakes'—he only followed in the wake of whig precedents and of course we said nothing of his paper exploit. We left that to his lackey of the Gazette.

2. If we have a 'notorious hatred of foreigners' it is news to us. It exists only in the imagination, or possibly in the Coterie of the Editor of the Gazette, and whatever of notoriety it may have, we must be indebted to that gentleman for its existence.—We never created it, nor authorized it.—As we have never 'defined our position' on this subject we proceed to do so, and challenge the Editor of the Gazette to do the same: 1. We are not a Native American. This is a free land, open to all who may come. 2. We are in favor of equal and exact justice to all, foreigners, adopted citizens, and natives. There should be no distinction. They should be treated according to their merits, and not as Natives, not as Foreigners, not as Catholics, not as Baptists, Presbyterians, or Methodists, but according to their real worth and their love for our Institutions.

3 We despise these annual appeals to National, and Religious prejudices, and the men who urge them on. They are an insult to those to whom they are addressed, and we would as soon be caught in a henroost as doing it, and in our opinion the man who will do one, will the other.

4 We confess to a 'notorious hatred' of red mouthed demagogues, and dictatorial adventurers, and it loses nothing in intensity when such a person is recently imported and ignorant of our political history, and the more so if that person boasts of his tory ancestry This probably accounts for the 'milk in the cocoanut.'

5. As far as we understand it, we are in favor of the bill before the Legislature last winter for the better protection of property bequeathed to Catholic churches. They have the same right to protection as other religious denominations.

6. We are opposed to a division of the school money between Catholics and Protestants.

Lastly—In our intercourse with men on business or politics, we have never stopt to think whether a man was native or foreign, Protestant or Catholic born. We regard them according to their deve[illegible] integrity and ability. This, we think, the true doctrine. It certainly is for catholics and foreigners, for if they listen to these disreputable appeals, they will raise up an opposition to them that cannot be resisted.

'INSUBORDINATION."—Guthries says he removes Collector Bronson for 'insubordination. His offence consists, not in neglect of official duty, for all are loud in his praise, not for incapacity, for he is one of the great men of the country, not that he is not a consistent democrat—Oh, no, none of these, but he refuses to appoint convicts just from prison to office because they profess to stand on the Baltimore Platform! So, tho' he has discharged the duties of his office with unscrupulous fidelity, tho' he has given rare satisfaction in his official relations, tho' he is a pure, upright, independent democrat, he must be disgraced because he is unwilling to be respon sible for the conduct of known ruffians and state prison convicts. This is worse than Van Burenism in its "day of renown," whose greatest offence was in retaining defaulters in office knowing them to be such, and winking at official peculation. The Albany Register well says, that those who have introduced this new test "have got a rough time ahead," before it will be sanctioned.

POST OFFICE PUPPYISM,—It seems that the Press of New Orleans have 'time out of mind' been permitted to enter a private door and obtain their exchanges in advance of the regular delivery. Not having the fear of his August majesty, the democratic Post Master before their eyes, a portion of the Press spoke out in complaint of abuses which had crept in to the Post Office arrangements. For this audacity, the Post Master threatened to shut his private door on them! So the Post Master at Keeseville took occasion to say through his 'dirty free soil sheet' that if whigs treated him pretty well there would be no trouble, or in other words, if whigs approached him with hat in hand and suitable salams, they would be politely treated in return, but if not, then the law would be enforced to the letter, that is to say, he would use his office to subject them to all the annoyance he could!

Fair commentaries on the spirit of the Pierce democracy.

THE DIFFERENCE.—The dem. Judicial convention which resulted in the nomination of Willard, balloted eleven times, and the nomination was then made by one majority; while the Whig convention which nominated Mr. James was unanimous on the first ballot.

The Democratic Senatorial Convention, which presented Senator Rogers, although a "family" meeting, which is supposed to be a unit, tussled and tugged, puffed and blowed from the meridian to the setting sun, and only completed its "labor" on the 21st ballot by a vote of 5 to 4, while the Whig convention was unanimous on the first ballot.

The Democratic State convention was a bear garden, controlled and broken up by "short boys," "shoulder hitters," "salt pointers," "rowdies" and "assassins," while in the Whig convention all was peace, union, and harmony.

POOR DIX.—John A. Dix is a dissappointed man, and he is doomed to a weary and disconsolate life. In 1848 he was the Van Buren candidate for Gov. on the same ticket with Seth M. Gates, an uncompromising abolitionist. Together they traveled, and preached and talked free soil. In 1853 Dix has written the third letter to Dr. Garvin of Georgia, denying every act and word of 1848, and to this degredation has he stooped for the honor of the Mission to France. Poor Dix! what is station, rank, to a man who has forfeited all that is sacred among men? What is life, what are honors to him? Life is a burthen—society a curse. Failing to obtain the mission to France, he has resigned his place as sub-treasurer and goes to Europe for his health and peace of mind. Poor Dix!

ANOTHER TELEGRAPH.—We call attention to the advertisement of the Montreal and New York Printing Telegraph in another column. We are informed that the company is organised and has funds to build the line. It is already built to Plattsburgh, and when completed, we are assured it will not be excelled by any line in the U. S. in point of durability and perfection. The company ask no favors only as they shall prove themselves to deserve them, and when the people along the line shall be satisfied of their ability and good faith, it is to be hoped they will do what they can to forward the enterprise. We bespeak for the undertaking the good will of our readers. It is a work much needed, and the more felt at Keeseville since the failure of the other.

MARCEY'S PATCH.—This is worth reviving—it is old but good. In the days of the 'Regency,' officials had 'stealings in' and expenses paid. Marcy had charged '50cts' for a 'patch' on his pantaloons, and being afterwards a candidate this was considered a 'small business.' Marcy wrote to a friend giving hints for the campaign, very much after the fashion of Cushing to C. Edwards Lester, in which he said, 'say little or nothing, about that unfortunate patch but you cant say too much about my war services. Dwell largely upon them.'—A 'patch' wont save him now, nor his 'war services' either. His 'unvarying knowledge of the rogues in his party' will be the ruin of him.

GEORGIA POLITICS.—The democratic Govr. elect was two years ago a fire-eater, and called the people 'fools and knaves' for going into the Union movement & electing Cobb governor. Now, by the aid of Cobb who was bought over by the promise U. S. Senator, the fire eater is elected Governor, and ergo, the Savannah Republican says, the people are 'fools & knaves.' They are 'fools,' any way, and Cobb and the fire eaters, at least, are no doubt [illegible]

"AN ADDRESS

"To the Irishmen of Clinton County"

Appears in the Plattsburgh Republican of last week, dated at Keeseville and subscribed by "An Adopted Citizen." It occupies about three columns, and from its formidable size we supposed it an annihilator and read it carefully through. We got "our labor for our pains." It is only an argument in favor of the Barnburner ticket—15 or 20 lines only being devoted to "Native Americanism." We reply to this portion of this huge document just out of spite to ourself for the folly of reading so much twaddle.

1. The article indirectly admits that Irishmen have failed to receive from the democracy their share of the emoluments of office, but asks "why they should leave old friends for such a cause?" As Catholic Irish are to a man democrats, they should receive that consideration which their votes entitle them to. The fact shows that the democracy have no real friendship only for their votes.

2. The article says, "Mr. Campbell (post master General,) is the democrat who was defeated in Philadelphia some two years ago by a coalition of whigs and Native Americans."

This assertion is both false and deceptive. Mr. Campbell was one of 5 Judges on a general State ticket—voted for by the whole State and not by Philadelphia alone. His four co-candidates were elected by several thousand majority. The state was largely democratic. Mr. Campbell was a catholic, and was defeated. Now, who defeated him? Was it by "a coalition of whigs and Native Americans," or by members of his own party who neglected to vote for him? The answer is plain, and the writer is ignorant, or dishonest. Probably a little of both. So much for a reply. Now let us "carry the war into Africa."

1. The democrats of Pennsylvania defeated Mr. Campbell, a catholic, when a candidate for Judge.

2. The Native American movements in Philadelphia and N. Y. were set on foot by democrats and not whigs, ostensibly as they then alleged to drive the Irish out of the Police.

3. Virginia and New Hampshire both demare the only states disgraced by statutes abridging the rights of catholics, Those of the former have been obliterated through efforts set on foot by whigs. The latter remain unchanged and will to the end of time.

4. At an election in New Orleans recently the whigs put in nomination a catholic for Dist. Atty. The democrats got out a handbill denouncing him, and called a meeting on the Sabbath to take measures to defeat him, the election being on Monday We published the handbill in the Republican a short time ago.

5. In the Legislature of this State last winter, a bill was pending for the benefit of the catholics. It was introduced, and strenuously urged by a whig Senator. The senate was a tie. It was then in the power of the democrats to have carried the bill in that body, and the House being barnburner by a large majority there could not by possibility be any trouble there if these immaculate saints are such devoted friends of the catholics as they profess The Gazette did not raise its voice in favor of that bill.

6. In the Northern Gazette in June last was published an article entitled "Life in a Canadian College"—said to have been written by A. C. Nelson, and published in Harpers new monthly. In that article if true, can he found every charge preferred by Protestants against the Catholics. It charges the failure of the Canadian Rebellion upon catholics. It charges Catholic priests and teachers with ignorance, and with teaching dogmas that only tend to cramp the mind, and keep it in ignorance, and holds up the schools and religion of catholics to ridicule. The article was on the first page of the sheet. On the second page was an editorial designed to excite a feeling of hostility in the minds of catholics towards whigs!

6. Genl. Storms of N. Y. city present dem, State Prison Inspector, elected 2 years ago, is a member of a Native American Club.

7. The democrats of Essex Co. in 1840 refused to surrender the Co. clerks office to Col. Williams, because he was a foreigner, and it had to be obtained by process of law.

NOTE.—Catholicism and Native Americanism, are different questions. We have treated them together because they are so treated in the article to which this is a reply.

Keep it Before the People.

1. That the present democratic State Officers were elected on the strength of what purported to be a written pledge, circulated along the line of canals on the eve of election, promising a faithful execution of the canal law. This pledge they violated by procuring the destruction of the law as soon as installed in office. Subsequently a portion of them stated under oath that they never signed it, or authorized it.

2. The receipts of canal tolls in 1852 were reduced from $900,000 to $200,000.

3. This same party arrested the Canal Enlargement in 1842 and passed the tax and stop law, whereby the people were taxed to pay damages to contractors, when the canals, if let alone, would have paid for themselves.

4. The same party were guilty of revolution in 1851, when 17 Senators resigned and one run away in a baggage car to defeat the passage of the Canal law.

5. In 1852 they contested the canal amendments inch by inch and caused an Extra Session at an expense of $100,000, and a session of the court of Impeachments, to gratify personal and political malice, at a cost of $40,000.

The 'Short Boy' Editor of the Gazette is quoting Saxe of the Burlington Sentinel in relation to N. Y. Politics. 'Birds of a feather flock together.' In 1848 Saxe was a most decided freesoiler, and was very active in consumating the coalition for the avowed purpose of abolitionizing the Democratic party of Vt. He must be hard pushed.

He has a difficult taste who cannot please himself from the above list. They embrace the leading and best monthlies in the U. S.

☞They are all sent to clubs at reduced rates.

Democratic Exchanges.—We are indebted to the kindness of the Editors of the Albany Argus and Atlas, for an exchange.—These are the leading organs of their respective sections in this state. The Argus is an old and established democratic paper, and for years held the destinies of the democracy of this state in its folds. It is yet a bold and powerful paper as its present course indicates. It brought out Van Buren in 1844, and it will lay out Van Burenism in 1853. The Atlas is young but ardent.—Tho' our position is one of deadly hostility to its faction, we will say that it is conducted with extraordinary zeal and undoubted ability. Its style seems to us to be imbued with too much bitterness, but of that we will not judge, as it is not our province.—Personally, we only wish the Editors and proprietors well, but we cannot extend the compliment to their party. We should say, that the Atlas has just been greatly enlarged, and certainly commends itself to its friends. We like to see a party support its press. It can only prosper by doing so. The advantage is mutual. That is a mean policy which ekes out a mere existence to the party paper—its off of a piece with starving the Minister, and cheating the School Master.

Boasted Democratic Victories.—The elections in Ohio and Pa. were allowed to go by default. Hence, it is of no consequence whether the democratic majorities were 100, or 100,000—they were 30,000 to 40,000. But in Georgia there was a fierce contest. Two years ago, Cobb, dem. was elected by 20,000 majority, and now Johnson, dem. is elected by 202! or in other words, 'by the skin of his teeth!'—Here is the record of this boasted victory of which another such would prove a 'Waterloo defeat!'

GEORGIA ELECTIONS.—The Savannah Republican has received returns from every county in the State of the vote for Governor, and the aggregate majorities foot up 8952 for Jenkins, to 9154 for Johnson, leaving a majority of 202 for the latter.—Of 89 Senators elected, so far as heard from, 43 are Whigs or Union men, and 46 Democrats. To the lower House 56 Whigs or Union men, and 67 Democrats are elected. To Congress five Democrats and three Whigs or Union men are elected.

DOUBTFUL PARAGRAPHS.—A writer in the Plattsburgh Republican says, that a few members of the Free Democracy propose to sell out that party like a 'flock of sheep.'

In the same article, commending the dem. candidate for Assembly, he says, the following is one of that gentleman's 'peculiar expressions:' 'The negro should at least have as fair a trial as a horse!'

Complimentary to somebody, surely.

Quere? Wonder if he expects to persuade the Free Democracy to vote the democratic ticket by such kind of doubtful compliments? If the hopes of the democracy rest upon such frail logic it is past cure.

Democratic.—Soule's new Ministerial coat—the 'compromise' between the Livery and the plain black, imitation of Pierce's policy to unite the party—cost $15,000! and was the joint production of Soule, and a Paris tailor. What do the plain yeomenry of the democracy think of that?

Quere? Is that coat within the spirit and intent of the Baltimore Platform?—There is to be a cabinet meeting on the subject next Sunday.

Mississippi Politics.—There is a coalition in that State between Union whigs and Union Democrats. There is some consistency in that. Foote, the author of the compromise resolutions first offered in the Senate, is a candidate for U. S. Senator, opposed by the whole power of the Administration and the old reprobate of the Washington Union. There is no consistency in that.

☞If the Administration puts forth any scheme not sustained by its Organ at this place, if it changes faster than the Editor can, or if it does not at all times find one obsequious P. M., then there is a universal misapprehension in this section as to the 'cohesive power of public plunder.'

☞Is it true that the post master general has written to Keeseville to know the politics of the Deputy in this post office?

POST CARDS

Senator Rogers.—This gentleman has not been fairly treated during this campaign, and as our object is to see fair play between the democratic factions we take occasion to note some facts which the Organ has neglected to give. In the last number of that paper is an article of three columns, devoted to the demolition of the Senatorial Convention in Schroon, but not a solitary word of commendation for Senator Rogers. Indeed, this gentleman has been entirely neglected thus far, and he and his 'next of kin' have had to fight the battle alone. It may not be generally known, but the fact is, that the Editor of the Organ and his coterie have been deadly hostile to the Senator and his 'family' influence; they tried to defeat his aspirations, and one wanted to be a delegate for that purpose, but failing in that, they 'swore by all that was great and good' they would not vote for him. Hence the silence of the Organ. Under such circumstances we come to the Senator's relief, and give to the public some of the grounds on which he bases his claims to a re-election.

1. He has been a clever fellow, doing no particular hurt, nor any particular good.—He was generally in his seat, and a basswood man could be made to do that. He also drew his pay, and any fool could do that too.

2. Having a personal warfare with one of the old com'rs of loans in this Co., he preferred to have certain other whigs appointed than to have the old ones hold over.—This is is represented as a magnanimous act in the Senator, and it loses nothing in the telling, when in fact it was for mere revenge. If we were to believe the stories which follow the Senator through the district, Essex, Willsborough, and Westport will give him a unanimous vote. This is a libel upon the young whigs of those towns, which will be wiped out on Election day.

3. When he left Albany he designed to run for the Assembly, not supposing he could again get the nomination for the Senate. So he went to work to stir up whig Rechabites and Sons of temperance against Judge Burnet, and tried to have them call a County Temperance convention in advance of the political conventions. Thus he designed to get up a row in the whig ranks and hoped to run in on the strength of it. But his plot was discovered, and he failed. Then by way of commending himself to temperance men, the 'family' put in nomination a rum candidate for Assembly. So much for his temperance principles.

4. He attended the court of Impeachments and drew his pay, but fled the night before the final vote was taken. He was seen during his flight, and he gave as an excuse that he had an attack of the rheumatism in his knee which pained him so he had to leave. It was noticed, however, that he frequently put his hand to his head, and not to his knee, and that he looked haggard, and wild. He also forget to limp when he walked. It was supposed by some that during the trial of Mather an idea had struck him and hence the frequent motion of the hand across the eyes and forehead.—However, he left in time to avoid a vote, and now asks hunkers to vote for him. Whether they will, we dont know. This is at least a stronger argument than the Gazette has put forth for him, and the Senator may thank us if he is elected.

5 To hunkers he presents the Baltimore Platform, and to free soilers, the Buffalo Platform. Which he stands on and which he spits on is not known.

6. He is also particularly commended to barnburners in a performance which presents in a strong light the omnipotent power of the 'family' that rules the democracy of Essex county. The papers for the appointment of a young and worthy hunker democrat to the office of Post Master in a little village in this county were all made out and only awaited transmission to be complete. At this opportune moment the Senator arrived at Washington, and one of the 'family' substituted. It was lucky certainly, and of course a mere accident, like that which presented two Senatorial delegates from attending the Senatorial Convention, and the subsitution of two of the 'family' in their stead.

But we forbear, trusting the Organ will do its duty next week. We trust also not to be any longer charged with partiality towards the hunkers. We go for a fair field and a fair fight.

OUR OPINION SOUGHT.—A new ticket selected from all the others, having upon it the barnburner candidates for the State Treasurer and Canal Commissioner, appeared in the Rochester papers the other day, which the Pierce Organ here says, is 'a rebuke to whigs and adamantines, and upon which he desires to have us express ourself.' We give our opinion freely, and it is this; that it was a barnburner trick, got up to create excitement and jealousy, 'but their ability to work further mischief has been destroyed by the exposure of their past treachery.'

Is our neighbor satisfied?

The Free Democracy.—This party held a convention at Elizabethtown on the 11th of October but their proceedings have only come to hand as we are about going to Press; if they had come in time they should have had a place at length in our columns.—They are frank, and plain spoken, and in these days when the country is flooded with the shuffling and double dealing of the Pierce democracy, these bold, outspoken sentiments are refreshing. Willard Bell of Jay, was nominated for the Assembly, Lucius D. Nowell of Jay, for Justice of Sessions, and Samuel Warner of Crownpoint, for Supt. of Poor.

Be Warned in Time.—The barnburners are spending money like water furnished by the government officials, and if whigs save the State they must POLL EVERY VOTE. 'Short boys' are perambulating the State in every direction, and no efforts or expense will be spared to carry the State.

(For the Republican.)

In the Northern Gazette of the 27th inst. is an article under the head of 'Schroon Bolters,' in which the writer says:—

"But this demonstration would not look so bad, had its authors selected any other gentleman for candidate than Hon. Oliver Keese. We are not acquainted with Mr. Keese's opinions of Gen. Pierce and his policy; but his 'antecedents'—those things which Adamantines rake up so greedily—are anything but according to the views of men pledging themselves, like the Schroon convention people, to the support of the Clinton 'Parlor' ticket and its platform.—In 1847 Mr. Keese was essentially a Barn burner, and acted in the Utica Convention of June of that year, as the delegate from this county; and if we trace his course to last fall we shall find that he then declined voting for Gen Pierce."

Mr. Keese supposes his name has been called in question and his course spoken of only for party purposes; yet, he is not willing the National Republican party should suffer, or the free soil party gain by a misrepresentation. Mr. Keese has been out of politics mostly since the democratic party passed the present free trade advalorem tariff. He did not agree with the free soilers at Utica, and abandoned them after they made the Abolition Platform at Buffalo, and has not voted their ticket or agreed with them since. He voted last fall for the Gen, Pierce Electors and for Col. Ireland, because they were neither free soil or Seward men, as he supposed. He has been upright in supporting the constitution according to the intention of the makers of it, and downright in denouncing all who would obstruct or refuse to aid its free course.—He is in favor of the Compromise Measures and the Fugitive slave law, and would now turn out and shoulder his gun to enforce them if it were necessary.

I think the above facts will justify the democrats of Schroon against the charge of inconsistency, and prevent other people from believing, and the Northern Gazette from crediting its own lie.

FAIR PLAY.

A "RIHT SMART" CHAP.—A "short boy" signing himself "Essex," tells some pretty "tall" stories in the Atlas of the 22d. One or two of his bare-faced lies we wish to correct. We quote the following in relation to getting subscribers to the Argus:

His (Nash) success has been so limited among Democrats that he has received "material aid" from both "silver greys" and "woolly heads."

We pronounce the above an unmitigated falsehood, and the base hireling who promulgates it is aware of the fact if he knows any thing about it. We never asked a woolly head' to subscribe for the Argus in our life, nor a 'silver grey' either, but one gentleman who acts with the latter party voluntarily subscribed, and he is the only Whig on the list we got. Neither did we offer as an inducement for persons to take the Argus that we would pay the postage, as in the case of the Atlas. Those who subscribed for the Argus needed no bribes; they are democrats and read democratic papers in preference to those that were brought into existence by an abolition bolt.

The statement that the Gazette prints 400 campaign papers, is, as secretary Gauthrie would say, entirely gratuitous, and the Editor will undoubtedly correct such an unqualified "whopper" at an early day. The other statements of this mendacious "individual" are too silly to need refutation. JOHN NASH.

Pierce's Foreign Appointees.

A DISGRACEFUL PICTURE.—A Paris letter writer thus characterizes the new foreign attaches of American Embasies, sent out by the present Administration:

"There is quite a group of new American appointees here, on their way to their various destinations. I am sorry to say that the group does not compare, to advantage, with the knots of American gentlemen and travelers that collect in the court yard of Meurice's Hotel. Its apparent characteristics are a total ignorance of any European language; a zeal for propagandism, whether timely or not; the holding of ultra opinions; a taste for brandy and water; a love for tobacco in its worst form, and a seemingly uncontrollable desire to swear. I cannot doubt there are sterling qualities in reserve; but regret that an observer's first impression of those gentlemen is so likely to be unfavorable."

The people should ponder such facts long and well, and we hope in 1856 they will hurl this set of "Goths and Vandals" from power with the besom of destruction.

☞Among the most gratifying incidents of the campaign is the return of the Whigs of Monroe county to their long cherished principles and faith. It is refreshing to read the harmonious proceedings of a Convention composed of sound, reliable Whigs. Faction spent its force, happily, in the bolt of 1851. What of 'odds and ends' there was left of it fizzled out in an abortive attempt to get up a mixed ticket.

Nothing could more emphatically indicate the sentiment of the County Convention than the spontaneous vote cast in favor of SAMUEL G. ANDREWS, with whom we have stood 'shoulder to shoulder,' politically, for thirty years. Upon the declension of Mr. ANDREWS, the Convention, with equal unanimity, nominated WILLIAM S. BISHOP, 'another of the same sort,' who was a zealous laborer in the Whig vineyard even before Rochester had sidewalks or lamp districts, and has never wavered in faith or faltered in duty.—Albany Journal.

From the N. Y. Daily Times.

"The removal of the Collector will invigorate the Administration party in this State."

True, but not the whole truth. That removal will also 'invigorate' the 'National Democrats,' who find themselves in the position that Whigs occupied in the days of 'Capt. Tyler.'

The removal of Collector BRONSON was a blunder, aggravated by the still greater blunder of entering into a correspondence which gives Mr. BRONSON a decided advantage. The Hard-Shell Ticket is many thousand votes stronger by this removal.—[Albany Journal.

WHIGS:—Are you ready? Have you prepared a canvass of votes in your town? Are you prepared to give a full vote?—With the cheering prospects before us, it is expected that whigs will take pleasure in aiding their friends, and doing something to retrieve the character of the State.

Past, Present, and Future of Politics.

1. The Democratic Factions.—The barnburners complain that we show partiality to the hunkers. That is true but it is no new thing. More than two years ago we stated in the columns of the Republican, that the hunkers embraced in their faction the talent and virtue of that party, and the barnburners the selfish, and unprincipled.—We are therefore only acting upon our long cherished sentiments, not that we approve of the particular tenets of that faction, but they are men of ability, integrity, and above all, frank and honest. Their views are known; they can be relied on; what they profess they will do. An uncompromising Abolitionist told us only a day or two since that as between those two factions he had far more respect for the hunkers than for the barnburners, because, as he pointedly remarked, 'you know where to find them, which is better than to be in the hands of those whose principles are for sale.'—Hence, our course, and hence the course of every man of principle in the State.

2. Souvenirs.—The Pierce party is but the revival of the Old Van Buren dynasty—the revival of 'truck and dicker' politics, the restoration of Van Burens, Swartouts, and Hoyts, of moral and political bankrupts, of high handed outrages, of cliques, cabals, and intrigues, supremacy of the spoils, low and demoralizing motives,—of the same old VanBuren party that brought the country to the brink of ruin by its imbecility and rottenness, that disregarded decency, law, and justice to accomplish its ends, that was for free trade and direct taxation; whose watchwords were 'down with manufactures,' 'down with wages,' 'laborers should eat no moat,' 'people expect too much from government;'—that same Old Regency that went against universal suffrage, and the election of Justices and the choice of Presidential electors by the people, that was cold and selfish, making politics a trade, able only in party tactics, knowingly keeping defaulters in office, always opposed to the Canals and to Banks unless they could be surfeited with the spoils,—that old enemy of honest men, the vile traducers of our greatest and best statesmen—this old hated party is revived under the auspices of Pierce, and finds itself once more in full power. It is controlled by unprincipled demagogues and fighting bullies. It is adding infamy to disgrace, and should be opposed by patriots everywhere, of every nation, creed and color. Like the deadliest poison it is eating out the very vitals—the virtues and patriotism of the country—and the people of all parties should neither eat nor sleep, till they drive this hated party from power.—All minor considerations, should give way to this one end.

3. Re-organizatinn of parties.—The probabilities of such a result are talked of by the people and written upon by the press. The whig party is said by some to be dead. The Pierce party has as much as it can do to stand alone. Politics are certainly chaotic, and party ties are mightily loosened. According to our own opinion, however, this is not the time to form new political relations, if ever. There are two great issues at stake in this election. One between the friends and enemies of the Canals, and the reform of abuses in State Legislation.—The other between the Old Van Buren dynasty, represented by the Pierce Administration, and the Hunkers. Whigs should stand shoulder to shoulder in the present state contest. They can save the state if they will. No re-organizations, no co-alitions, should be talked of, or agreed to now. It might endanger all. The Hunkers may fly like cowards and leave the country to the tender mercies of Van Burenism. But if they fight it out boldly, they will rally their friends all over the country and in Congress next winter they will organize.—There will be whigs there also from all sections of the U. S. Opinions will be fully expressed, consultations will be had, views will be compared, and then will be the time, if ever, for leading off with a fresh organization of parties.

In the mean time let whigs rally to the great work in hand of redeeming the Empire State from the most corrupt and reckless set of men that ever disgraced her councils.

Dem. Senatorial convention—more secrets—more "short boy" rascality.—The Northern Gazette says: "Every one yielded the right of Warren to make the nomination, but the delegates from that county wavered so much as to lose its weight.—☞At one time it went so far as to throw itself in the balance for a Clinton County gentleman. Everything was upright and fair, and the nomination of Rogers was fixed upon only when it was found impossible to unite on a gentleman from Warren."

We are told by democrats, and by delegates to that convention, that this is a tissue of falsehoods and designed misrepresentations, that in fact, the Warren delegates were agreed, and had their candidate with them, that they never 'wavered' for a moment, that they steadily opposed Rogers, and only went for a 'Clinton Co. gentleman' to defeat him, that the impossibility of uniting on a 'gentleman from Warren' arose, not as the Editor of the Gazette designs to convey the impression, from any want of Union on the part of the Warren delegates, but from the perseverance with which the 'family' stuck to their 'man Friday.' One of the coterie of the Gazette voted steadily for a 'Clinton Co. gentleman,' with a premeditated design, and in pursuance of previous threats to defeat Rogers. But this is not all—the 'family' has given out among one class of friends that the candidate from Warren was unfit in point of ability and respectability, and they speak of him in the most diminutive terms. To temperance men they give another reason, on which they lay great stress—to them These things are not designed 'for the public ear,' but coming to us on good authority they shall go to the public and to Warren Co. in particular, that the people may know that 'short boy games' are practiced in in 'high life as well as in low.' It is only of a piece with another game by the same men, carried on for years, that of acting and voting with a party which adopted the motto of 'free soil, free speech, free men, FREE TRADE—but at home talking Protection, and raising the black flag of Texas annexation.—'All things to all men' goes well till exposed, and then it looks to an honest people, forbidding, disgusting, and ridiculous.

WHAT IS A DEMOCRAT?—We have before us the Independent Democrat (Abolition) established at Champlain, in Clinton Co. and in its ticket the name of Jese Gay for Dist. Atty. It says of the individuals on that ticket and why they are there:

1. Because they are Anti Slavery men; they are personally opposed to Slavery, in favor of the repeal of the fugitive slave law, and against the extension of slavery.

2. They stand upon our ticket the embodiment of opposition and hatred of slavery in all its dimensions—opposition to the recognition of slavery by the general government, in the enactment of the fugitive slave law of 1850—and opposed to the continued sanction of slavery by the government of the United States.

Is Jesse Gay a democrat or an abolitionist? Is he or is he not in favor of the Repeal of the Fugitive Slave Law? Does he, or does he not stand on the Baltimore Platform? Does he, or does he not approve the Inaugural of President Pierce? From 1841 to 1852 he professed to entertain the sentiments imputed to him by the Independent Democrat. In 1852 he professed to endorse the Baltimore Platform. In 1853 he sought the nomination of Dist. Atty. as a Pierce democrat. Are the democrats, or are the abolitionists deceived? Is such a man worthy of the confidence of the voters of Clinton?

"Schroon did not make Mr. Rogers a Senator, and SHE CANNOT NOW UNMAKE HIM."—[The Northern Gazette.

This quotation is a specimen of a three column article on the Schroon Convention. It is in substance, that 'you old democrats of Schroon are a set of fools, that should not have moved without the consent of the editor of the Administration Organ, but then, you are of no account—we dare you to do your worst—you have never effected an election and you cant now—so you may go to——Pot.'

"Later from Schroon."—The Northern Gazette says, that after the late Senatorial Convention in that town published in the Republican last week, Senator Rogers was there—that another meeting was held, and Senator Rogers made a speech, and everything was all right again. This is partly true—Senator Rogers was there and made a speech, but when he got through the meeting gave three cheers for Judge Keese.

The Ruling Passion.—Tho' Judge Keese was nominated without his consent, or knowledge, tho' immaterial for whom the people of Schroon cast their votes, thus rendering any allusion to him uncalled for, tho' a gentleman in all his intercourse, tho' affable, courteous, and respectful in all his allusions to others, and conscientious in all his opinions, the editor of the Northern Gazette could not refrain from an attack upon him, as he does upon all who are conceived to be in the remotest degree in the way of his interest, or wishes. We have come to the conclusion that it is unfair to compare him either to a Jackass, or a puppy, both being his superiors.

NO HELP FOR IT.—Notwithstanding the complaints of the barnburners, we give another article from the N. Y. Mirror upon Mr. Watson hunker candidate for State Treasurer. We also give a synopsis of the hunker argument in his favor: 1. An excellent citizen and a constant democrat.—2. His services in the cause of Agriculture, and his learned report to the State Ag. So on the local history, soil, products, the developement of the resources of Northern N. Y. &c. 3. His location. Northern N. Y. has not had a State officer under the new constitution, and this section of the State has interests that might be greatly advanced by an officer acquainted with our wants.

These are rare claims to a local vote, and we advise the barnburners to show their manliness by voting for him to a man. Who is Francis Seger? We dont know him, but Mr. Watson, we do know, and but that we are a whig we should vote for him. He certainly deserves a strong local vote, and we hope the democracy will show their good sense by giving it to him.

TOO BAD.—The Editor of the Pierce and Van Buren Organ at this place says, we are publishing 'absurd falsehoods' about him If so we are certainly sorry. We dont mean to publish 'falsehoods' about anybody if we know it. But he dont say what those 'falsehoods' are, save that he leaves it to be inferred that they are efforts to make him out a 'Lord' and a branch of 'nobility.'—Now this is too bad—it is the 'unkindest cut of all.' God forgive us if we ever tried to make out any such thing. Pshaw! He boasts of Lord Nelson as his Uncle, and this we have repeated as a 'falsehood' of his own. Why, my dear Maurice, how could you be so unkind as to so misrepresent us in so tender a point? If you will specify we will attend to your case to your satisfaction. We say we have stated nothing but the truth, and if you dare to specify and deny, we will prove what we have asserted.

☞"BEAR'S OIL HAS RIZ."—Our 'd——l' was viewing himself in a magnifying glass the other day, when he discovered a hair on his chin. Since then he has purchased a doz. bottles of bear's oil, a bottle of cologne and a strengthening plaster, and he bids fair to have a "leetle" the tallest pair of whiskers that can be scared up by any "d——l" in the State.

WARREN COUNTY.—A business letter from Warren county under date of Oct. 19, says. 'The whigs of this Co. held their nominating Convention to day, and nominated a first rate ticket. It was all harmony and the prevailing spirit seemed to be to make a ticket that would take a full whig vote.'

—Martin Grover, the Barnburner candidate for Attorney General, was heard to say, a few days since, 'I don't suppose I can be elected under any circumstances, nor on any ticket; but I think my nomination will be a good advertisement for my

What Whigs Labor For.

We labor to rescue the Canals from the hands of their enemies, the restoration of the State to whig hands, the reform of abuses and corruption in legislation, the retrenchment of the expense of legislation the union, harmony and prosperity of the whig party, and a whig President in 1856. These are certainly worthy objects, to which every whig can heartily respond. In view of these desirable ends, whigs can well afford to make one more effort. With a prospect of success whigs ought and we doubt not will cheerfully do what they can to secure it.

ON A VISIT.—Dennis B. Gaffney, an Irish politician of some note in this vicinity at least, dropt in here to see his old friends yesterday, all by accident of course. For this kindness it was the most natural thing in the world for the Post Master to pay his bill, as he is flush now, since he has Uncle Sam's big pockets to dip into. After this unexpected generosity, how could he refuse to run out and see that his countrymen were all going the barnburner ticket? Of course he could not refuse so reasonable a request. What a fortunate accident all round—how opportune! We had not heard that the rights of adopted citizens or the catholic religion were in danger, this fall, but they must be. Pshaw! We only desire to live to see the time when adopted citizens and catholics will spurn these annual appeals to their prejudices, and scorn the demagogues and emissaries who make them. We shall never ask them to vote the whig ticket in any such contemptible manner, but when they become perfectly disgusted with these stale and sickening appeals, and find out their utter hypocrisy and shallowness, and wish to vote the whig ticket on important State and National issues, knowing that their rights will be sacredly protected, and truly tolerated and best promoted by so doing, we shall be happy to receive them, and not till then.

INFORMATION WANTED.—Senator Rogers and his 'keeper' have been on a 'tramp' recently, and we infer that the Senator has got over the 'rheumatiz.' They were here a day or two, and met with unbounded success. They spent about an hour and a half laboring with a Silver Grey that would as soon take poison as vote for Rogers, and if they do as well every where he will be triumphantly elected—to stay at Whallonsburgh & take care of his sheep. They were closeted several times with the Short Boy editor, and others, but all that has come to light is the huge article in the Gazette on the Schroon Convention, and that Rogers 'dont wish to represent an ungrateful constituency'—so says a democrat whose bowels were touched by this pathetic appeal. Rogers got loose & went up the river from here and has not since been heard from. Information of his where outs will be thankfully rec'd, by his anxious friends.

NOTE.—Our friends up the river are no doubt aware that, wormwood steeped in salt and vinegar is good for the 'rheumatiz,' and we trust they will remember the Good Samaritan if the fugitive suffers a relapse of that painful disease.

☞The Administration seems to think that the chief end of government is to dole alms to political starvlings. It is haunted with the idea that its existence depends upon the nicety with which it spoons out its patronage. Its mind seems to be running upon nothing but pap and pap continually. The consequence it attaches to pap is positively ludicrous. It believes of it, as Lord Peter in the Tale of the Tub, believed of bread "Bread," said Lord Peter, "is the staff of life. Bread comprises within itself the essence of beef and mutton, and veal and partridge, and pheasant, and wood cock, and grouse, and quail, and plum-pudding, and custard." There is nothing like this pap in the eyes of the Administration. It is the very elixir of political life.—Courier and Enquirer.

Is there anybody about these days who would like to buy Gen JOHN A. DIX late Sub-Treasurer, and Ambassador in expectation? No doubt he could be purchased at a reasonable rate, whether on his own valuation or that of the public. Perhaps there are some who pity his disappointment in not getting the French mission. Perhaps there are some who blame Mr. Pierce for not keeping his word with him. Perhaps, too, there are some who admire his letters to Mr. Garvin, and appreciate their patriotic devotion to the salvation of the Union a la Legree. It is an old story, that of men selling themselves to the devil and getting bitterly cheated in the bargain.

THE MARRIAGE STATE;

Shall Happiness and Health, or Misery and Sickness, attend it?

MOST STARTLING CONSIDERATIONS!

Reflections for the Thoughtful.

Strange that countless human beings exist and drag through life as do the beasts of the field, or the insects of the earth, evincing no more thought or reflection than though the noble faculties of mind were not vouchsafed to them.

Many such are husbands and fathers, upon whom are dependent the health, the well-being, and the happiness of a confiding and affectionate wife, with perhaps a family of children.

HOW OFTEN IT HAPPENS THAT THE

WIFE LINGERS FROM YEAR TO YEAR

In that pitiable condition as not even for one day to feel the happy and exhilorating influence incident to the enjoyment of health.

She may not be an invalid confined to her bed, or even to her room; as her pride, ambition and energy induce and nerve her to take personal charge of her household, even when her health will not admit of it; but she is nevertheless perceptibly sinking from day to day, and always ailing.

Thus, day after day, and month after month transpire. Her health daily sinks, till finally even the hope of recovery no longer remains. And thus

THE BLOOMING BRIDE,

But a few years ago in the flush of health and youth, and buoyancy of spirits, rapidly, and apparently inexplicably, becomes a feeble, sickly, debilitated wife, with frame emaciated, nerves unstrung, spirits depressed, countenance bearing the impress of suffering, and an utter physical and mental prostration.

Sometimes this deplorable change may and does arise from organic or constitutional causes. But oftener, by far oftener, to gross and inexcusable ignorance of the simplest and plainest rules of health as connected with the marriage state, the violation of which entails disease, suffering and misery, not only to the wife, but often

"UNTO THE THIRD AND FOURTH GENERATION,"

Transmitting CONSUMPTION, SCROFULA, HYPOCHONDRIA, INSANITY, GOUT, KING'S EVIL, and other diseases, as a

DREADFUL INHERITANCE

from the Parents.

And must this continue? Shall we be wise in all that concerns the cattle of our fields, our horses, our sheep, our cows, our oxen, the nature and character of the soil we possess, the texture and quality of our goods and merchandise; but in all that concerns ourselves as human beings, with human functions and passions, subject to great derangement, involving our future peace and happiness—in all that concerns the health and welfare of the wife of our affections, and the mother of our children; in all that concerns the mental and physical well being of those children, we should be immersed in the darkest and most

BENIGHTED IGNORANCE,

AS CULPABLE AS INEXCUSABLE!

How long shall this ignorance prevail so productive of its bitter fruits? How long shall the wife and mother be ignorant of the nature, character and causes of the various womb and sexual complaints, embittering her days by suffering—suffering often prolonged to years, eventuating in a complication of diseases utterly and hopelessly incurable? Shall we for ever close our eyes to the results of physiological science by which we may arrive at an understanding of ourselves as men and women, subject to serious life-long enduring diseases, and perpetuating them to our children.

LET EVERY WIFE AND HUSBAND PONDER!

No husband or wife need be ignorant of what concerns them most to know to secure their health and happiness. That knowledge is contained in a little work entitled

CONCURRENT RESOLUTION PROPOSING AN AMENDMENT TO THE CONSTITUTION.

Resolved, (if the Senate concur,) That the following amendment be proposed to the constitution of this state and referred to the legislature to be chosen at the next general election of senators, and be published for three months previous to making such choice, in pursuance to the provisions of the first section of the thirteenth article, of said constitution.

Substitute for section three of article seven the following:

After paying the said expenses of collection, superintendence and repairs of the canals, and the sums appropriated by the first and second sections of this article, there shall be appropriated and set apart in each fiscal year out of the surplus revenues of the canals, as a sinking fund, a sum sufficient to pay the interest as it falls due, and extinguish the principal within eighteen years of any loan made under this section, and if the said sinking fund shall not be sufficient to redeem any part of the principal at the stipulated times of payment, or to pay any part of the interest of such loans as stipulated, the means to satisfy any such deficiency shall be procured on the credit of the said sinking fund. After complying with the foregoing provisions, there shall be paid annually out of said revenues into the treasury of the state two hundred thousand dollars, to defray the necessary expenses of government. The remainder shall, in each fiscal year, be applied to meet appropriations for the enlargement and completion of the canals mentioned in this section, until the said canals shall be completed. In each fiscal year thereafter the remainder shall be disposed of in such manner as the legislature may direct, but shall at no time be anticipated or pledged for more than one year in advance. The legislature shall annually, during the next four years, appropriate to the enlargement of the Erie, the Oswego, the Cayuga and Seneca canals, and to the completion of the Black River and Genesee Valley canals, and for the enlargement of the locks of the Champlain canal, whenever from dilapidation or decay it shall be necessary to rebuild them, a sum not exceeding two millions two hundred and fifty thousand dollars. The remainder of the revenues of the canals for the current fiscal year in which such appropriation is made, shall be applied to meet such appropriation; and if the same shall be deemed insufficient, the legislature shall at the same session provide for the deficiency by loan. The legislature shall also borrow one million and five hundred thousand dollars to refund to the holders of the canal revenue certificates issued under the provisions of chapter four hundred and eighty-five of the laws of the year one thousand eight hundred and fifty-one, the amount received into the treasury thereon. But no interest to accrue after July first, one thousand eight hundred and fifty-five, shall be paid on such Certificates. The provisions of section twelve of this article requiring every law for borrowing money to be submitted to the people, shall not apply to the loans authorized by this section. No part of the revenues of the canals or of the funds borrowed under this section, shall be paid or applied upon or in consequence of any alleged contract made under chapter four hundred and eighty-five of the laws of the year one thousand eight hundred and fifty-one, except to pay for work done or materials furnished prior to the first day of June, one thousand eight hundred and fifty-two. The rates of toll on persons and property transported on the canal shall not be reduced below those for the year one thousand eight hundred and fifty-two, except by the canal board, with the concurrence of the legislature.—All contracts for work or materials on any canal, shall be made with the person who shall offer to do or provide the same at the lowest price, with adequate security for their performance.

Henry's Invigorating Cordial,

PURELY VEGETABLE IN ITS COMPOSITION.

This invaluable Cordial, is extracted from Herbs and Roots, which have been found after years of experience by the most skillful Physicians, to be possessed of qualities most beneficial in the diseases for which it is recommended, and hence whilst it is presented to the public, as an effectual remedy it is also known to be of that character on which reliance may be placed as to its safety. It assures Impotency, Hoemorrhages, Misguided Sterility, Menstruation, or Suppression of the Menses, Fluor Albus or Whites, or for arising from any cause, such as weakness from sickness, where the patient has been confined to bed for some time, for Females after Confinement, Abortion or Miscarriage, this Cordial cannot be excelled in its salutary effects; or in fulness of Muscular Energy, Irritability, Physical Prostration, Seminal Weakness, Palpitation of the Heart, Indigestion, Sluggishness, Decay of the Procreative Functions, Nervousness, &c., where a TONIC Medicine is required, it will be found equal, if not superior to any Compound ever used.

DEBILITY

TO FEMALES

Henry's Invigorating Cordial, is one of the most invaluable Medicines in the many Complaints to which Females are subject. It assists nature to brace the whole system, check excesses, and creates renewed health and happiness. Less suffering, disease and unhappiness among Ladies would exist, where they generally to adopt the use of this Cordial. Ladies who are debilitated by those obstructions which females are liable to, are restored by the use of a bottle or two, to bloom and to vigor.

YOUNG MEN,

That solitary practice so fatal to the existence of man and it is too young who are most apt to become its victims, from an ignorance of the danger to which they subject themselves, causes

NERVIOUS DEBILITY.

Weakness of the System, and Premature Decay. Many of you may now be suffering, misled as to the cause or source of disease. To those, then, who by excesses have brought on themselves Premature Impotency, Involuntary Seminal Emissions, Weakness and Shrivelling of the Genital Organs, Nervous Affection, or any other consequence of unrestrained indulgence of the sexual passions, occasioning the necessity of remembering the felicities of lessening both mental and bodily capacity, Hold! Henry's Invigorating Cordial a Medicine that is purely Vegetable, will add much to restore those important functions to a healthy standard will prove of service to you. It possesses rare virtues, is a general remover of disease, and strengthener of the system.

AS A TONIC MEDICINE,

it is unsurpassed. We do not place this Cordial on a footing with quack medicines, and, as is customary, append a long list of Recommendations Certificates, &c., beginning with "Hear what the Preacher says," and such like; it is not necessary, for "Henry's Invigorating Cordial," only needs a trial to prove that it will accomplish all we say.

THE GENUINE "HENRY'S INVIGORATING CORDIAL"

is put up in 8 oz. Panuel Bottles, and is easily recognized by the Manufacturer's signature on the label of each Bottle (to counterfeit which is forgery) as well as his private Seal on the cork of each Bottle.

FRAUD!

ALL who want AXES of the real COLLINS & Co. make should be particular to notice the stamps, as there are various counterfeits and imitations stamped Collins and labelled much like ours, which are fraudulently sold in some parts of the United States as our manufacture. They are made in different parts of the country by various axe-makers, and are generally of very inferior quality. The genuine Collins axes, which have acquired such an extensive reputation, are invariably stamped "COLLINS & CO. HARTFORD," and each axe has a printed label with my signature.—It is now more than TWENTY-FIVE YEARS since we commenced the business with the stamp of "Collins & Co. Hartford," and I do not know of any other axe-maker by the name of Collins in the United States.

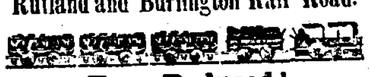
LEANDER BABBIT'S TRUSS OFFICE



The latest and most approved Trusses; Female Supporters; Do. with shoulder braces attached; spinal elevators for curvature of the spine and projection of the shoulder blade. Suspensary abdominal braces. This instrument so constructed that it not only acts the part of shoulder braces, but carries the heft of the ladies' skirts on their shoulders; and, hence remedies the evil consequent to carrying them on the hips and sides. For gentlemen, it not only serves for a shoulder brace, but acts the part of suspenders.

As to the importance and usefulness of the above named instruments, and their beneficial effects, their peculiar mechanism and superiority over other instruments of the same name, I need not say anything. They are to well known by physicians, and the multitude of persons that have had occasion to test them in this section of country, that I deem it not important to introduce a long catalogue of certificates; yet I have abundant evidence in my possession to justify me in all I claim or affirm, and deem it a privilege to give references to any who wish to make inquiries.

Office at Keeseville in the building on the corner of Main and Front street, opposite the Bank, up stairs.

Ladies will be waited on at my dwelling by Mrs. Babbit, whose experience in adjusting braces and supporters qualifies her to give perfect satisfaction. 482—3m

JOHN S. HOWE, Agent.
Burlington, August 1853.

To A. C. Nelson, Editor of the Short Boy Gazette, a recent Emigrant from Canada East.

SIR;—Your lengthy "castigations" of the Democracy of Schroon, like your honor on a former occasion, have recently come to town begging. You call us "Bolters." Ma foi, tu vous fais tort avec cette invective—to speak it in your own native tongue.—Preparez vos efforts, et vous defendz bien, sur qce de notre cote je n'epargneai rien. But this language may not be understood by you, on account of your recent familiarity with the Provincial, or vulgarly speaking Canuck language, so I may as well talk to you in plain English. We would like to know who gave you authority to anathematize the Democracy of this town for 'Bolting' from your bastard bolting ticket? Your "castigations" of our Democracy are preceded by a ticket which you falsely name, "The Regular Democratic State Ticket." Said ticket is not headed by the venerable name of Geo W. Clinton, nor does it contain the name of that honorable yet persecuted citizen, John C. Mather. The name of Cooley, Watson, Brady and Bennett are not to be found in your spurious ticket or columns, except for the purpose of slander, for which we understand you are particularly famous. —so far as your limited ability and Canuck language enable you. You beg of us to support your paper, your ticket, and yourself, and like a foolish upstart threaten us with "castigations"—boasting that "as Schroon did not make Mr. Rogers a Senator, she cannot now unmake him." As for you, your ticket, your principles and your paper—we, the Democracy of Schroon, "will have none of you—nor any part thereof." 'Tis true that soon after your escape from Canada, we extended to you the open and liberal hand of fellowship and placed you in the Editorial chair, and had nature, in the least degree, but lent us her aid—as we did you our money, we should have made a man of you, but our efforts, like our money expended in buying our Type and Press, have utterly failed. and have turned our curse—our scourge. Pigmies are Pigmies still though perched on Alps," and a Canuck is a Canuck still, though perched on Editorial chair. And 'tis seldom that a traitor to his country—born of a traitor—ever changes his nature, or that he will not betray every party and principle, to which he may ever belong.

You say that we have been led astray by certain Whig, which caused us to call a Convention in conjunction with our War en Co. brethren, and that the proceedings of the Convention of the 17th inst. were annulled by a meeting and the eloquence of Col. A. L. Ireland on the succeeding day, the 18th,—that the highminded Col. and our "trading agent for somebody" "strenuously opposed the demonstrations against Mr. Rogers at the Convention." It is idle for any one to follow a vicious minded person, to deny his false assertions, of which the foregoing declarations respecting the Col. and the agent are living specimens, as no person at our Convention on the 17th opposed the said demonstrations, and both for your edification and that of the public, allow me to give a history of the Convention held at Schroon the 17th inst., and also the meeting on the next day, that you may better judge whether the Democracy of Schroon are groping in the mists of error, or walking upright in the brilliant sunshine of true Democracy. At the Convention on the 17th inst. there were delegates from several counties present. There was a large concourse of delegates and spectators present. Col. Ireland the patron and mortgagee of our Canadian friend, was appointed as chairman of a committee on resolutions, and without further ceremony or consultation, the Col. drew up the resolutions as published, read them to the Convention made an eloquent address in a proper "esprit du corps," to the effect that no true democrat could consistently support the present nominee for the State Senate in this District, and the Convention unanimously adopted the Col.'s Resolutions. (A wandering agent was present and made some remarks about locating our candidate in Warren County, but did not 'strenuously urge Mr. Rogers claim' as the Canuck seems to have been informed.) And now I will ask, why did Col. Ireland draw up and advocate those resolutions, unless they were the true expression of his feelings and sentiments? Our "Recent Emigrant" says he was seduced by a Whig,—and led astray with the rest of the Democracy in this region. Sir Emigrant—we do not thank you for the insult, and unless you pay the Col. inside thirty days, the mortgage shall be foreclosed and your infamous type and press scattered to the winds—and your own "insignificant" self sent forth, like Nebuchaduezzar of old, howling to the breezes. After the Convention adjourned the Col. met Mr. Rogers very unexpectedly, who had just arrived in the stage. On invitation Mr. Rogers accompanied the Col. over to the Isle La Belle, and tarried there till the next day—when he returned in company with the Col. who earnestly enquired "if any thing had been said by him the previous night very bad about Mr. Rogers?" And on being told that nothing very bad further than the opinion that Mr. Rogers was not the proper candidate for us to support, had been said by him, the Col. seemed quite enthusiastic and announced that a meeting must be held on that night to hear Mr. Rogers speak for himself. The Col. asserted that he had been deceived about Mr. Rogers, in that he had been informed that Senator Rogers was a barnburner freesoiler, and going to support the 'short boy' 'rowdy' ticket, as published by his treacherous mortgagor, all which he declared was false—for Mr. Rogers told him so with his own mouth. At the appointed hour a few of the villagers assembled, (most of whom were or had been in the employment of the Col.) and were edified by a discourse from the Col., followed by some remarks from Mr Rogers, who then and there promised and agreed to, and with the persons present, that he had and would support the 'No. 6 Parlor Ticket,' if you please to call it so. And then on motion of the Col., four persons only of those present voted to sustain Mr. Rogers at the next election. The rest, 'Vice-President' and all, remained in dumb and gloomy silence. The vote was then put to sustain the ticket published in the Argus, headed 'Geo. W. Clinton,' and the whole audience responded 'Aye,' with free hearts and willing minds. But our Canadian friend has doomed this ticket and all its 'pendants,' to be dragged along to eternal 'insignificance.'

What then will become of Mr. Rogers, who has attached himself to that fated 'Parlor Ticket, No. 6,' and is of course doomed to eternal 'insignificance?' To what form or shape will our famous Canuck transform our unfortunate Senator? Can it be possible that our Senator must be degenerated into the detestible shape of a Canuck Editor, and thus doubly curse our unfortunate democracy with two double distilled insignificancies! I have given a full history of the Convention and subsequent meeting, and now I ask, whether you think that the democracy of Schroon have been led astray by a Whig, or Col. Ireland by a soft-shell barnburner, who palmed himself off to the Col. as a hard-shell Adamantino Hunker?

You confess yourself ignorant of Hon. O. Keese's political views, although your near neighbor. Sir Castigator:—we have common farmers here who know that gentleman well, and pronounce him sound to the core. We do not wish your opinion to touch him—for the harpey's claws is said to cause the bleeding flesh to rot, at its instant touch. And 'tis not strange that you are ignorant of our most noted citizens and their principles; a raw Emigrant, a fugitive from justice, cannot be expected to become acquainted with everybody and their principles at once. Yet, common sense as spare "as two grains of wheat in two bushels of chaff," ought to teach an impudent rebel not to use his untold arrogance so recklessly, as to doom such men as Greene C. Bronson, Chas. O'Conor, Clinton and Cooley, and their principles, to "eternal insignificance."

Again, the Castigator General declares, and falsely too, that no complaints but of a personal nature, were preferred against Mr. Rogers at our Convention. Mr. Rogers was accused of being recreant to his party and his pledge—in that he supported whigs for office to the exclusion of democrats.—2nd. That his nomination was procured by fraud and stratagem. 3rd. That he was in favor of Nelson's bastard ticket. And what says the foreigner to this? Why, to the 2nd accusation he says, that three honorable gentlemen were chosen at Elizabethtown, as delegates to the Senatorial Convention. That two of them stayed at home, and in their stead sent the Whallon family, en masse, to represent the county. And what could be fairer than this? And the Foreigner might have added, that the three honorable gentlemen, Merriam, Stors and Tobey, were chosen by a packed committee of one from each town, who were appointed by Jas. S. Whallon, Chairman of the Convention at Elizabethtown, and acting Delegate at the Senatorial Convention—Can anything be fairer than this? But enough has been said in reply to your dizzy headed remarks on castigation—your false braggadocios that "Schroon did not make Mr. Rogers a Senator"—and your doubly false assertion that 'Schroon cannot unmake him.' One paragraph would have sufficed for all 'the strains of your wanton, overheated brains,' but we thought it necessary to say this much for your private consideration: that a foreign fugitive from justice, and a traitor to his party, may, before he attempts to fling his cat o' nine tail castigations towards our peaceful democrats in Schroon, become better acquainted with our customs, our principles and our citizens.

Yours, &c.,
A TRUE DEMOCRAT.

(Correspondence of the Republican.)

We commend the following letter to our readers.—Editor Rep.

POTSDAM, Oct. 23th, 1853.

Mr. Editor,

DEAR SIR:—Belonging to that party which was so signally defeated in the 'fussy' political campaign of 1852, and feeling the deepest interest in every movement that has for its object the advancement of its prosperity, and the promulgation of its rational doctrines upon state and national policy. I am happy to be able to give information as to the character and qualifications of any of the candidates that they have selected as worthy of their support for prominent offices.

I wish to call the attention of the whigs of Essex Co. to the nominee for Judge of this District. Mr. James is a resident of Ogdensburgh, and has long held the reputation of being one of the first members of the legal profession in the State.

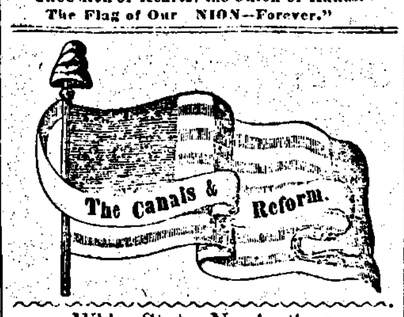
Let the whigs of Essex Co. feel assured that any exertion they may choose to make for his election, will help to place upon the bench a man of great originality and power of mind, and one eminently qualified to perform the arduous labors of the position, with that firmness and integrity which is sure to win the respect and approbation of all.

Among the members of his profession he is respected for his legal erudition, and deservedly popular for his urbanity and courtesiness.

I am informed that he is an advocate and supporter of the modern innovations upon an antiquated, cumbrous, and inefficient system of administering the laws, only fitted for the semibarbarous and non-inventive age in which it originated, and inadequate to supply the necessities of the vigorous age in which we live. The circumstances of his nomination are peculiarly auspicious, and the proper exertion on the part of his friends will insure his election. The people of this section claim that they are entitled to a Judge from among their numbers, and consequently, will break party lines and support the man who has long resided among them, and won their confidence by his integrity and ability. For these reasons, Mr. James will run far in advance of his ticket in his native county. He was only defeated by a small majority when he ran against Judge Allen, which was attributable wholly to that gentleman's popularity in his native county of Washington. That county will probably give its accustomed whig majority, which with seasonable exertions in other sections, will insure his election. The whigs of this section are awake and alert, and expect their brethren in Essex County to do their duty, & would request of them, that while exerting themselves in other departments they do not neglect the Judiciary.

The candidates for the Senate of both parties are residents of this village. The democratic candidate, Z. Clark, Esq., is a man of some influence, and thoroughly identified with the free soilers and the Buffalo Platform of 1848. Bloomfield Usher, Esq., is a staunch whig and a man of great business experience, but as this region is decidedly "soft," he will undoubtedly be defeated. The 'democrats' in this region are absorbed in conchological researches and explanations of the doctrines of the different members of their "happy family."—They appear to take a lively interest in the division of the spoils of their "glorious victory" so gallantly won in 1852. Some support the independent and manly course pursued by Judge Bronson and O'Conor, while others denounce them as miscreants who have betrayed their trust and deserve to be decapitated instanter. In short, there is a demonstration of the same "harmonic democratic action" which was so strikingly illustrated by the proceedings of the Syracuse Conventions, and which will help to swell the aggregate of causes that will finally result in relieving the country of the present imbecile and puerile administration of government affairs, and again entrusting them to the guidance of that party which has never betrayed its trust, and is now rising phœnix like from the ashes, to which foreign influence co-operating with mercenary demagogues have reduced it.

In looking over the last number of your paper I notice a refreshing instance of the "harmonic action" of the democracy of your county. Judging from the demonstration in Schroon, I conclude that the "back bone" of the party is in a very diseased state, almost verging upon spinal affection. This must seriously modify the prospects of the "reigning dynasty," and ultimately result in a revolution and its overthrow.—Hoping very soon to hear from the "disaffected territory" that the oppressed democracy have succeeded in regaining their inalienable rights, to wit: the privilege of selecting from their ranks as candidates, whomsoever best pleases them, irrespective of hereditary descent.



I remain, yours truly,
VERITAS.

LAMENTABLE.—A correspondent of the N. Y. Tribune suggests that Guthrie was guilty of a lamentable negligence in not protecting his rear when he fired on Collector Bronson. The Collector's shot has certainly made a hole in the political skimmer which all the tinkers in the land can't mend. The Collector carries a big gun, an honest, independent gun, and he fires it with a deliberate aim. If Pierce could turn out Guthrie and appoint Bronson in his place, he would show a deal of good sense."

So he would for Guthrie is a thick headed old numbskull, possessed only of a base mind and baser motives. Bronson knows more than the President and Cabinet, together, and it is a pity Pierce cannot be turned out and Bronson put in his place.

Are we Republican, or Cossack?—This question begins to be mooted by the Press and the wise men since [illegible] of Collector Bronson for 'insu[illegible]

"What has the Administration done."—This mooted question can now be answered. It has established a great national tailoring establishment to mend Marcy's breeches, and make patterns for foreign Ministers coats, a great over-grown monopoly, that will ruin all the small establishments in the country. Marcy is foreman, and Soule cutter. Having the influence of the Government, contrary to democratic principle, they have an undue advantage over private enterprise. If Pierce was the man he was taken for he would send 'em adrift and let them set up a shop on their own hook. New York city is a great field for the display of their ability in this line. They have already had large offers from fashionable houses, in that city, and it is a pity that Pierce dont advise them to accept. They would evidently make first rate tailors, but as to conducting the affairs of the nation they are totally unfit by nature, education, or experience. It persuaded Judge Bronson to quit his profession and accept office very much against his wishes and then turned him out again because he would not provide places for democratic traitors, short boys, and scamps generally.

What Judge Bronson would not do, that it has done—appointed 'convicts' just from Blackwells Island to office in the N. Y. customs and Post Office—and dismissed Judge Bronson for 'insubordination.'

It has reduced hours of labor of dem. pet clerks at Washington from 10 to 6 hours a day, and issued a cabinet edict forbidding their 'getting drunk during office hours.'

It has with unparralled vanity permitted the names of each of its Cabinet officers to be given to government vessels, a thing hitherto unknown in this country, as follows: 'The Caleb Cushing.' 'The James Campbell.' 'The James C. Dobbin.' 'The Robert McLelland.' 'The Wm L. Marcy.' 'The Jefferson Davis.'

It has wasted its time over the distribution of the spoils, has neglected the great interests of the nation, held out rewards for treason, and 'regards' for Patriots, engendered uncompromising enmities in its own ranks, and sent forth a demoralizing influence to spread itself over all classes of community.

And lastly, it has eternally disgraced itself, and the nation, and abused the confidence of its friends, and if there is a depth in the lower depth it will find it.

A Bird's Eye View of the Political Field.

The democrats are hoplessly divided.—Their quarrels are unabating. Whigs have only to be united to carry every branch of the State Government. There will be a diversion in N. Y. city by those who have the Union in charge. This may be heavy, but we don't know. In Rochester there will be a slight one. Other than these, we know of no divisions in the whig ranks.—The great body of the whigs of the State appear to be going together, and if so, all is well. The result depends upon the whigs of the rural districts.

The Silver Greys would have liked the ticket better if it had been differently constituted, but they say it is made up of able and patriotic men, and the rescue of the State works from the hands of a set of Goths and Vandals, is far more important than mere individual preferences, and therefore they go the ticket. This is right and honorable, and we believe they will do as they say. If whigs act together in good faith, it is estimated that the democrats will not elect more than eight Senators out of thirty-four. We shall no doubt have a Whig Judge, and Whig Senator in this district. It is thought by some that our Senator will be elected by 1500 majority, but we shall be satisfied with 500. In Clinton county, it is thought the whole whig ticket will be elected. Such are present appearances, and we can't see that they are to change in the short time to election.

DEMOCRATIC LOVE FOR IRISHMEN FURTHER ILLUSTRATED.—In Clinton County the Irish poll a heavy vote. A worthy son of the Emerald Isle, Mr. Eagan of Plattsburgh, was an applicant for the post of Light House Keeper on Cumberland Head.

He was worthy and poor, but he was Irish and couldn't come in. Mr. Desmond a promising young atty. of Plattsburgh, was this fall urged to present himself to the county convention for County Clerk, but they only intended to 'break the promise to the ear.' They gave him 'the compliment of a good vote in the convention,' and 'hussled him out.' Having been kept along so for years, the Irish are bound to lay out the democracy in that county. There are already low mutterings among the democracy, and soon their Organs will teem with abuse of this class of voters for exercising their freedom in opposition to the will of the democracy.

Oh, what a beautiful thing this democracy is. In Troy, the Times whose Editor is 'cheek by jowl' with him of the Gazette, proposes a Native American movement in that city because the Irish have refused longer to be 'hewers of wood and drawers of water' to the democracy. If the Times was only a whig paper, how the Organ would howl tho' would it not?

O. K.—Two barnburner lawyers in a certain village in Essex county are doing their utmost for Mr. James, the whig candidate for Justice of the Supreme Court because Judge Willard voted to acquit Matthews.

Barnburner Love for Irishmen Further Illustrated.

The 'Softs' in Troy have just had a severe 'test' applied to their professions for this class of citizens—they have been 'weighed in the balance and found wanting.' They had made large professions and in one word had put forward the Irish to call the Ward meeting, and relied upon controlling the meeting themselves, as usual, and indeed did not suppose the Irish would dare to have any opinions, or wishes of their own, only as indicated by the 'Soft' leaders, and they expected to use them as before, as mere tools. But, when the meeting assembled the Irish had a majority, and to the utter amazement of the 'Softs' dared to use it by appointing their own country men delegates to the city and county conventions. The proceedings were written out, and signed, and tendered to the barnburner Organ for publication, but were refused, when they were given to the Troy Whig. The delegates attended the conventions. To the Co. Convention they presented as a candidate for the Assembly, Dr. O'Reardon, an educated physician, a dem. and a 'Soft,' whom whigs had made city Physician, but whose pretensions in a dem. Co. Convention, were fairly sneered out of doors. Upon this considerable discussion has occurred in the papers, and the result is an 'independent' movement on the part of the Irish. For this they are subjected to unmeasured abuse by their lately professed friends the barnburners, and it is a specimen of what they may expect about here if they dare to assume any voice in the democracy. Indeed Mr. Desmond of Plattsburgh, has already subjected himself to their suspicions, and we have already heard democrats call him everything but a clever fellow. Let it be once established that he no longer acts with that party and their Organs here will teem with abuse that will disgrace a Billingsgate orator.

☞For Member of Assembly, (First District—JOHN T. O'REARDON, of Troy (rejected by the barnburners.

On motion, the following address was adopted:

Fellow Citizens: in presenting the names of the above Ticket for your support at the ballot-box, we deem it proper to state the grounds on which we base our claim to such support. Guided by no feelings than those of Democracy; influenced by no motives other than that the just and competent should fill offices of trust and responsibility; if our candidates are men incompetent for the discharge of the duties of their offices respectively; if their political principles are such as does not constitute republicans; if their antecedents have been as to have incurred deserved censure, reject them, but as they now stand canvass not their merits or demerits in the narrow sphere of Cliqueism, weigh them not in the scale of Party, but look upon them rather as the choice of the People.

Fellow Citizens, the boundary lines of Party are by all intelligent men admitted to be defaced, those landmarks defining the position of Whigs and Democrats no longer exist on the political chart. The great beacon-light of Democracy guides twenty-six millions of free people, whose aim should be for the Union and nothing but the Union—and not suffer themselves to be led away by those Will-o the-Wisps which the fermentation of bad passion and party purpose is ever capable of vomiting on the surface of society.

True the Sons of Emeral Isle stand side by side with the Children of Liberty. By your votes for the whole ticket endorse the Jeffersonian principle. 'The rights of the minority are to be respected by the majority." Show yourselves the friends of this first principle of our Constitution, and prevent the cloud of Nativism from darkening the bright constellation of American Liberty. To the ballot-box, good men, and there remember your duty to the Land of the Free and the Home of the Brave.

Three cheers were given for the Ticket.

On motion, the proceedings were ordered published in the American Celt, Boston Pilot, Irish American and the city papers.

MORTY O'SULLIVAN, Chairman.
JOHN MORAN, Sec'y.

REMEMBER, that this is a year of small majorities. A few votes may determine the political campaign of the Empire State. The last time Gov. Hunt was elected he had only about 300 majority in a vote of 400,000. The Gov. Elect of Georgia has less than 300 majority. One vote elected Cromwell to Parliment and sent Charles to the scaffold. One vote gave New York to Jefferson, and made him President. One vote made Marcus Morton Gov. of Massachusetts. One voto gave the whigs the Senate of Pa. in 1841. One vote inflicted upon the country the iniquities tariff of 1846. Looking upon the uncertain future of politics, no one can over estimate the importance of a single vote.

MARK THEM.—If we are defeated this fall, let whigs be prepared to mark the traitors. It will be a crime longer to harbor men who, by their professions to be whigs, are thus enabled to harm us more than twice the number of open enemies, but who as democrats would be as harmless as a wasp that has lost his sting.

[From the Burlington Courier.]

FRIEND SAMPSON:—I saw your notice of the fatal accident which occured in this vicinity on the 17th inst., which is very well; but at the suggestion of some friends, we have thought it advisable to publish all the facts obtainable in the case.

Mr. John Kennedy, son of Samuel B. Kennedy, Esq., accidentally shot himself in his boat while attempting to shoot pickerel, at Shepherd's Cove. The facts relating to this sad accident, as obtained from the person who was with him, Mr. Thomas B. Hinkson, and Mr. Albert Town who subsequently arrived, are these: Mr. Kennedy went out in a boat, while Hinkson passed along the shore. After passing about in different parts of the cove or pond, he came round within 25 or 30 rods of the point where Hinkson stood, paddled his boat up near the shore, and seemed to stand upon the seat in the stern, looking for pickerel, when his gun accidentally discharged, as it is supposed, by the lock catching upon some part of the boat as he was taking it up. He fell partially down, recovered and called to Hinkson to come to him. Hinkson ran upon the shore, near to him, talked with him a moment, then ran for the assistance of some men who were at work a short distance in the field, one of whom, with Mr. Town, arrived at the boat in about fifteen minutes after, finding him lying with his face downward, unable to speak, and in a fainting appearance. After employing every means within his power to restore him, to no avail, and finding life fast becoming extinct, Town paddled the boat ashore, and in a few minutes Mr. K. breathed his last.

The melancholy news was immediately communicated to his wife and friends, which was received by them with that heartfelt grief and sorrow known only to those under similar bereavements.

The charge, which was of medium size, shot and wadding, entered his right breast just below and forward of the arm-pit, and passed upward, principally between the shin and ribs, servering, in its passage, the brochial artery, and lodged at the collar bone.

The funeral obsequies were attended at the house of his father, in Bolton, where a large concourse of friends, neighbors and acquaintance, in a spirit of condolence, gave evidence of the friendship and esteem he had gained within the circuit of his acquaintance. B. E. B. K.

Bronson's Removal.

From the N. Y. National Democrat, Dem.

'The removal of Judge Bronson for the cause alleged, will prove the inevitable destruction of the Administration. It will be certain to throw both branches of Congress against it, and public opinion will denounce it, as no Administration has been denounced since the formation of the Republic. The merchants of New York, irrespective of party, will hold such an indignation meeting as the Empire City has never witnessed. If the Collector of this port is to be a mere political tool of the Federal Government, the mercantile interests of the country are in perpetual danger of being deranged and depraved to the worst purpose of party abominations.'

WATCHWORDS.—A clean ticket and a full vote, is the motto for whigs. The practice of this precept will alone save us. In the political field in particular it is impossible to tell what a day may bring forth. A single turn of the political wheel may change the whole aspect of the contest. To day the skies may be bright, but tomorrow they may be overcast. Stranger things have happened than the reconciliation of the democratic factions. A partial fusion of their warring elements might endanger the entire State, and Senatorial ticket. Whigs can only achieve a certain victory by—A CLEAN TICKET AND A FULL VOTE.

OUR DANGER.—That whigs will not get out all their votes. In the great struggle of 1840, '44, and '48, we could count up after election 30 to 40 good whigs in Moriah, who had not voted. This was doubtless the case all over the State. How much greater the danger of neglect now! With the prospect before them, whigs don't deserve success if they wont work for it this fall. The importance of a single vote may be appreciated when it is recollected that one vote to every school district in the State makes 11000! We hope there will be no part of that, or a greater number chargeable to Essex county. 'Up, Whigs!

"GOOD LORD AND GOOD DEVIL."—At Schroon Senator Rogers proclaimed himself a hunker. He has written to the Hon. Mr. Russell of Warren Co. that he shall support a part of the hunker State ticket. In the north part of Clinton County his name appears in the abolition organ for Senator, 'because he is in favor of the repeal of the fugitive Slave Law,' and the 'embodiment of hatred to Slavery.' What professions he has made in Jay and Willmington are not yet disclosed, but it is capable of positive proof that he is riding astradle the political horse and if he escapes a fall it will be a miracle.

Political Strategy.—Whig scouting parties have been on the trail of Senator Rogers, up in Keene, Jay, and Wilmington, and they find that he assured the abolitionists of his hostility to the fugitive slave law, and that he was utterly opposed to Daniel S. Dickinson, and his whole crew. How far these facts tally with his "soft" soder to hunkers they can judge. He has given equally unequivocal assurances to the latter. Are there no other parties to which Senator R. can pledge himself?

TRUE.—What we say in regard to Senator Rogers pledges to the abolitionists of Jay and Wilmington is true, and we can prove it if denied.

An Appeal to Democrats.

The time has nearly arrived, fellow democrats, when you will be called upon to exert your vote in favor of those principles you have so long and so ardently supported.—On account of the peculiar state of things existing in our state politics, brought about by the uncompromising hostility of a contemptible faction, it behooves each man to examine with candor and choose with honesty between the two ostensible democratic parties. That called the Adamantine have presented a ticket for your suffrages that may well challenge your respect, and cause a throb of honest pride in your heart. They have often been tried and never found wanting. The foul stain of abolitionism or sectionalism cannot be charged to them. Their antecedents prove them firm, reliable and consistent democrats, whom bullies cannot intimidate or pampered officials corrupt. They are men of the Bronsonian stamp who oppose corruption and peculation in every phase it may assume.

We have the worthy son of a distinguished sire at its head; a man of intellect and superior fitness; of great personal popularity and thoroughly imbued with the patriotic sentiments of genuine democracy—that democracy that was contaminated by a "beastly coalition," but now, thanks to the true and honest hearts that accomplished it, the incubus is shook off, and our democratic household cleansed of the infectious clan that were instilling the miasma of abolitionism and sectionalism into its broad and National basis; and may the day be far distant when such "sable harmonists" are again trusted with its hallowed tenets. As Mr. Brady, in his great speech at N. Y. well remarks: We have had bitter experience in permitting an association with treachery. In an evil hour our party received upon its bosom adders in which there lingered a little animation. They warmed into life under our protection, and, true to their foul instincts, sought to destroy us.—We heard their hiss—we saw their protruding fangs. If our party had been but an infant Hercules, it could have strangled them. It is a mature giant, and shall crush them forever.

We have our own honored, tried and faithful townsman, Hon. W. C. Watson, than whom there is not in this section of the State, a man more deserving of the democratic party. His strict adherance to Jeffersonian Democracy through an active life, his undeviating attachment to the Constitution and the Union, his warm and hearty support of the Compromise Measures, his unflinching support of that distinguished and venerated statesman, Lewis Cass, in opposition to the same howling sable clan that now assail him (Watson) are facts that should recommend him to every democrat. We doubt not the vote on Tuesday will show in what high estimation he is held by those who know him best. His services to the people of the county, irrespective of party, should give him a large vote. His able survey of the county, and his activity in promoting the cause of agriculture will all conspire to give him a hearty support. There is another reason why the people of Essex county should vote for Mr. Watson. His residence among us makes him familiar with our wants in an eminent degree, and his influence, if elected, would be serviceable to this part of the State.—What claim has Segar for your votes, only that he received a nomination in a convention held under the guardianship of the slat ears, blear eyes, short boys, assassins and convicts—the scum that burrow in the "holes" of the Five Points in N. Y. We know they attempt to deny that these new constituents to a Democratic State Convention were present. Money has been spent without stint to stamp the infamy of this disgraceful transaction on the Adamantines—men proverbiable for their love of law and order—but their machinations have signally failed, and they stand before the country convicted of the most disgraceful proceeding in the annals of political history. The Editor of the 'short boy' Gazette, following in the wake of the mendacious Atlas, publishes an affidavit bought by money furnished by the same corrupting influence that secured the aid of bullies to overawe and control the State Convention, to prove that the 'salt painters' were hired by the Adamantines. Two affidavits were immediately published in the Syracuse papers, voluntarily on the part of their authors, proving that such was not the case, but that they offered their assistance, if it was necessary, to protect the Convention against the irruption of the pestiferous vomit of the "holis" and dens of infamy from N. Y.

The following from the Watertown Jeffersonian, which supports the assassin ticket, shows how much reliance their is to be placed on the statement of those individuals from this vicinity, who were there and deny the presence of the 'short boys';

"It is to be regretted that so great and criminal a mistake was committed as suffering the proceedings of the convention to be embarrassed and interrupted by bullies and rowdies, or anything of the kind receive the least countenance from either party. On the fullest and most impartial investigation, we are satisfied that the most violent characters were on the side of the convention which made the nominations at the head of our column."

We give one more extract from the Buffalo Express, a disinterested witness, which shows the barnburner leaders to be utterly abandoned and familiar with vice in its worst form; totally regardless of the comity existing in civilized communities. Here it is:

We know that John Van Buren, standing on the steps of the Syracuse House, said to a knot of half a dozen of short-boys who surrounded him, 'Now, boys, if one of those d——d hunkers attempts to speak, hiss him down, and if you can't hiss him down, why, d——n him, knock him down, and if you can't do it, I can.' This was heard by one of the editors of one of the Syracuse papers, who will make oath to the fact. We know, that John Van Buren, John Cochrane, Postmaster Fowler, and one or two others, were seen in consultation in an ante-room at Market Hall, about 11 o'clock, when it was supposed the convention was to assemble there, with some of these same short-boys.

"We know that one of these wretches leaned upon our chair during the entire performance, and when Gen. Ward, in the crowd, arose to oppose the motion to adjourn, this fellow turned around quickly, and with all the malice of a devil displayed in his face, shouted—Shut up your head, you d - - d old fool; and then commenced hissing and calling for the ayes and nays, which was the signal for the most perfect tempest of yells and hisses that ever was heard."

Is this democracy? Is this the principle that swells the heart and nerves the arm of the oppressed to strike for liberty? Or is it rather the perversion of a great and vital principle by designing demagogues, plethoric with the spoils of office, who are seeking their own aggrandizement by the aid of the slung-shot and bowie knife?—This, we believe to be the case. By the aid of their pipe-player and fugleman at Washington, Wm. L. Marcy, a "fossil from the debris of Van Buren democracy," these notorious di-organizers and privileged bolters have become surfeited with offices, and are now using their patronage to obtain supremacy over the Old Guard, who upheld the honor of the democracy of the Empire State, when the Cochrane's, Grover's and Fowler's were avenging the injuries of an antiquated statesman who believed the Presidency hereditary in his family.—Are you going to assist these marauders in their traitorous designs? Are you, the law abiding citizens of Essex county, going to lend your aid to elect a ticket nominated under the auspices of hired bullies?—We know you will not. Your sense of right and justice is too acute, and honor and principle too dear to endorse the action of such hybrids. We are aware that your paper in this county has raised the black flag of the conspirators—still red with the blood of that noble and incorruptible old Roman, Lewis Cass, and that its Editor disregarded even common honesty and fairness, by not publishing at least the proceedings of the Convention held at the Globe Hotel, that people might judge between the two, but instead, it has been the conduit of misrepresentation and foul slander of the ticket collectively, and of the most coarse and low abuse of Mr. Watson individually, which smacked very much of personal malice. But it is a notorious fact that his is the only paper that has attacked Mr. Watson in this vicinity. His herculean efforts to prove this distinguished gentleman anything but a consistent democrat, have fallen still-born from his venomous pen, as harmless as the evening dew. Fortunately, his character (Watson's) was too well known and appreciated in this vicinity to suffer from these malignant attacks. The total silence of the other 'short boy' presses is a severe rebuke to the 'organ.'

The other names on the Adamantine ticket are men remarkable for their ability and fitness for the offices for which they are nominated, among which is John C. Mather, the best abused man, for the past year, by these Barnburners, in the State. All that inventive malignity and rancorous spleen could suggest was done to disgrace this faithful and efficient public officer, and all because he would not sacrifice his national principles to gratify a set of ruthless 'putty-heads.' The result of his trial for mal-practice in office, was the utter discomfiture of the 'central clique,'—the triumphant acquittal of the object of their base persecution, and a burst of indignation from every part of the State, that sent these shallow miscreants howling back to their dens of infamy, from which it is hoped, for the sake of honesty, they will not soon emerge. The name of Cooley, too, the fearless champion of the Canals, is there, whose manly course in the Senate last winter, brought down the anathemas and exhausted the Billingsgate of the free-soil presses, because, forsooth, he put off to a late day the confirmation of such important offices as Loan Commissioners and Notary Publics!

You have also the brilliant and reliable Brady; a man of great talent and acknowledged legal acumen, of great originality and compass of mind, and unsurpassed as an orator in the State—His strict adherence to Jeffersonian democracy is unquestionable, and compares favorably with the course of Martin Grover, the candidate for the same office on the 'Soft' ticket, whose democracy (if he ever felt the elevating influence of its sublime and patriotic teachings,) is scarce a year old. The following is from the Era, a hunker paper in '48, and printed at that time in his own town:—

"Martin Grover is a man who germinated in federalism, put forth in anti-masonry, matured in nullification, bloomed in whiggery, and is now going to seed in abolitionism."

Is'nt that a beautiful picture? Still, with brazen impudence, democrats are seriously asked to vote for such beauties.

The Canals are the important issue of this election, and the men on the Adamantine State Ticket have proved their devotion to them by a life long support of them. The barnburners have always opposed them, and do now, although their resolutions endorse them and they pretend to be favorable to them. But who believes them? No one, unless he be an individual gifted with extreme marvellousness. The most prominent free soiler we have in town, a man remarkable for his profundity, declares openly that he will vote against the proposed amendment to the constitution, that he will support the ticket, but 'spits' on the Platform. This is undoubtedly the feeling of the whole of these treacherous rebels, but they have not the honesty to proclaim their early and cherished sentiments.

They are also making great efforts to get the votes of our adopted citizens, but with limited success, and the few they do get is by misrepresentation, stating that the Adamantines are inimical to the National Administration, which is false. Every question of National Policy that has been advanced, has been and is sustained by them. Matters of State Policy is another matter altogether, and one on which we are very liable to differ, and men may honestly entertain a difference of opinion we suppose without endangering the perpetuity or efficiency of the National Administration.—We suppose it is a matter of small importance at Washington, politically, whether we enlarge the Canals on the comprehensive scale proposed by the National Democracy, or whether we adopt the six inch plan of our plastic Governor and his body guard of cyphers.

The 'Softs,' fellow Democrats, are your old enemies, whom you so nobly fought in days gone by, only they have turned out another side, as John Van Buren said of the Baltimore Platform, 'for this time,' of their skin, leprous with the foul stain of abolitionism. No adopted citizen can vote their mongrel, half breed ticket without transgressing his oath of allegience, for he swears to uphold the constitution and the laws, while these recreant disturbers who solicit their votes pronounce the constitution a 'damnable instrument.' How an adopted citizen would look voting for such harpies.—But you will not do it, and your own good sense is a safeguard against the mendacious artifice that besets you with his solicitations during his midnight orgies.

A word as to the apostacy of some National Democrats that were at Syracuse. A. P. Grant, the chairman of the "Soft" convention became 'soft' by having his ambition gratified in being appointed to preside over the meeting. The Essex delegate was always a 'Soft' and the Clinton delegate was appointed chairman of the committee on permanent organization, the mollifying influence of which has made him a regular "Putty."

A National Democrat.

Keeseville, Nov. 3, 1853.

Notes of Victory.

For several days there has been a constant disturbance among the rubbish of our office. We have supposed it "spirit rappings," but on examination it, was our little drummer. We tried to pacify him, but he would not be quiet till we took him out and placed him in our columns. He was on duty night and day during the campaign of 1852, without money and without price, without sleep, victuals or drink, and it is but fair that he should be permitted to lead on to victory now.

"Ye sons of Freedom, wake to glory,
Hark! hark, what myrids bid you rise—
* * * * * * *
Shall lawless tyrants mischief breeding
With hireling host, a ruffain band,
Affright and desolate the land
While peace and liberty lie bleeding.
To arms, to arms, ye brave,
The patriot sword unsheath,
March on!
March on, all hearts resolved.
On liberty or death."

Dont Neglect the Judiciary. We must have a whig Justice this time if whigs do their duty. It is due to the Northern counties.

Don't Neglect the Senator. Mr. Richards is a lumberman, and duly appreciates the importance of State Legislation in aid of the developement of the resources of this section of the State. In 1846 he was elected Dist. Atty. for Warren, subsequently he was elected to the Assembly, and again run within 20 of another election, in a county where there is a democratic majority of 500. He is capable and popular, and deserving of a large vote.

Don't Neglect Judge Barnet. He has won for himself a distinguished reputation. He has honored the station, the county and the party. Let us honor him by increasing his vote over last year.

Don't Neglect any part of the ticket.—Don't be careless or indifferent to a single candidate. They are all 'capable, honest, and faithful to the constitution.' Vote the whole ticket, and nothing but the ticket. Be true to every man on it, as you would have whigs true to you if you were a candidate.

Last Words of Counsel.—This is the last time we shall be able to speak to you till after the Rubicon is passed. If what has been said has not convinced you of your duty, and aroused you to activity, nothing we could now say would be of any avail.—We have presented to you every consideration that could move men and patriots.—If you have done your duty, you have labored with your neighbors. Facts and arguments will not now avail anything, either with you or your democratic neighbors—Efficient Action is all that now remains.—As in the great campaign of 1852, so now, let whigs of Essex county do their duty, whatever may be the result elsewhere. As then, so now, let us stand pre-eminent among the whigs of the State and of the Union. Words, will not now accomplish anything, but labor will.

Cabinet Letters.—Since the annihilation of Guthrie by Judge Bronson a perfect mania has seized the members of the cabinet for epistolatory notoriety. Cushing has written to Massachusetts giving his 'judgement' on the policy of county politics, and Marcy has written to the Germans of New York city. It is an electioneering cabinet, and it has been proposed that there be a new bureau organized to be called, 'The Electioneering department.'

☞ Cease to think when the time of action arrives.

Such was a remark of Jackson, and it is a good one. The time for argument is past. Now is the time for action. The manner in which whigs spend the next few days preceding election will tell more on the result, than all that has been said. Indeed, all that has been said will be lost if the whigs fail to improve the brief time remains in efficient, but prudent Ac-

Motives of Action.

Whigs have every inducement to a noble and generous effort. An able ticket, State, Senatorial, County, and Judiciary. The rescue of the canals from their implacable enemies, and the reform of abuses and corruption in State Legislation. They are again fighting their old enemy, the VanBuren democracy, revived and resuscitated by Pierce—that old hated party that brought the country to ruin in 1837-8, that stopt at no outrage on justice, law, or decency to accomplish party ends, that wasted the public funds on favorites and elections, that encouraged rowdies, and vice generally, that sacrificed the great interests of the country in its scramble for the spoils. This same old specimen of human and political depravity is, again, restored to full sway on the destiny of the country.

We need not now repeat its abuses.—They have been presented from time to time and are familiar to our readers. Against this hated heap of corruption, let whigs rally with a resolution that will overcome all opposition—that will know no sleep, nor rest, till it is routed in confusion and dismay.—Let the appeals of patriotism, of political honor, of old sympathies, and old friends not be made to whigs in vain.

Up, whigs, to a united, and mighty effort.

Shrewd.—The publication day of the Gazette is on Wednesday, but up to the moment of going to press not a copy has made its appearance. The Editor must have received a letter of instructions from the Cabinet. Or, perhaps, he has something in it to be ashamed of. 'Burnt children dread the fire,' and most likely he don't like to give us a chance to reply. He need have no fears on this head for we assure him we don't wish to annihilate him entirely, lest we be indicted under the Statute for Cruelty &c.'

'Adieu, dear Maurice,' till another election. In the mean time, we hope you will not forget us.

Consistency & Principle!—Senator Rogers is a barnburner. He has asked hunkers to vote for him and pledged himself to them.—He has also asked the Abolitionists to vote for him and has pledged himself to them, and to go against a hunker to the U. S. Senate. We recommend him to hire out to some Circus, as he will make a better circus rider than Statesman.

Important.—Such arrangements should be made, that no matter what the weather, if it rains pitchforks, or snows in avalanches, every vote will be cast.

So too, business arrangements, of whatever character should be made to yield to this one object—a full vote.

Despotism.—It is unnecessary to go from home to find it. The only argument we have heard used by the barnburners this fall is, that 'democrats must go the regular nominations,' and that it is heresy to 'oppose the administration.' These bugbears are only the offshoots of king-craft, which says: 'the king can do no wrong.'

S. of T.—A division of this order is to be organized at this place on Thursday after election. Installation will take place in the afternoon and a public meeting will be held in the evening, at which the claims of the order will be presented by eminent speakers.

Sad Accident.—It is said that in straddling from the hunkers to the abolitionists Senator Rogers has rent his breeches so badly that a "patch" wont save 'em. Horrid.

☞ The 'appeal to democrats' in another column is what it purports—the production of a democrat, and we give it a place by his request.

Look Out—for the political tricks, false rumors, affidavits, handbills, letters, and all the acts of which short boys are capable.

THE MARRIAGE STATE;

Shall Happiness and Health, or Misery and Sickness, attend it?

MOST STARTLING CONSIDERATIONS!

Reflections for the Thoughtful.

Strange that countless human beings exist and drag through life as do the beasts of the field, or the insects of the earth, evincing no more thought or reflection than though the noble faculties of mind were not vouchsafed to them.

Many such are husbands and fathers, upon whom are dependent the health, the well-being, and the happiness of a confiding and affectionate wife, with perhaps a family of children.

HOW OFTEN IT HAPPENS THAT THE

WIFE LINGERS FROM YEAR TO YEAR

In that pitiable condition as not even for one day to feel the happy and exhilerating influence incident to the enjoyment of health.

She may not be an invalid confined to her bed, or even to her room; as her pride, ambition and energy induce and nerve her to take personal charge of her household, even when her health will not admit of it; but she is nevertheless perceptibly sinking from day to day, and always ailing.

Thus, day after day, and month after month transpire. Her health daily sinks, till finally even the hope of recovery no longer remains. And thus

THE BLOOMING BRIDE,

But a few years ago in the flush of health and youth, and buoyancy of spirits, rapidly, and apparently inexplicably, becomes a feeble, sickly, debilitated wife, with frame emaciated, nerves unstrung, spirits depressed, countenance bearing the impress of suffering, and an utter physical and mental prostration.

Sometimes this deplorable change may and does arise from organic or constitutional causes. But oftener, by far oftener, to gross and inexcusable ignorance of the simplest and plainest rules of health as connected with the marriage state, the violation of which entails disease, suffering and misery, not only to the wife, but often

"UNTO THE THIRD AND FOURTH GENERATION,"

Transmitting CONSUMPTION, SCROFULA, HYPOCHONDRIA, INSANITY, GOUT, KING'S EVIL, and other diseases, as a

DREADFUL INHERITANCE

from the Parents.

And must this continue? Shall we be wise in all that concerns the cattle of our fields, our horses, our sheep, our cows, our oxen, the nature and character of the soil we possess, the texture and quality of our goods and merchandise; but in all that concerns ourselves as human beings, with human functions and passions, subject to great derangement, involving our future peace and happiness—in all that concerns the health and welfare of the wife of our affections, and the mother of our children; in all that concerns the mental and physical well being of those children, we should be immersed in the darkest and most

BENIGHTED IGNORANCE,

AS CULPABLE AS INEXCUSABLE!

How long shall this ignorance prevail so productive of its bitter fruits? How long shall the wife and mother be ignorant of the nature, character and causes of the various womb and sexual complaints, embittering her days by suffering—suffering often prolonged to years, eventuating in a complication of diseases utterly and hopelessly incurable? Shall we for ever close our eyes to the results of physiological science by which we may arrive at an understanding of ourselves as men and women, subject to serious life-long enduring diseases, and perpetuating them to our children.

LET EVERY WIFE AND HUSBAND PONDER!

No husband or wife need be ignorant of what concerns them most to know to secure their health and happiness. That knowledge is contained in a little work entitled

CONCURRENT RESOLUTION PROPOSING AN AMENDMENT TO THE CONSTITUTION.

Resolved, (if the Senate concur,) That the following amendment be proposed to the constitution of this state and referred to the legislature to be chosen at the next general election of senators, and be published for three months previous to making such choice, in pursuance to the provisions of the first section of the thirteenth article of said constitution.

Substitute for section three of article seven the following:

After paying the said expenses of collection, superintendence and repairs of the canals, and the sums appropriated by the first and second sections of this article, there shall be appropriated and set apart in each fiscal year out of the surplus revenues of the canals, as a sinking fund, a sum sufficient to pay the interest as it falls due, and extinguish the principal within eighteen years of any loan made under this section, and if the said sinking fund shall not be sufficient to redeem any part of the principal at the stipulated times of payment, or to pay any part of the interest of such loans as stipulated, the means to satisfy any such deficiency shall be procured on the credit of the said sinking fund. After complying with the foregoing provisions, there shall be paid annually out of said revenues into the treasury of the state two hundred thousand dollars, to defray the necessary expenses of government. The remainder shall, in each fiscal year, be applied to meet appropriations for the enlargement and completion of the canals mentioned in this section, until the said canals shall be completed. In each fiscal year thereafter the remainder shall be disposed of in such manner as the legislature may direct, but shall at no time be anticipated or pledged for more than one year in advance. The legislature shall annually, during the next four years, appropriate to the enlargement of the Erie, the Oswego, the Cayuga and Seneca canals, and to the completion of the Black River and Genesee Valley canals, and for the enlargement of the locks of the Champlain canal, whenever from dilapidation or decay it shall be necessary to rebuild them, a sum not exceeding two millions two hundred and fifty thousand dollars. The remainder of the revenues of the canals for the current fiscal year in which such appropriation is made, shall be applied to meet such appropriation: and if the same shall be deemed insufficient, the legislature shall at the same session provide for the deficiency by loan. The legislature shall also borrow one million and five hundred thousand dollars to refund to the holders of the canal revenue certificates issued under the provisions of chapter four hundred and eighty-five of the laws of the year one thousand eight hundred and fifty-one, the amount received into the treasury thereon. But no interest to accrue after July first, one thousand eight hundred and fifty-five, shall be paid on such Certificates. The provisions of section twelve of this article requiring every law for borrowing money to be submitted to the people, shall not apply to the loans authorized by this section. No part of the revenues of the canals or of the funds borrowed under this section, shall be paid or applied upon or in consequence of any alleged contract made under chapter four hundred and eighty-five of the laws of the year one thousand eight hundred and fifty-one, except to pay for work done or materials furnished prior to the first day of June, one thousand eight hundred and fifty-two. The rates of toll on persons and property transported on the canal shall not be reduced below those for the year one thousand eight hundred and fifty-two, except by the canal board, with the concurrence of the legislature.—All contracts for work or materials on any canal, shall be made with the person who shall offer to do or provide the same at the lowest price, with adequate security for their performance.

CHAPTER 450.

AN ACT to aid in the erection of a monument commemorative of the Declaration of Independence.

Passed June 23, 1853.

The People of the State of New York, represented in Senate and Assembly, do enact as follows:

§ 1. For the purpose of uniting with the others of the thirteen original states in the necessary measures for the constuction and maintainance in the public squares adjoining Independence Hall, in the city of Philadelphia, of a monument to commemorate the Declaration of American Independence, the Governor of this state is authorized to appoint a suitable citizen a Trustee or Agent to represent this state in the Board of Trustees that may be appointed by the said states respectively for the same purpose with the like powers. It will be the duty of the said Board of Trustees, when nine or more shall have been appointed by as many of the said thirteen states, to determine the plan, design, materials and expense of the said monument, and to prepare statement exhibiting the proportion to be contributed by each of the original thirteen states to defray the said expense, assuming as a rule for said proportion the numeria' representation at this time of each such state in the House of Representatives of the Congress of the United States, and the periods when, in their judgement, the installments of the said contribution will be required; in determining the said design an appropriate place on the exterior of such monument shall be provided for each contributing state, to contain such inscription as the state shall direct, commemorative of some citizen or citizens of her own who took part in the responsibility of the Declaration of the Independence of the said states. The said Trustees are to report each of the states represented by them, with all reasonable expedition, the design, plan, and expense of said monument as proposed by them, and the said statement of proportionate contributions; when the said states shall have made provisons for contributing their respective quotas of the said expense, the said Board of Trustees shall be authorized to proceed and construct the said monument and a sufficient railing around the same, and shall receive and expend the moneys appropriated for that purpose by the different states. They will appoint the necessary superintendents and agents, and may authorize a committee of their body to receive and take charge of all moneys contributed. When the said monuments shall be finished, the board of trustees shall render an account to their respective states of the moneys received and expended by them or under their direction, which shall be verified by the oaths of the Principal, Superintendent, and one or more of the financial committee of the board, and shall be certified by the mayor of the city of Philadelphia, and the president of the select and common councils of the said city, or any two of them, to have been compared with the original vouchers and entries and found correct.

§ 2. The person so appointed trustee shall hold and exercise said trust during the pleasure of the Governor of the state, and in case of vacancy by death, resignation or otherwise in the said trust, the Governor shall appoint successors from time to time as occasion may require. No part of the fund contributed by the State shall be applied to compensate any trustee for his services, but the actual expenses of the trustee appointed on the part of this state, will be defrayed by the Legislature thereof.

§ 3. Upon receiving the report of the said board of trustees of the design, plan, material and expense of the said Monument, and their estimate of the proportion to be contributed by this State, as herein provided, the Legislature will make provision for the payment of the same, in such installments as the said board of trustees shall have declared to be necessary. Provided such whole expense shall not exceed one hundred and fifty thousand dollars.

§ 4. This act shall take effect immediately.

CHAPTER 458.

§ 1. Any mutual life insurance company in this state, incorporated previously to the passage of the general insurance law on the tenth day of April, eighteen hundred forty-nine, shall be subject to taxation in the same manner as if it were incorporated under said general law, with a capital of one hundred thousand dollars as required by the sixth section of the said general law,

CHAPTER 471.

AN ACT to amend an act entitled "An act to provide for the incorporation and regulation of telegraph companies," passed April 12, 1848.

Passed June 29, 1853.

The People of the State of New York, represented in Senate and Assembly do enact as follows:

§ 1. Any number of persons may associate for the purpose of owning or constructing using and maintaining a line or lines of electric telegraph, whether wholly within or partly beyond the limits of this state; or for the purpose of owning any interest in any such line or lines of electric telegraph, or any grants therefor, upon such terms and conditions, and subject to the liabilities prescribed in the act passed April 12, 1848, entitled 'An act to provide for the incorporation and regulation of telegraph companies." And such association shall, upon complying with the provisions of the said act, become a body corporate, and shall have the powers, and be subject to the provisions in the said act, and in the several acts amending the same, contained, not inconsistent herewith. And any telegraph company now owning or using any telegraph line, either wholly or partly within this state, may become a body corporate, and entitled to the benefit of the provisions herein contained, on filing in the office of the Secretary of State a certificate of a resolution adopted by a majority of its board of directors to organise under this act; which said certificate shall contain the specifications required by the said recited act, and shall be proved or acknowledged, and recorded in the manner therein prescribed.

§ 2. Such association is authorised to erect and construct, from time to time, the necessary fixtures for such lines of telegraph, upon, over or under any of the public roads, streets, and highways; and through, across, or under any of the waters within the limits of this state, subject to the right of the owner or owners thereof to full compensation for the same. And if any such association cannot agree with the owner or owners of any land taken or used by such association for the compensation to be paid therefor, it shall and may be lawful for such associations, or such owner or owners, to apply to the county court of the county in which such lands are, by petition, stating the facts in relation thereto; and after the expiration of twenty-one days from the filing of such petition, and notice thereof given to such association, or to the owner or owners of such land, as the case may be, it shall be the duty of the said court to appoint five disinterested persons, to make a just and equitable assessment and appraisal in the manner directed by the said recited act, of the loss or damage, if any, which may have been, or is likely to be sustained by the owner or owners of such land taken or used as aforesaid, whilst such land shall have been, or shall continue to be used as aforesaid. And such assessments and appraisal shall determine the annual rent or compensation to be paid by such associations for such use, or in lieu thereof, a sum in gross as the compensation for allowing the fixtures belonging to such association permanently to continue, and the same to be repaired, improved, and renewed, or removed, from time to time, as such association may require.

§ 3. Every such company owning or using a line of electric telegraph, partly within and partly beyond the limits of this state, shall render to the proper officer a true report of the cost to such company of their works within this state; and the stock of such company, in amount equal to such cost, or the dividends therof, shall be subject to taxation in the same manner, and at the same rate, as the stocks or dividends of other companies incorporated by the laws of this state, are subject.

§ 4. The liability of any share or stockholder in any company organised under this act, as provided for in the fact, of which this is an amendment, shall only apply to the amount due by any such share or stockholder in such company, and unpaid, on or for any such share or stock.

Four Chapters of a White Lie.

CHAPTER I.

'How unfortunate! Mamma writes me that she cannot find her emerald bracelet. Now I don't dare tell that I have lost it, as your remember I did, returning from Mrs. Lacy's party. It is the last gift of my father, and very valuable. I'm sure I don't know what to do.' And Lena Atley threw the letter impatiently down.

'It's well you are here in New York,' replied her queenly cousin, shaking the heavy curls from her shoulders, as she looked up unwillingly from her book—'what does aunty say?'

'She wishes to know if by mistake, I could have brought it on, or if I remember when last saw it, and where?'

'Easily answered, little simpleton. Just tell, in a general way, that you wonder at her for thinking you so careless as to bring it here, and say before you went to the party, you saw it fastened to the toilet cushion in her room—you know you dressed there.'

'But won't that be a falsehood, almost?' urged Lena timidly.

'A fiddlestick, you little puritan; where's the lie? You havn't brought it to New York, have you? You did see it on your mother's table didn't you? You must learn to distinguish between a prudent way of getting over a matter, and sheer falsehood, you little country bit of profection.'

Lena seemed satisfied—she could not brook the sneer of her beautiful cousin, nor could she bear the term puritanical, which her fashionable New York relatives styled her acts of conscience. The letter was written, sealed and sent; but that night, in the midst of splendid throngs, Lena's heart beat with shame for the deed at which her conscience rebelled.

CHAPTER II.

'Mary, come here, I want to see you about a moment,' and Mrs. Atley entered her dressing room, followed by her handsome, innocent little chamber-maid.

'Mary, I have lost my emerald bracelet,' she said firmly, when she had seated herself. 'I want to know if you remember seeing it?'

Mary turned pale; she was extremely timid, and the thought that she might be even suspected, frightened her exceedingly.

When she answered her voice trembled. 'Indeed ma'am, I don't think I have seen it at all.'

'But, Mary,' and the tone grew sterner, 'Lena writes that the last time she saw it, it was in this room, on last Wednesday week. That night I left you here alone.—I am positive that no one but yourself has since been in. I missed it that very night—tell me if you have taken it—find it—return it to me, and I will forgive you.'

'Oh! Mrs. Atley, indeed, indeed I don't know anything about it,' exclaimed the girl, beginning to wring her hands with a look of terror; 'I never was a thief—my mother will tell you that. She brought me up to the Sunday School and good things. I'd sooner spill my heart's blood than touch it. O! now I remember. 'It seems as if Miss Lena had had it,' repeated the girl, trembling so she could hardly stand upright. 'I do think—I believe I saw it on her arm; yes, I am sure Miss Lena must have taken it to wear to the party.'

'That is the coolest impudence I have heard of yet,' exclaimed Mrs. Atley, her lips quivering with passion; 'I might have forgiven you had you been candid and told the truth. But the charges you make against my daughter—the soul of candor itself—places you entirely out of the reach of my sympathy. I am astonished! confounded at your duplicity, no less than convinced by your manner. No honest girl would blush and stammer and then turn pale—to turn her guilt upon another. I shall dismiss you if you do not restore the bracelet. I heard you speak of it, I saw you look at it that evening, but the thought never entered my mind that you would steal. If I do not get the bracelet soon, very soon, I shall write to William Harmon, and do you think he will marry you when he hears that you have been suspected as a thief? You may take to morrow to restore my property—you know I do as I say.'

With a cheek as white as any corpse, and a wild light in her glazed eyes, Mary tottered from the room, felt her way along the entry (for darkness seemed to have fallen upon her) up the stairs, into her own little chamber. There, falling headlong on the floor, she laid in silent, bitter agony.—Her spirit was almost broken. Where now were all her happy dreams? Dashed like a temple by some strong wind—their ruins choked up her heart. The long sunny road was darkened. The little cottage with its honeysuckle, its garden, its fruit trees, struck by pitiless lightening. The priest and the altar, the manly form of William, with his honest, dark eyes—shut from her guileless thought by the cloud of doubt, or horrid accusation. Visions of officers, and jails, and witnesses, and disgrace, floated before her.

For a long time she had laid there; but at length, slowly rising, her brain beating with a dull, heavy throb, she clasped her hands, and broke into the wildest grief.

'I'll never go home, it'll kill mother!—The little children shall never think that they had a thief for a sister; and as for William—God help me; we going to be married so soon—and I was so happy; but I can't meet his eyes now—I can't prove anything—I was in the dressing room; I did ask Miss Lena what did the pretty thing cost, and when she said five hundred dollars, I did say, 'O how nice it would be to have all that money.' O, I'm ruined—I'm ruined! Mother, did I leave home for this?'

Away, in the dark night, has that poor girl gone—the burden of suspicion crushing her life out. On, on, she hurries—she so fearful of the dark—she who had nursed a hundred little superstitions of ghosts and fairies. Night with its cloudy arms, welcomes her now, and covers her innocent shame from the sight of even inanimate things by the way-side.

CHAPTER III.

'Mrs Lacy's compliments, ma'am, and here is the bracelet Miss Lena wore. She heard she had lost it, ma'am; but hadn't no idea it was in her house—but it dropped between the cushions on the sofa, the express, and she's very glad she's found it, ma'am; for Miss Lena felt so bad.'

'That poor child,' was Mrs. Atley's first exclamation as she took the bracelet mechanically, and returning to her room, placed it upon her toilet table; 'I have almost broken her heart. I have sent her away despairing. I shall never forgive myself.'

And had her own daughter deceived her thus. The thought was death to her fond hopes. She threw the bauble on her dressing table, and sat down, overwhelmed with distress. Her first thought was to write to Lena her second to inform poor Mary by letter, as speedily as possible, and she had just seated herself for the latter purpose, when a hurried knock startled her, and a pale woman stood before her exclaiming, with startling voice and manner:—'Mrs. Atley, where have you sent my child?—For God's sake where have you my child? I heard nothing from her,—I came to see if she was sick, and the servants tell me she is gone—GONE WHERE? Tell me or I shall go crazy?'

Her distress was fearful when she had listened to Mrs. Atley's broken words of self accusation. 'Where shall I go? where shall I find my poor child? Oh, Mrs. Atley, I hold you responsible for the life of the poor girl. And she had such a dread of the jail—and she hadn't any courage at all! Where shall find my poor child?—Oh, Mary, where are you this hour?'

It is a fearful thing to charge the innocent unjustly—to listen not to the prayers of the helpless—to judge with harshness those who have none to plead their cause.

CHAPTER IV.

'Why Lena, you look like a ghost. An hour ago your cheeks were as red as roses. What is the matter, my petite cousin?'

Lena said nothing; and her face assumed a deadlier hue, as she pointed to a single paragraph.

'I have found the bracelet; but I fear its loss and your deception has caused the death of poor Mary Grey. Nobody knows where she is; we have been searching for two days; and have come to the conclusion that she has destroyed her life through fear and too great sensitiveness My child, what an awful lesson is this!'

The evil counseller kept silence. She dared not reply when charged with tempting her to wear the bracelet, and then to cover her fault. In an hour Lena was ready and on her way home. Early in the morning she was driven rapidly through thick woods. The sun slept red and warm on the wayside flowers. The birds sang as if they were singing the five jubilee song of creation. Everything seemed happy and holy but that one young heart.

She had reached within a mile of her mother's house, when a haggard face passed close by the carriage. She knew it. It was poor Mary's lover; and a deathly faintness dimmed her vision as, on looking back she saw him crouching forward and beating his forehead, as if in great agony and utter despair.

Other voices were heard, and the tramp of many feet. And they bore near the carriage, that slackened in speed as the mournful groupe passed by, a limp dead body.—It was poor Mary; she had perished in the woods, a victim to angry suspicion, and a 'harmless white lie!'

'Come Unto Me'

THERE is not an act, emotion, or habit enjoined in the Word of God which has not a present and immediate tendency to promote our true happiness. Take an example: 'Come unto me,' says Christ, 'take my yoke upon you; learn of me.' Now, what can be more truly blessed than to 'come' in the way of intimate, free and loving communion to the most excellent and admirable of all beings, the very fountain, in fact, of being, the inspiror of all intellect, the author of all virtue. He who was preannounced to the world in those sublime titles, 'Wonderful Counsellor,' 'The Mighty God,' 'The Everlasting Father,' 'The Prince of Peace'—to come to him as our 'friend,' teacher,' 'brother,' 'Redeemer!'

Should a subject receive a direct and unquestionable invitation from a great and powerful monarch, couched in those words alone, 'Come to me,' would he not conclude that some deep and unrevealed designs for his benefit were intimated in the very terms of that brief and confidential invitation? Would it not awaken within him boundless hopes of riches, offices, and titles of honor? And now, when the Lord of glory, the King of kings, says to us with his own lips, "Come unto me," (for the same words of condescension and love which he addressed to us while here on earth still reach us from his eternal throne, which is now 'a throne of grace,") why should he invite sinful, degraded, and alienated creatures to so familiar an approach, unless he entertains some vast and incomprehensible purposes of love and royal bounty towards them? Oh, there is a whole gospel in those three words' 'Come unto me!'

So of the rest of these precepts: 'Take my yoke upon you.' What more happy, secure, and noble than to be in subjection—voluntary and self assumed subjection—to the Source of all law, 'the blessed and only Potentate!' The subjects of an earthly monarch are protected by the very sway and majesty that governs them. What harm, then, can approach the subjects of Him who 'rideth in the armies of heaven and amongst the inhabitants of the earth?'

'Learn of me.' What so compendious a method of wisdom as to 'learn' of Him who is 'the Wisdom of God!' 'Never man spake like that man." No other teacher comparable to the 'Teacher sent from God!"

Thus, the very duties of the gospel are blessings. And yet blessings manifold, rich, and eternal are promised to the performance of them. 'I will give you rest, ye shall find rest unto your souls.' And so of all the other virtues of the gospel. They are 'twice blessed'—blessed in the performance, blessed beyond all conception or hope in the reward. Oh, then, 'taste and see that the Lord is good!" 'Behold! happy is the man that find-th wisdom, and the man that getteth understanding; for the merchandise of it is better than the merchandise of silver, and the gain thereof than the most fine gold. She is more precious than rubies, and all the things that can desire are not to be compared to her. Length of days is in her right hand, and in her left hand riches and honor. She is a tree of life to all that lay hold upon her" So that 'the tree of life" is again planted in this bleak world; and how fragrant the bloosoms of present hope, how refreshing the shadow of present consolation, and how rich beyond conception the ripe fruits of future glory from that tree of life!

The Turks as a Warlike People.

It is an impression quite current based probably on the lack of real knowledge, rather than on any actual facts—that the Turks are a degenerate people, easily to be overcome and incapable, either in military skill or personal endurance, for a severe war. The facts are quite otherwise. The following from the N. Y. Courier not only puts this matter right, but imparts some very interesting information:

"It is an egregious mistake to suppose that the races and tribes which make up the Turkish nation are either degenerate or effeminate. We have been among them; we have seen them; we know them. There it not in all Europe or in Western Asia a people capable of waging such desperate warefare. They are strong and hardy in body, and are skillful in the use of weapons. Their religious fanaticism is easily excited and when once fairly aroused, it knows no bounds. In a war they deem sacred, they rush to a bloody death as the surest road to Paradise. Thus their Koran teaches, and with them faith is no idle word—it is fate. This very Russia, at whose name all Europe trembles, they have before met alone and single-handed. Through the whole of the last century the possession of Turkey was the constant object of Russian ambition, but yet in spite of several wars that object was not gained. From 1808 to 1812 the Muscovites, sometimes bringing two hundred thousand men into the field, fought the Turks, but gained little. At Roudschouk they sustained one of the worst defeats of modern times, so that not without reason did the Turkish General write to the Sultan that he had taken enough infidel heads to make a bridge for the souls of the faithful from Earth to Heaven. From 1825 to 1828, Turkey held out against the efforts of all the principal powers in favor of the Greeks, and it the last year conducted two campaigns against the Russians without aid from any quarter. The very fact that the Turkish race penetrated from the deserts of Arabia to the banks of the Loire, and that it established in Europe an Empire which has endured four centuries—four centuries this very year—in spite of attacks again and again repeated by the two strongest of the military powers of Europe, shows an inherent vigor of no ordinary kind.

And Turkey now is in her decline. "I assert," said Lord Palmerston, not long since, in the House of Commons, "without fear of contradiction, that Turkey, so far from having gone back within the last thirty years, has made greater progress and improvement, in every possible way, than perhaps was ever made by any other country during the same period." With the advancing civilization of the Turks, their military skill and military resources have increased, and yet their temper has not become so softened by civilization, that it will not, when provoked, exhibit all its original fierceness. True, their religious spirit is not what it once was; it has lost its proselyting zeal, it wages no wars of conquest; but it lives; it feels; it can be goaded to madness; it can fight to the last extremity.—Turkey is yet able to repeat the deeds of the Osmanleys. And it must be remembered, too, that she has allies in all the Mahommedans of Western Asia and Northern Africa—who far exceed in their aggregate even the multitudinous hordes of the Muscovite empire—From Tunis, Egypt, Syria and Persia—from the sands of Libya to the snows of the Caucasus,—contingents are already on the march for the scene of strife.

We believe that a war between Turkey and Russia is inevitable, and such has been our unvarying conviction from the outset. The Four Powers may side with Turkey or they desert her—it matters not, the war will speedily come. Russia may muster an overwhelming force, may make a demonstration which it would seem madness to resist—it matters not, the Turks will fight, and fight desperately. The Sultan, surrounded as he is by the representatives of Western Europe now "beseeching," and now "besieging," cannot yield if he would. He could scarcely say yes before he would find his brother on the throne. He has not yet given the least sign of yielding. He has exhibited a spirit throughout, that will secure the respect of the whole civilized world. He is in the right. Even those who have been laboring to move him from his position would freely admit it. Being right, he has a claim to the moral support of Christendom. True he is a Mohommedan, but in all Continental Europe there is not one country in which all religions are so freely tolerated. Russia calls itself Christian, but its religion is not the religion of Christ for it is a proscribing religion. It is a religion which makes its converts at the point of the bayonet. It is a religion which shows mercy to neither Protestants nor Catholics—neither Estonia nor Poland.—Russia would not be in posession of Turkey a week, before all the Protestant mission establishments, which have accomplished such great benefits, would be visited by the same exterminating stroke which fell with such fatal effects upon the missions in Georgia. Turkey, whether she is aided or not in the coming struggle by any of the Four Powers, will have the sympathy of all men of just, liberal and Christian principle; and if she falls, she will fall with honor.

Some of the softs here who have long worked hard to lay out the whigs finally own up that its no use. But they say 'if they can only catch a hunker running for office they will knife him.' The softs look as ugly as a thunder cloud and say they have 'spotted' every hard. The 'Delegate from Clinton' gives notice that he has made up a list of them to send to his masters at Washington.

The Union of Lakes, the Union of Lands,
The Union of States none can sever,
The Union of Hearts, the Union of Hands.
The Flag of Our UNION—Forever."

ELECTION RETURNS.—Through the kindness of our friends we are enabled to give nearly the entire county this week for which they will accept our most cordial thanks.

Gratifying Results.

Owing to a very severe snow storm in this section of the State there was not more than half the usual vote cast, yet the result is most glorious, and the victory is complete. Essex County—glorious, ever reliable. Old Essex—is right side up and as she grows in years becomes deeper and deeper imbued in the whig faith. Some towns are not exactly what the friends there desired, but under all the circumstances the result in every town is most satisfactory and gratifying. The whigs of the state will send greetings to their brothers in Essex, their cordial thanks for this renewed expression of their fidelity.

And the Hunkers too, they have astonished every one. They have met the enemy and taken him in his own boasted stronghold. Against official patronage, and official dictation, against money wrung from the hard earnings of poor clerks, and against the boasted circulation of '40J' Soft Organs, the hunkers lead the softs in Essex County by a large majority. We need not say, after all we have done to aid that result that we are truly gratified.

All who regard honor and principle in politics, all who despise the conduct of a political campaign on appeals to the baser passions, all who hate Van Burenism, with a mortal hatred, truly rejoice in this result It is also a just, and deserved rebuke to the assumptions and attempted dictations of an official ninny. All honor to the real Republican Democrats who have thus boldly met and put down corruption and official dictation.

The Glens Falls Republican, Hunker, of Nov. 6, contains an extraordinary article. It says, "We speak advisedly when we say, we know Mr. Rogers is as good a National Democrat as there is in the State." We also speak advisedly when we say we know that Mr. Rogers was free to pledge himself to any person, or party. That the Free Democrats may realise the utter falsity on his representations to them on his visit to Jay, Wilmington and Keene, and that the people of the entire district may now fully perceive, we shall publish the entire article above referred to next week."

☞The delegate from Clinton is the most facetious man we know of. With imperturbable gravity he is telling around the streets that he has made his returns to Washington of every Hard—that they are politically dead. Awful! We should think his feelings would revolt at such cruelty.—Made returns to Washington! We cannot express our contempt for such silly egotism.

ARMY AND NAVY.—Our neighbor (somewhat removed from us, to be sure.) of the Essex Co. Republican. quotes an article from our paper under this title, in order to state his dissent from our views of increasing the army and navy. He thinks the army already too large, and hopes the chief magistrate will not recommend an increase. But we will let him speak for himself, tho' we must say, he has in our judgment not ruminated profoundly on the subject under discussion.—United States Service Journal.

If not "profoundly" yet earnestly. We are for citizen soldiers, for the enforcement of the laws, the suppression of insurrections, repelling invasions, and the defence and prosecution of our rights as a nation, and as individuals, and opposed to more than the skeleton of a standing army,—an organization merely,—with educated officers,—but soldiers sufficient only to take care of the public property. Our convictions are the teachings of history. We have some fine corps of Uniformed Militia in this vicinity to whom we commend the Journal, but when it advocates an increase of the army we "dissent." Is our cotemporary a "regular," or a "volunteer?" Or in other words, was he not educated for the army?

☞We hear a very general desire expressed by the Whigs and Hunkers that the present Editor of the Administration Organ at this place may be rotained in that position. It is thought that by another year there wont be any softs left. It is equally as generally believed that if there had only been another such an Organ, this year the result would have been far more significant than it is.

The result certainly is such as to teach that Editor the utter insignificance in which he is held by this community.

Hon. Geo. Richards.—We think we may safely congratulate this gentleman and the people of the District on his election. He is 'every inch a man'—a noble specimen of a man of sense and a man of the people.—The people of the Western towns in this county who are interested in appropriations for local improvements may rely upon Mr. R. at all times as a faithful and able friend.

☞We hope what few barnburners there in this vicinity will make themselves as comfortable as possible under their severe

The Result.

The result in this town is triumphantly apparent in our vote. Our most sanguine expectations could not have anticipated such a result, fighting as we have been all through the campaign at great disadvantage, the Democratic Press of the county being retained as an 'administration organ.' The Press and government officials have exerted their influence with unabating zeal and pertinacity night and day—without intermission, and every epithet that would cast reflection on the Democratic ticket, was found in their bolting press—its Editor well knowing we could furnish no reply. Mistatements the most gross and apparent have been published from week to week, calculated to mislead the unsuspecting and confiding democracy of this section,—who placed their confidence in a political viper who sacrificed all that they hold dear in politics—principle—for a paltry office. But his efforts have proved unavailing, and the sterling democracy of Essex county occupy a high and honorable position in the democratic ranks of the Union, instead of wallowing in the mire of abolitionism and sectionalism to which his 'harmonious' policy would consign them. He and his 'short boy' coadjutors stand convicted by the democracy of Essex County of the most flagrant treachery, and nothing can save them from the ignominious grave to which their suicidal policy has consigned them: We could wish the people would judge with leniency, but the betrayal of confidence reposed is not easily forgiven.

The course pursued by these 'soft heads,' as one of the 'sovereigns' pungently dubbed them at the polls, has thrown the State into the hands of our old enemy, the whigs, and the Canal Board will have the expending of twelve millions of dollars, which but for the short sightedness of these 'bolters' and political husketers, would be in the hands of a democratic economical Canal Board, who would expend it, as we trust the whigs will, with fidelity to the great interests of our stupendous internal improvements. It is to be deplored that these 'bolters' let there old animosities and prejudices carry them so far as to defeat the democracy and lose their ascendency in the State, after such a sweeping majority as we received last fall. It is incomprehensible. But still it is true, and by the mulish stubborness and wicked dishonesty of the free soil leaders, and the apathy of a portion of the party, the National Democracy that has so often bared its honest breast in many a hard fought battle, has been defeated, and the government of the State thrown into the hands of the whigs, by a base and currupt faction of political jockeys, and still with the coolest impudence imaginable we are called 'bolters' and charged with defeating the democratic—Heaven save the mark!—ticket. We had hoped that come to the polls they would stifle their free soil heresis and bolting proclivities and vote right—for the democratic ticket instead of their 'short boy' bantling, and by works and deeds earn an honorable place in the National Democratic ranks. But we are hopelessly disappointed, and pass them over to Fred Douglass and other distinguished gentlemen of the same kidney.

The result in this District, right under the nose and guardianship of the 'administration organ.' is highly gratifying, and but for the wolfish cry of 'support the administration,' and wicked deception, the 'soft heads' would not have got 200 votes all told. Every artifice was used by them to seduce the unsuspecting from their allegiance to the democracy, and in many instances their machinations succeeded, to the sincere regret of the individual imposed upon. In this district we lead them eight votes, but owing to the indisposition of our active men at the upper district, they had it all their own way, we receiving only 4 votes. The State ticket is a fair test of the relative strength of both parties, although the Gazette, with a pertinacity worthy of a better cause, endeavors to prove that we received the support of whigs. This is unqualifiedly false with the exception of three silver-greys, and every vote cast aside from these were democratic, in every sense of the term, as the Editor of that paper well knows; but his eager desire to give an excuse for the expressive vote cast against him, has made him sacrifice his claim to veracity, which we very much regret.—There was no trading of Mr. Rogers for Mr. Watson, but after the shameless coalition of the former with the long-heeled abolitionists, for a few paltry votes, National Democrats saw plainly they could not consistently vote for such a man, and for that reason repudiated him. The vote in favor of Mr Watson was the free, unbought expression of his neighbors who knew the man and appreciated his worth, and we do not wonder at the wrath our neighbor exhibits, considering the amount of abuse he has heaped upon him in the last six weeks—It is a rebuke full of significant meaning. Another fact worth noticing is that in spite of all the appliances of official patronage and filthy abuse, WINSLOW C. WATSON received eighty DEMOCRATIC votes out of the 114 polled. Comment on the influence of 'organs' is unnecessary.

In the State, so far as heard from, the Hards lead; the Softs handsomely, and in Schoharie county the Hards have a majority over the whigs of 1000, while the Softs have but 100 votes in the county. In the cities we have not, as a general thing, the vote we expected, owing to the official patronage, the rowdies and unprincipled knaves that are bought and sold, have gone the Soft ticket, and in New York city they traded everything to get votes for their State Ticket, and after all, with the assistance of every department of the government, and Tammany Hall influence; we lead them in the city on the State Ticket, and have elected 3 Senators, while they have but 2. In this county we shall have two to one on the State ticket, and Watson and Mather are considerably ahead. The result in ten towns is as follows; Hards, five hundred and eleven; Softs, two hundred and fifty-one. The vote was very light, owing to the severe storm. In '48 the barnburners led us in the county 117. Official intermeddling and puppyism is not sanctioned by the lion-hearted democracy of Essex county. They are few, but of he clear Adamantine material.

HARD SHELL.

GOOD.—The celebrated Dodge in a communication to the 'Museum,' of which he is the Editor and proprietor, gives a pleasing incident which occurred on a recent passage up the Hudson. We have been 'thar' and know all about the 'Captn,' the 'clerk,' the 'steward,' the 'nigga,' and the 'room A.' We hardly know which to admire most, the conception of the joke, or the admirable manner in which it is told.—Massa Champlin' is a whole-soul'd young gentleman of about 23, and as fond of fun, fishing and hunting, as one man can contain.

We remained in New York one day, and then took passage in the Rip Van Winkle (a night boat) for Troy. The boat was crowded with a goodly number of passengers, and as Capt. Farnham is a great favorite on the river, we all passed a glorious evening. At ten o'clock we called for the key to our state-room, and, preceded by an ebony darkey and a brilliant light, we entered room A., a spacious and magnificently-furnished apartment. We were struck with admiration and amazement, and turned to the servant for information.

'Yah! yah! yah! massa looks kinder puzzled,' snickered Cæsar, 'but, yer see, dis is de bridal chamber, an' I specs I overheard Massa Champlin, de clerk, tell de steward as how you was an ole bach, an' he would come de joke on ye, an' put ye in de bridal bed. I hopes ye'll hab a good rest, sah.'

With these words, the shade of darkness disappeared, and left us to contemplate our situation. Being too tired to contemplate it long, however, we disrobed, and courted the loving embrace of Morpheus.

At daylight next morning, we arose from our couch more fatigued than on the evening previous for Cupid was at work with us all night, exhibiting to our wondering gaze his panorama of loving eyes, smiling lips, rounded chests, vanilla ice-creams, baskets of luscious peaches, and rolls of baby linen. We owe Champlin a new hat for that night's lodging.

We tried hard to be offended, and looked serious the next morning, but the joker sweetened our acidity by stating that he hoped we enjoyed our night's rest, and promising us a free passage up or down the river and the use of the bridal chamber—as soon as we get married.

☞Grace Greenwood, the popular and gifted American poetess and author, was married on monday evening, at 8 o'clock, in the village church adjoining her parents' residence at New Brighton Bever county, Pa., to Mr. Leander K. Lippincott, of Philadelphia.—[Ex.

The same mail which brought these happy tidings brought also 'The Little Pilgrim,' a paper for boys and girls edited by 'Grace Greenwood.' From the well known ability of the editress we are sure it will be the best thing of the kind in the country and we are equally sure that every little boy and girl will want to take that paper for they must all have become familiar with the name of Grace Greenwood. We have fallen in love with her ourself, and we feel just like saying 'Dear Grace.' The Little Pilgrim is 50 cts. a year, or 10 copies for $4 Address, L. K. Lippincott, (phobos, what a name,) Philadelphia.

A RELAPSE.—We regret to hear that Senator Rogers has had another attack of the "rheumatiz" since the news began to come in. He very sensibly, however, ascribes his defeat to that rent he received in trying to straddle from the Hunkers to the Abolitionists. He could make no speed after that, and his ridiculous flight only excited ridicule.

☞We would call attention to the advertisement in another column, of the concert by Prof. JOHN H. S. MOORE, and his pupils. We hope our citizens will do their duty, and encourage by their presence this laudable effort, on the part of Mr. Moore, to give them a series of concerts during the winter.

☞The whole whig ticket in Clinton County is elected with exception of Dist. Atty. Guy the long-heeled abolition candidate being elected by a small majority.—Lot Chamberlain's majority is 700.

☞Oswegatchie gave a majority of 590 for James.

As to the importance and usefulness of the above named instruments and their beneficial effects, their pecular mechanism and superiority over other instruments of the same name, I need not say anything. They are as well known by physicians, and the multitude of persons that have had occasion to test them in this northern section of country, that I deem it not important to introduce a long catalogue of certificates; yet I have abundant evidence in my possession to justify me in all I claim or affirm, and deem it a privilege to give references to any who wish to make inquiries.

"Man Know Thyself."

An Invaluable Book for 25 Cents.

"EVERY FAMILY SHOULD HAVE A COPY."

20,000 Copies sold in less than 5 months. A new edition, revised and improved, just issued.

Dr. Hunter's Medical Manual and Hand Book for the Afflicted—

Containing an outline of the origin, progress, treatment and cure of every form of disease, contracted by promiscuous sexual intercourse, by self abuse or by sexual excess, with advice for their prevention, written in a familiar style, avoiding all medical technicalities, and everything that would offend the ear of decency, from the result of some twenty years successful practice, exclusively devoted to the cure of diseases of a delicate or private nature

To which is added, receipts for the cure of the above diseases, and a treatise on the causes, symptoms and cure of the Fever and Ague

Testimony of the Prof of Obstetrics in Penn. College, Philadelphia.—"Dr. Hunter's Medical Manual."—The author of this work unlike the majority of those works who advertise to cure the diseases of which it treats, is a graduate of one of the best Colleges in the United States. It affords me pleasure to recommend him to the unfortunate, or to the victim of malpractice, as a successful and experienced practitioner, in whose honor and integrity they may place the greatest confidence.

JOSEPH LONGSHORE M. D.

From A Woodward M. D., of Penn. University, Philadelphia—It gives me pleasure to add my testimony to the professional ability of the author of the "Medical Manual." Numerous cases of diseases of the Genital Organs, some of them of long standing have come under my notice, in which his skill has been manifest in restoring to perfect health, in some instances where the patient has been considered beyond medical aid. In the treatment of Seminal weakness, or disarrangement of the functions produced by Self-abuse, or Excess of venery, I do not know his superior in the profession. I have been acquainted with the Author some thirty years, and deem it no more than justice to him as well as a kindness to the unfortunate victim of early indiscretion, to recommend him as one, in whose professional skill and integrity they may safely confide themselves. ALFRED WOODWARD, M D.

"This is, without exception, the most comprehensive and intelligible work published on the class of diseases of which it treats. Avoiding all technical terms, it addresses itself to the reason of its readers. It is free from all objectionable matter and no parent, however fastidious, can object to placing it in the hands of his sons. The author has devoted many years to the treatment of the various complaints treated of, and with too little breath to puff, and too little presumption to impose, he has offered to the world at the merely nominal price of 25 cents, the fruits of some 20 years most successful practice."—Herald.

"No teacher or parent should be without the knowledge imparted in this invaluable work. It would save years of pain, mortification and sorrow to the youth under their charge."—People's Advocate.

A Presbyterian clergyman in Ohio, in writing of "Hunter's Medical Manual," says: "Thousands upon thousands of our youth, by evil example and influence of the passions, have been led into the habit of self pollution without realizing the sin and fearful consequences upon themselves and their posterity. The constitutions of thousands who are raising families have been enfeebled if not broken down, and the do not know the cause or the cure. Anything that can be done so to enlighten and influence the public mind as to check, and ultimately to remove this widespread source of human wretchedness, would confer the greatest blessing next to the religion of Jesus Christ, on the present and coming generations. Intemperance (or the use of intoxicating drinks,) though it has slain thousands upon thousands, is not a greater scourge to the human race. Accept my thanks on behalf of the afflicted, and, believe me, your co-worker in the good work you are so actively engaged in."

One copy, (securely enveloped,) will be forwarded free of postage to any part of the United States for 25 cents, or 6 copies for $1.—Address (post paid) COSDEN & Co., publishers, Box 196. Philadelphia. 478y

FRAUD!

ALL who want AXES of the real COLLINS & Co. make should be particular to notice the stamps, as there are various counterfeits and imitations stamped Collins and labelled much like ours, which are fraudulently sold in some parts of the United States as our manufacture. They are made in different parts of the country by various axe-makers, and are generally of very inferior quality. The genuine Collins axes which have acquired such an extensive reputation are invariably stamped "COLLINS & CO. HARTFORD," and each axe has a printed label with my signature.—It is now more than TWENTY-FIVE YEARS since we commenced the business with the stamp of "Collins & Co. Hartford," and I do not know of any other axe-maker by the name of COLLINS in the United States.

THE MARRIAGE STATE;

Shall Happiness and Health, or Misery and Sickness, attend it?

MOST STARTLING CONSIDERATIONS!

Reflections for the Thoughtful.

Strange that countless human beings exist and drag through life as do the beasts of the field, or the insects of the earth, evincing no more thought or reflection than though the noble faculties of mind were not vouchsafed to them.

Many such are husbands and fathers, upon whom are dependent the health, the well-being, and the happiness of a confiding and affectionate wife, with perhaps a family of children.

HOW OFTEN IT HAPPENS THAT THE

WIFE LINGERS FROM YEAR TO YEAR

In that pitiable condition as not even for one day to feel the happy and exhilerating influence incident to the enjoyment of health.

She may not be an invalid confined to her bed, or even to her room; as her pride, ambition and energy induce and nerve her to take personal charge of her household, even when her health will not admit of it; but she is nevertheless perceptibly sinking from day to day, and always ailing.

Thus, day after day, and month after month transpire. Her health daily sinks, till finally even the hope of recovery no longer remains. And thus

THE BLOOMING BRIDE,

But a few years ago in the flush of health and youth, and buoyancy of spirits, rapidly, and apparently inexplicably, becomes a feeble, sickly, debilitated wife, with frame emaciated, nerves unstrung, spirits depressed, countenance bearing the impress of suffering, and an utter physical and mental prostration.

Sometimes this deplorable change may and does arise from organic or constitutional causes. But oftener, by far oftener, to gross and inexcusable ignorance of the simplest and plainest rules of health as connected with the marriage state, the violation of which entails disease, suffering and misery, not only to the wife, but often

Hereditary Complaints upon the Children

"UNTO THE THIRD AND FOURTH GENERATION," Transmitting CONSUMPTION, SCROFULA, HYPOCHONDRIA, INSANITY, GOUT, KING'S EVIL, and other diseases, as a

DREADFUL INHERITANCE from the Parents.

And must this continue? Shall we be wise in all that concerns the cattle of our fields, our horses, our sheep, our cows, our oxen, the nature and character of the soil we possess, the texture and quality of our goods and merchandise; but in all that concerns ourselves as human beings, with human functions and passions, subject to great derangement, involving our future peace and happiness—in all that concerns the health and welfare of the wife of our affections, and the mother of our children; in all that concerns the mental and physical well being of those children, we should be immersed in the darkest and most

BENIGHTED IGNORANCE,

AS CULPABLE AS INEXCUSABLE!

How long shall this ignorance prevail so productive of its bitter fruits? How long shall the wife and mother be ignorant of the nature, character and causes of the various womb and sexual complaints, embittering her days by suffering—suffering often prolonged to years, eventuating in a complication of diseases utterly and hopelessly incurable? Shall we for ever close our eyes to the results of physiological science by which we may arrive at an understanding of ourselves as men and women, subject to serious life-long enduring diseases, and perpetuating them to our children.

LET EVERY WIFE AND HUSBAND PONDER!

No husband or wife need be ignorant of what concerns them most to know to secure their health and happiness. That knowledge is contained in a little work entitled

THE MARRIED WOMAN'S PRIVATE MEDICAL COMPANION,

Henry's Invigorating Cordial,

PURELY VEGETABLE IN ITS COMPOSITION.

This invaluable Cordial, is extracted from Herbs and Roots, which have been found after years of experience, by the most skillful Physicians, to be possessed of qualities most beneficial in the diseases for which it is recommended, and hence whilst it is presented to the public, as an efficious remedy it is also known to be of that character on which reliance may be placed as to its safety. In cases of Impotency, Hoemorrhages, Disordered sterility, Menstruation, or Suppression of the Menses, Fluor Albus or Whites, or all

DEBILITY

Arising from any cause, such as weakness from sickness, where the patient has been confined to bed for some time, for Females after Confinement, Abortion or Miscarriage, this Cordial cannot be excelled in its salutary effects; or in loss of Muscular Energy, Irritability, Physical Prostration, Seminal Weakness, Palpitation of the Heart, Indigestion, Sluggishness, Decay of the Procreative Functions, Nervousness, &c., where a TONIC Medicine is required, it will be found equal, if not supperior to any Compound ever used.

TO FEMALES

Henry's Invigorating Cordial, is one of the most invaluable Medicines in the many Complaints to which Females are subject. It assists nature to brace the whole system, check excesses, and creates renewed health and happiness. Less suffering, disease and unhappiness among Ladies, would exist, where they generally to adopt the use of this Cordial. Ladies who are debilitated by those obstructions which females are liable to are restored by the use of a bottle or two, to bloom and to vigor.

YOUNG MEN.

That solitary practice, so fatal to the existence of man and it is too young who are most apt to become its victims, from an ignorance of the danger to which they subject themselves, causes

NERVIOUS DEBILITY,

Weakness of the System, and Premature Decay. Many of you may now be suffering, misled as to the cause or source of disease. To those, then, who by excess have brought on themselves Premature impotency, Involuntary Seminal Emissions, Weakness and shrivelling of the Genital Organs, Nervous Affection, or any other consequences of unrestrained indulgence of the sensual passions, occasioning the necessity of renouncing the felicities of lessening both mental and bodily capacity, Hold! Henry's Invigorating Cordial, a Medicine that is purely Vegetable, will aid nature to restore those important functions to a healthy state, and will prove of service to you. It possesses rare virtues, is a general remover of disease, and strengthener of the system.

AS A TONIC MEDICINE,

it is unsurpassed. We do not place this Cordial on a footing with quack medicines, and, as is customary, append a long list of Recommendations, Certificates, &c., beginning with "Hear what the Preacher says," and such like; it is not necessary, for "Henry's Invigorating Cordial," only needs a trial to prove that it will accomplish all we say.

THE GENUINE "HENRY'S INVIGORATING CORDIAL."

is put up in 8 oz. Pannel Bottles, and is easily recognized by the Manufacturer's signature on the label of each Bottle, (to counterfeit which is forgery) as well as his private Seal on the cork of each Bottle.

☞ Sold for $2 per Bottle; Six for $8; $16 per dozen

Prepared only by S. E. COHEN, No. 3 Frank in Row, Vine Street, below Eighth, Philadelphia Pa; C. V. Clickener & Co., N. York, Wholesale Agents, TO WHOM ALL ORDERS MUST BE ADDRESSED. For Sale by all respectable Druggists and Merchants throughout the country. 495:ty

Having made use of the Compound Syrup of Yellow Dock Root, prepared by C. Morse and Co., either ourselves or in our families and finding it to be a very salutary and effectual preparation, we do most cheerfully recommend it to the public as a very valuable medicine.

Advr., Wm. Field, M. W. G. M. Cyrus Fisher, M. E. H. P. James Hutchinson G. S. Dea., V. J. Bates, Doct. Benj. Colby, and one hundred others of the most respectable families of Providence.

This certifies that I have for a number of years been acquainted with the composition and mode of manufacture of Morse's Compound Syrup of Yellow Dock Root. I have also been acquainted with its modus operandi in disease, and can say that in all respects it is admirably calculated to remedy that class of Diseases for which it was designed. It is especially valuable in Indigestion and all its attendant symptoms, it excites to healthy action the Liver, removes Torpor, and inactivity of this organ, and stimulates healthy action in all the system. Essex County, Treasurer's Office.

Notice is hereby given, that in pursuance of the powers in me vested by law, I shall, on the first Tuesday of December next, at Ten o'clock in the forenoon, at the Court House, in the town of Elizabethtown, in said county, commence selling at public vendue, so much of the several and respective lots, tracts, pieces or parcels of land in the annexed list described, as shall be necessary to pay all state, county, school, highway and road taxes assessed thereon in the year 1850 or prior thereto, that may then remain due on them respectively, together with the interest, costs and charges, which have arisen or accrued, or that may arise or accrue thereon, and shall accordingly sell, and continue from day to day to sell, until the whole shall be completed.

The purchasers are required to pay the purchase moneys within forty-eight hours after the last day of the sale, and will thereupon receive certificates of their purchase. And after the expiration of two years from said last day of sale, will be entitled to receive conveyances for the lands so purchased by them, respectively, unless the same shall have been duly redeemed.

Dated at Elizabethtown, this 1st day of September, 1853.

Obituary.

Died in Upper Jay, N. Y. Elvira, 2nd daughter of Doct. Alpheus and Jemima Morse, born Sept. 17, 1806, died Oct. 5, 1853. She was from her childhood the heir of affliction—inheriting in a large measure the frailties of her suffering Mother. She was often heard to remark in later years, that she could not remember a day in her life in which she could say she felt in sound health. In her 17th, year, during a revival of religion in Dorset, Vt. she gave herself to her Savior, as she hoped, and soon after joined the Congregational Church, in the same town, then under the pastoral care of Rev. Wm. Jackson, D. D. To the sincerity of her professed love to Christ, her whole after life bore witness. In all the relations of life which she sustained, she exemplified the bible injunction, 'be ye kindly affectioned one to another."

It cannot be recollected that she was ever known to utter a disrespectful or unkind word or look to either of her parents, to her stepmother, or any member of her fathers family. She was subjected to long periods of confinement to her bed by sickness, but never heard to utter a complaint, and very rarely a groan. She was peculiarly conscientious in all her walks and conversation. She was very much in prayer; a constant reader and ardent lover of her Bible; its truths were the food of her soul. The people of God were her people, her peculiar friends. She loved the gates of Zion, and prized above all price, her few opportunities of worshiping publicly with the people of God. Her sympathies were drawn out with revivals of religion. She was tenderly devoted to the interests of her relations. The prime exciting and proximate cause of the intellectual aberration which closed her life, was her deep solicitude for a little adopted orphan Niece, who was dangerously ill at the time, and whom she thought she had failed in, in faithfulness to instruct, and to impress religious truths as she desired. she scrupulously devoted a tenth of her scanty income to benevolent uses. The Union of States none can sever,

About Election.

The Result.—The whigs have carried almost everything. It is a more complete sweep than any one anticipated. They have two or three to one in the Senate and two to one in the House, with the Canal Board and a gain of several justices of the Supreme Court.

The Verdict—is in favor of the speedy Enlargement of the Canals and of Reform. Of the former we are certain and in the latter we trust the people will not be disappointed. Whigs have promised reform and let us have it in every department.

Reflections.—Whigs have assumed a heavy responsibility. As they shall meet it in the coming Legislature depends our future position as a party. Already do democrats begin to prophesy and plot our overthrow. Firebrands will be thrown into the Legislature to disturb the harmony and break down the majority of the whigs. There is danger alone from the very preponderance of numbers. In so large a majority it will be wonderful if there are not some who will lack prudence, but not ambition and vanity. There is danger that such will have schemes and measures which they will try to force upon the party for the very reason that its majority is large, but which if passed would, and ought to sink the party in infamy. We trust whigs will set their faces against such. If they are prudent, if they are conservative and yet meet the just demands of the people, if they carry out their pledges of Reform, cleansing the Augean Stable, and exposing the abuses of Chatfield & Co., the Empire State will be whig. But if they make fools of themselves, by giving way to injudicious and unjust legislation, to corruption and extravagance, to the hobby of some crazed fool, and to the thousand will o' the wisps that are passed upon a Legislature, they may expect an overthrow as sudden as their victory. Flushed with a brilliant victory, there is danger that it may be supposed that nothing can harm us. Nothing can be more fatal than the prevalence of over confidence and want of prudence.

CONGRATULATIONS.—We congratulate our readers on the glorious result of the late election, but we congratulate them more that it is passed. The elements introduced into our elections by the mercenary followers of Pierce, render them extremely unpleasant to those who would like to conduct them upon questions of state and—[illegible] but they tend to debase the public mind, and thus work an injury almost incurable. For these reasons we congratulate our readers that the election is passed, and also upon the result, in that it is a verdict of the people against the very identical evils of which we complain. It is a re-action of the public mind, and shows that if the people occasionally get off the track they will get on again, and that the danger of running on, is far greater than that of running off. We congratulate our readers that the people have become disgusted, and have resented in thunder tones, the 'artful dodges,' the base motives, the evasion of principles, and personalities by which the Pierce democracy attempt to carry elections. We congratulate them that the people of Clinton Co. have shaken off the Pierce democracy, that from Van Buren to the present time has weighed like an incubus upon their necks. And particularly that the Irish united cordially in this great reform. We congratulate them that Essex County stands proudly up to the old landmarks. And upon the election of a Senator in this district, who, while he is educated and a lawyer, is a man of sterling sense, a man of business, and a man of the people without the first particle of demagogueism. And that Warren County has contributed her share to this agreeable result. Duplicity, double-dealing, and dictation have received a merited rebuke. For all these things and in the hopes of a bright and happy future, we send greeting to our readers our sincere congratulations.

'Soft' Argument.—The only reason we heard urged by Softs why democrats should vote their ticket was,—'support the Administration.' This was the Alpha and Omega of their argument, "support the Administration.' Right or wrong, 'support the Administration.' It is treason in Monarchies for the people, even to think evil of the King, and in a Republic it is treason for the democracy to doubt the Administration. Out upon such democracy. It's a humbug!

☞We do not vouch for the truth of it, but it is surmised by some that Senator Rogers advised the Softs in some of the Southern towns to vote the Hard State ticket if Hunkers would vote for him. It may account for the result in some towns, and then 'agin' it may not.

☞The story on our first page will be concluded on the last week in this month. In the course of the fall we shall have one or two other stories of equal interest, but they will be concluded in one week.

The "Defeated Candidate."

We find the following "lines" in the Clinton County Whig, and transfer them to our columns with an illustration by "our Artist."—Ed. Rep.

LINES.

Supposed to have been written by a "Defeated Candidate" on hearing the result of the Late Election.

A PARODY.

I AM BEATEN—all my labors were in vain,
My fate I no longer can doubt,
From Schroon all around to Champlain,
I'm astonished how things have turned out.
Oh, POLITICS! where are thy charms
The office-seeker sees in thy face?
He but dwells in the midst of alarms,
For fear of not getting a place.

I am out of Democracy's reach,
Defeated where best I was known;
'Tis beyond the full power of Speech
To describe how completely I'm "DONE."
The Locos did heedlessly see,
My anxiety, labor, and toil,
Yet were so well acquainted with me
That they 'bolted' and voted for GEORGE.

Ye Short-boys, Barnburners, and Hards,
How sadly divided you've been,
Oh! could I but have dealt the political cards
You'd soon been united again.
These sorrows I'd not then have known,
Had ye but voted as often before,
The glorious result would have shown
My success, by five hundred or more.

Ye WHIGS, that now make me your sport,
Oh give, for Humanity's sake,
Some cordial of—(Sherry or Port,
For I really need "something to take.")
My friends will ye now and then send
A wish or a thought after me,
While I try to submissively bend
And bow down to the powers that be?

How strange that the cold water men,
The Rechabites, Sons, and some others
On whom I did firmly depend,
Should become such treacherous 'Brothers.'
When I think of the pledges I made
Concerning the "Maine Liquor Law,"
(Pro and Con, some have wickedly said.)
I weep for the Temperance cause.

But the Ides of November, at last,
Prove how ungrateful constituents are;
All my hopes and my fears are now past,
And I'll to SALT RIVER repair.
There's MERCY in an honorable place,
And MERCY encourages Merit
And reconciles me to my lot.

"Truth is Mighty & will Prevail."

Last fall the 'short boy' democracy attempted to force an unfit member of Congress upon the people because he had money out of which they could fleece him. This fall they have attempted to elect a Senator by a system of pledges. We give below an article from the Glen's Falls Republican, showing how Mr. Rogers attempted to sustain himself there. This article appeared in Warren County on the 6th, but did not reach here till the day after Election. In the north part of Clinton County his name was placed on the Abolition ticket. In Wilmington and Jay he gave personal assurances of his devotion to Free Soil. Election is passed and we entertain no unkind sentiments towards a defeated candidate, but we cannot permit the opportunity to pass without pointing the people plainly to the kind of humbuggery that was attempted to be practiced upon them. They have fittingly rebuked it the second time, and we trust it will prove a guaranty against any further attempts of the kind.

"Hon. Eli W. Rogers."

"Hon. Eli W, Rogers is the Democratic candidate for Senator in this District. The nomination was due, as everybody conceded to the county of Warren; but owing to circumstances which it is not necessary now to repeat, the Convention determined to renominate Mr. Rogers. It becomes our duty, therefore, as we hold it to be the duty of all good Democrats, to acquiesce in the selection, and support the election of Mr. R., as the fairly and regularly nominated candidate of the Party.

Whatever may have been the antecedents of Mr. Rogers, we speak from our own knowledge when we say that he is now as true and decided a National Democrat as there is in the State. We know, also, that John C. Mather has no more earnest supporter or more trusted friend than Eli W. Rogers. We wish to ask the Democracy of the County of Warren a single question in reference to Mr. R. Is his political position now any more questionable than it was two years ago, when you gave him your endorsement by a majority of more than five hundred? If any of our friends have felt the least hesitation about supporting him, we trust they will hesitate no longer. We know that he will, if elected, pursue a course in accordance with the feelings of the Democratic majority of Warren. In saying this we speak advisedly; therefore we feel it our imperative duty to urge every Democratic Elector of this county to give him a cordial and effective vote."

☞The Adamantine Geniera Committee of New York city, have determined upon a grand demonstration, to be held at Metropolitan Hall on the 23d instant.

The Softs.

The records of political defeats do not furnish a single instance of adverse fortune so humiliating, and yet so just, as the overthrow of the Softs in this State. They in the first place prostrated themselves at the footstool of power for pelf. They abjured all their former professions, and made oath to an opposite faith. Every word they had ever uttered on the Compromise, and especially on the fugitive Slave law, they took back, and made an exhibition of themselves such as had never been witnessed throughout the whole course of our political history. They had previously some character left, in so far as they persevered in their opposition to Compromise. It was their last jewel, and like the apostate and debauched heir to an estate, when honor and reputation had been squandered, they pawned it—pawned it in the miserable desperate hope of redeeming it again through some lucky turn of the wheel of fortune.—They are disappointed, with nothing to show but the worthless pawn-ticket of the swindling bankrupt issuer. Without character, without hope, without even the prospect of being longer upheld by those to whom they had allied themselves, there can be found in the wide country,

"None so poor as to do them reverence."

Where the Softs are to go, is a question for them to answer. With what fragment they who, to secure or retain the favor of the dispensers of patronage, turn their backs on their friends—proved traitors and went over to the enemy, is for them to decide. Certain it is, there is no covering that can shield the apostates from the gaze that from whatever quarter they turn, will glare upon them;—nothing but oblivion can shut out the self condemning recollection of their apostacy.

The corruptest use of the patronage of two administrations could not save the Softs. They have sunk down—and with them the last vestage of the school of Van Burenism has dissappeared. The two administrations, like rotten hulks, float on the surface but the first wave that rolls over it after the meeting of Congress, will leave not even a wreck behind.

The Farce of Impeachment has been turned into a Tragedy, wherein the Softs are carried out the dead actors. Their "victim" has become the "victimiser" to his persecutors. An appeal to the people has resulted in their utter condemnation. In spite of all they could do, Mr. Mather—whom they attempted to crush—has triumphed over them; and this day stands the prefered of his party, while they do not number a third of the electors of the State.

Whoever writes our political history will record the fate of the Softs to be that of an organization that the power of the National and State Administration, combined could not save, and who the first time a popular verdict was expressed in regard to them were swept from existence.—[Troy Whig.

FACTS FOR THE CANDID.—Everywhere in the South the secession democrats are in the ascendancy. The prominent friends of the Union, the Compromise and the Fugitive Slave law have been repudiated. The latest is the defeat of Foot in Missis sippi. All the democratic candidates for the Presidency who wrote letters pledging [illegible] Law were scorned. Pierce wrote no letters and made no pledges, and was nominated. The Southern secessionists and Northern Van Buren free soilers are his peculiar friends. The South have given the lie to their professions. They used Cass, Dickinson, Clay, and Webster, and then deserted them. They approved the appointment of Dix, and affiliate with John Van Buren, Grover & Co. If Wm. H. Seward was a democrat they would coalesce with him. The New York Day Book says: "Let the South hereafter catch their own niggers;" and we say so too. We also say, let the North live up to the Constitution and laws, act freely up to their convictions of right, speaking their sentiments without restraint, and honoring the men who honor them, without regard to the hypocritical threats of the South, that put up democrats and put down whigs for the same cause. We would not be sectional, but we would be INDEPENDENT—indignantly independent of what we deem gross hypocrisy—Southern Sectionalism.

MONEY INFLUENCES.—It is known that $60,000 were collected of the officers, clerks and laborers in and about the N. Y. Custom House; $12,000, were raised by private subscription in that city; and $10,000 were sent on from Washington to be expended on the election in this State. How much more was expended is not known, but it is safe to say that 100,000, were used by the Softs in the late election in this State. Under such circumstances the Hards have achieved a most signal and significant victory over the Short boys.' The people deserve especial praise for thus emphatically placing the seal of their disapprobation upon the dictations of officials, and the use of money in elections. The free, unbought, expression of the people is of inestimable value, as upon it depends the worth of Republican institutions. Without it they are a humbug.

SINGULAR.—Gen. Cunningham, of the custom house, who has brought home a fine saddle of venison from Ellsworth, tells a most singular but true story. Recently, in that vicinity, two dead bucks were found, their antlers inextricably locked together, and the tip of one thrust directly through that of the other and in the neck of the animal, so as to sever the jugular.—The explanation is that the animals got into a fight, one was killed, as indicated, on the spot, while the other died afterwards, being unable to clear itself from the dead body of its opponent. The heads are saved for the convincing of the unbelieving.—Belfast Journal.

☞Our latest advices show that the Whigs have been entirely successful in Mass.

Jottings in the Wilderness.

A female friend has gone far into the western wilderness to spend the winter.—The following letter was written on the way there, and we trust it is but one of many we shall have the pleasure to receive from her, and we assure our readers they shall share with us the pleasure of their perusal.—[Ed. Rep.

N——, Nov. 9, 1853.

It appears that my 'jottings' will be most present by the wayside rather than from my wild wood home.

It may not be a wayside, where flowers are wont to bloom, such as I might love to gather and twine for the friends I have left far away, but merely a "bright spot in the wilderness" or in soberer, more understandable English, a 'clearing in the woods.'—Such spots are not often bright to look at, certainly, and were not the animal nature in man sometimes to claim paramount attention they could hardly seem other than repulsive. Yet appearances deceive, and even here, within the unsightly piles of unhewn logs may dwell men of sterling independence generous feelings, however wanting in culture they may be.

Among the questions which come in for a share of consideration in this age of faultfinding and discussion, there appears to be one relating to refinement, its requisites and characteristics. We are accused of being over-refined, ridiculously sensitive. I would not quarrel with the motive advanced but with the words used to express it. Is it possible for any mind and heart to be too much refined, too delicately sensitive to the beauty and harmony, the deformity and discord which are found in life! It seems as sensible to say that the sunlight is too rich and glorious, or the flower too lovely.

Every step in the refining process, every successful effort at true culture, elevates the soul just so much in the scale of spiritual life, is one step actually gained in the ascent to the temple of Truth.

True culture is not an education of the asthetic element alone, for this in its extreme would lead to enervating voluptuousness—nor of the sterner qualities of mind, exclusively, for thus would men forget their brotherhood

The soul of man is not the understanding nor is it the Affections and neither can be exclusively cultivated without permanent injury to the other.

It would, perhaps, be a benefit to the advocates of anti refinement to spend a few weeks in these "ends of the earth," not merely for summer excursion accompanied by agreeable companions, but alone, and in actual contact with life as it is, and character as it is developed here. It would take but a short time to prepare them to endure with a moderate share of the grace of patience the squeamishness and nonsense of any conceited Miss who should scream at the sight of a toad, or fear to gather a boquet for herself lest she should stain delicate, ringed fingers forever guiltless of dish-water and broom-handles.

I have got entirely away from my journey hither—a matter of some importance to myself although we neither broke down, tipped over, nor were brought to a "stand still in the slough." The [illegible] seated 'buck-board' wagon—the horses belonged to the Rozinante family—the driver was a Vermonter—the load, beside passengers and baggage was a barrel of flour, a sack of pork a large stone jar, ect. ect. The road with its ups and downs, roots and trees and deep ruts, corduroy bridges and unfathomed mud-holes and its extensive prospect of "fire-slash" on either side, I leave for some more graphic pen to describe.

I am pleasantly situated for a few days in the 'town of N,' consisting of two framed and one log dwelling house, in anticipation of but one more remove. When I find myself located and better able to "define my position" you will hear from me again.

Prospect Div. No.71 of the East'n Grand Division of New York, was organized at this place and the officers installed on the 10th, inst. by Wm. Van Vleck, D. G. W. P. assisted by brothers, Meeker, Iott, and ——, of Ark Div. Essex.

The charter members are 14 in number, as follows;

H. M. Chase, W. P. J. J. Stacks, W A., J. Geo. Baldwin, R. S.; Jas. Keese, A. R. S., E. A. Prescott. F. S., Jas. Mills, T.; J. Tarbell, C.; J. B. Ballance, A. C.; H. E. Hart, I. S.; M. V. B. Hayes, O. S.; Rev. Geo. C. Wells, Chaplain, and brother T. Adams.

It will meet on Wednesday ev'gs, at Odd Fellows Hall, and starts off with every assurance of success. The Sons are not started in opposition to, but co-workers with the I. O. of R. There are nearly 4000 inhabitants in Keeseville, The field is large and the laborers few. It needed another order to arouse the dormant feelings of the people.

THE 'KNOW-NOTHINGS.'—This society which has attracted considerable attention by its effect on the recent elections in this city and New York, is exciting curiosity among our country friends, as to its composition and intentions. It originated among the Democracy of New York city some months since, and its design, so far as we, who literally 'know nothing' can tell it is to prevent the influence of foreigners from controlling elections. Five persons instituted the order here, four of whom were democrats and one whig. There are now four 'wigwams,' one in each of the North, East, South and West Wards, which comprises some 2500 members, belonging to both parties, and to all classes of citizens of American origin. A wigwam has been established in Orange, and one is expected shortly in Morristown. The society is secret, and its peculiar characteristic is the answer given by its members to all questions concerning it—'don't know.' Its influence in this city has so far been decidedly advantageous to the friends of order and the purity of elections.—Newark Adv.

☞The 'Putty' head of the Gazette characteristic of the individual, assumes to question our veracity. Arthur is evidently laboring under a severe attack of the 'sulks.' Perhaps a visit to Schroon might relieve his sufferings. He is mortified at the result in this town and county, and cannot control his chagrin. His excessive vanity has been wounded and his oracular predictions have proved wilful lies! It is said that 'misery loves company,' and for this reason he tries very hard in his last issue to saddle misstatements on us. We said the Hunkers had no organ in Essex county. He says they had, and that the truth has not been told. He does not tell us where it is, tho'. A man that makes such statements to an intelligent community, that are as conversant with the facts as he is himself, is either a very great knave or a very great fool.—The people of this county well know that his opposition to democrats has been of the most bitter and malignant character, and there is probably not another paper in the State, if we except the Atlas, that has denounced democrats with such rancorous and vindictive spleen. Nothing that this Free Soil sattellite could say that would cast reproach upon democrats was spared. His paper fairly reeked with filthy abuse, and to this mainly we charge our glorious victory; for the people doubted, and justly too, the orthodoxy of democracy that has to be sustained by such diatribes as composed the bulk of the electioneering articles in the Satanic press.

We think our claim to veracity is not materially injured, as fortunately for us, it is not in the keeping of so vindictive an individual. We will make a short extract from his last week's paper, which proves him a man of unquestionable truth—in a horn. It is proper to say that this was penned when he had the very best means of knowing that the Abolitionists were beaten beyond peradventure in the State:—

"The returns from the south show that the State has gone whig by a small majority over the democrats who have polled three to one over the Hards. No news from the city of New York."

The above is a fair sample of the truthfulness of this individual who attempts to question the veracity of others. Neither is it an isolated instance—they are numerous—but we have no inclination to bring them out, believing one example as good as a hundred to show his predominant failing. The above will show people how much importance can be attached to his assertions.

It is also a great crime for democrats to receive the votes of Whigs, in his eyes, but for whigs to vote for a free soil mercenary squad of disorganizers is all right. We heard this same individual that is talking so loudly about whigs voting for Mr. Watson, boast that he got three of his countrymen, who always voted whig to vote his free soil ticket. We know of one or two others that voted that ticket, supposing they were voting the whig ticket. In Ausable the candidate for Dist. Atty. received whig votes, but for whigs to vote for a democrat, one that has been a resident among them for years, is rank treason. There seems to be some inconsistency somewhere.

"Oh! wad some power the giftie gie us
To see ourselves as ithers see us."

In relation to the assertion that Mr. Watson entered into an agreement with Whigs for votes at the expense of Rogers, we pronounce it a base and unqualified slander, and the individual that retails it a calumniator of the most contemptible stamp. We do not depend upon hearsay for our information—we know what we say, and stand prepared to prove it if the person that fathers the slanders of the Satanic Press is tenacious about it.

The attacks of this creature on Mr. Watson, have been of the most viperous and malignant character, and dictated by the worst of motives, revenge. Mr. Watson supported an old and tried democrat—a veteran in the service when this supercilious individual was in swadling clothes—for the Post Office in preference to him. This is the secret of his hostility to Mr. Watson, and the cause of his violent and unjustifiable attacks upon his character and fame.—What can be thought of an individual that will thus let his private animosities outrage the decencies of life, and invade the sanctity of the grave, to gratify his malignant passions?

He says we have got no brains. Well as the Frenchman said about Mrs. Peter Rowvil, thats loss for us. To be without brains is certainly bad, but to be twitted about it in public print is too bad, and that too by a man of the distinguished and comprehensive abilities of the Editor of the N. G. It is a mark of a great mind when closely pushed to turn with the retort: you haint got any brains! It is safe to judge of the individuals brains that uses it, and your conclusion cannot fail of being a righteous judgment. Haint got any brains!—Take that back Arthur, do.

We have no desire to get up a discussion with the Editor of the N. G. Election is over and there is nothing to be gained by it. We are satisfied with the result, and the Editor of the N. G. will have to be. We tried to correct some of his mistatements, and with good success. His charge of perversion we can overlook, knowing it to be a weakness for which he is not accountable, superinduced by the debilitating news from all quarters of the State. HARDSHELL.

The begining of the end.

The Plattsburgh Republican thus talks to "Bolters"—

Bolting.—Bolting regular nominations is bad enough for all parties interested in its consequences, but it is by no means the least injurious in its effects upon the political prospects of men aspiring to place and patronage. The rank and file, who oppose regular nominations, and afford "aid and comfort to the enemy," do so generally only because they are deceived, and hence they will come back and be welcomed; but the Deceivers, the leaders who have resentments to gratify, and purposes to accomplish by defeating regular tickets and opposing democratic administrations will find themselves in a very different position—their dancing days are over.' Politicians who make or take bolting nominations are involved in the same brilliant prospect. There is one thing in which they are destined to be gratified, a wit—TO BE REMEMBERED.

Read the following from the New York Tribune:

NATHANIEL B. BLUNT, we are grieved to say, is pretty certainly beaten for District Attorney of this County, and Mr. Chauncy Shaffer (Soft) elected in his stead through the instrumentality of a mongrel ticket termed the Know-Nothing, made up in about equal proportions of Hards and Whigs, with Shaffer the only Soft on the State Ballot. This ticket is the work of the managers of a secret organization growing out of the Order of United Americans, but ostensibly disconnected therefrom. It is in fact a modified, or rather a disguised, form of Native Americanism, aiming to control the elections of our City for the benefit of its leaders. This ticket has given Mr. Shaffer nearly One Thousand majority in the XXth Ward, and over Eight Hundred in the XIth. This is a result which our City has profound reason to regret, and suggests grave reflections as to the influence of secret combinations on Elections.

Messrs. Leavenworth, Spaulding, Kirkpatrick and Mullin, who were struck at by the "Know-Nothings," are thereby ran considerably behind their colleagues.

BY HORATIO SEYMOUR, GOVERNOR OF THE STATE OF NEW YORK.—I hereby appoint THURSDAY, the twenty-fourth inst, as day of THANKSGIVING for the people of the State of New York. I recommend its suitable observance by such religious assemblages and forms of worship, as our citizens may severally deem appropriate, so that we may as a commonwealth, with united hearts, humbly and gratefully render thanks to our Father in Heaven, for His benefits, and earnestly implore the continuance of His favor.

In witness whereof, I have hereunto subscribed my name and affixed the [L.S.] privy seal of the State, at the city of Albany, this, 5th day of November, one thousand eight hundred and fifty-three.

By the Governor. HORATIO SEYMOUR.

WANTED—Employment, by a Prince, of facile principles, fluent speech and imposing address, but whose fortunes, with those of his family, have suffered by recent convulsions, and whose loss of a French Embassy and blighted expectations of a U. S. Senatorship have left him without a place. Accustomed to generous living, and having a family to provide for, he is ready to undertake anything that promises well; but the disastrous results of a former Wool speculation compel him to decline further ventures in that line. Being still a gentleman of large expectations, he must decline, for the present, any occupation essentially low and vulgar—such for instance, as watching negroes in Nebraska,—but a continuance of his present run of luck may constrain him to descend even to that. Please address J. V. B., at the office of The Evening Post.—Tribune.

☞ PROF. MOORE, assisted by his pupils, gave a concert at the Academy, on Monday evening last. The attendance was large, and the audience extremely well pleased, so far as we can learn, with the entertainment. The young ladies and gentlemen acquitted themselves with great credit, and reflect honor on their accomplished teacher. We understand they are to be continued.—This new feature will add to the well deserved popularity of our thriving Academy.

'Support the Administration.'—In canvassing the probabilities of a change in the Cabinet, and a change of Policy on the part of the President, an official, not 100 miles from Keeseville, has given out that "the President cant change quicker than he can." In cant phrase it means only "supporting the Administration."

☞ We hope our friends who have been South to buy goods this fall, have purchased teas of Corlies & Decker, 192 Pearl street, N. Y., because they have the best in the city.

☞ CHARLES G ATHERTON, U. S. Senator from N. H., died on Tuesday last.—He was the representative of President Pierce in N. H.

FAIRFIELD ACADEMY—the Advertisement of which may be seen in another column—is one of the oldest and best in the State.

Obituaries.

DIED, at Plattsburgh, last Sabbath morning, at the residence of her son-in-law, T. B. Watson, Mrs. Harriet, wife of Major Powers of Keesevillo, aged 59 years.

The virtues of the deceased were many, and prominent. Long a resident of this town, she lived in the affections of a large circle—all acknowledging her most worthy and useful. Her native energy of character, softened by the graces of the spirit, rendered her influential and efficient, in the varied relations of life. As a wife she was faithful, and her superior judgment rendered her a safe and judicious counsellor, while as a mother she was prompt and confiding—affectionate and kind, and as a neighbor most cordial and obliging. Her large heart expanded in benevolence towards all, and kindness was her characteristic; but chiefly did her family and the church of her choice, live in her affections and eminently to the interests of both, they seemed blended in one, and all felt that her love for these was undying—leading to a devotion of heart and labor worthy the highest praise.

She had been for 35 years, a consistent, and beloved member of the Methodist Episcopal Church. Its doctrines, ways and peculiar privileges were her delight, and seldom, while in health, was her place vacant. The language of her heart was, "How amiable are thy tabernacles, O Lord of Hosts," "Better is a day in thy courts, O Zion, than a thousand elsewhere." A paralytic stroke some months since, disabled her from the active duties of life, and brought to mind the near approach of death, but this, did not appal, her faith whom she had believed, and through the entire confinement manifested in its extent the grace of perfect resignation, and expressing oft times a desire to depart and be with Christ, which is far better."

The spiritual interests of her family, was the only source of anxiety, and she longed, ere she departed, to see them all walking in the way of holiness.

Her prayers so earnest, being the "fervent effectual prayer of the righteous, will they not avail much? We mourn not as those without a hope, for she sleeps in Jesus.—The power of Christianity to sustain and endure, was fully tested, and it proved sufficient.

She has gone to the home of the blissful and the pure—she rests in the paradise of God. Her glorified spirit roams o'er the plains of Heaven and she listens to the mysterious course of Him who once was slain, as He unfolds the glories of redemption accomplished by blood shedding. Beneath life's fair tree, whose branches bend to kiss in speechless praise, the crystal stream that bursts from beneath the eternal throne, she now reclines, and plucks ambrosial fruit—and listening to the strains of celestial melody that comes wafted on the heavenly gale, her redeemed spirit catching the distant echo, joins the strain unto Him who hath redeemed us, be glory and honor forever and ever." All suffering and toil is forgotten, and all is peace and joy and light and life. Blessed One, exalted above the stars, we would not call thee back, but rather will we join thee there.—As her spirit awating to welcome loved ones home, shall rejoice as one after another shall make their triumphant entrance there. God grant, that all of her family may greet her happy spirit, and an unbroken band, in our Father's house above

E. R. WELLS.

Died, on Wednesday evening, 9th inst. at her residence in Port Henry, Samantha, wife of Ebenezer Collins, and eldest daughter of J. B. Spencer, aged thirty one years.

Her departure was sudden, and unexpected alike to herself and friends; being confined to her bed only about thirty hours.

On Tuesday noon she was violently attacked, with symptoms of Cholera Morbus, attended with most excruciating pain.—This continued through the remainder of the day, and most of the succeeding night. Towards morning she obtained partial relief and became more quiet. It was then thought her disease was arrested, and hopes of her recovery were entertained by her friends. But at noon her symptoms again returned with redoubled force baffling the efforts and skill of her medical attendants, rapidly exhausting the strength and vitality of her system till 9 o'clock of that evening, when she expired. As her end approached, she seemed to be fully aware of her situation. She talked calmly with her family and friends to the last, and said, "do you think I am afraid to die?" Her hope in this hour of extremity did not fail her, for she know in whom she trusted.

Her faith in her Saviour remained unshakened.

She has left to mourn her loss an affectionate and devoted husband, one daughter, and two sons, the youngest of whom is an infant at the tender age of four weeks. Also a fond Father and Mother, two Sisters and a Brother. But they have reason to hope that their loss is her gain. In the spring of thirty seven, the deceased became the subject of a moral change, and soon after made a public consecration of herself to the cause of Christ, of which she has ever since been a warm and cordial friend.

Few mothers if any felt a greater solicitude for the moral, as well as intellectual training of their children. To avoid contact with the demoralizing influences so prevalent in community, she made it her practice to devote a part of every day to their mental and moral culture.

But the interests of her own family were not allowed to keep her from efforts to do good to others also. She was ever a friend to the sick and needy. Possessed naturally of great energy of character, a kind heart, and a generous disposition, she felt that she could not do too much for those in distress.

The sick and afflicted within the circle of her acquaintance, never failed to excite her sympathy, and when possible to attract her presence. To assuage their pain, to relieve their distress and anguish, she seemed to be willing to imperil her own health, and endanger her life.

The various causes of female benevolence found in her a warm friend, a firm and effectual supporter. Being possessed of the means of doing for these objects it was her pleasure to improve them; thus rendering herself one of our most generous and useful members of society. It was pre-eminently her characteristic, to do with her might what her hand found to do; and well may it be said of her—"Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord, that they may rest from their labours, and their works do follow them."

Died at Crown Point, Oct. 19th, 1853, Stephen Spaulding, in the 88th year of his age.

The subject of this notice was born Oct. 28th, 1765, in the town of Notingham, State of New-Hampshire. At the age of 14 yrs he volunteered as a Soldier in the Revolutionary War, and served in Capt. Daniel Livormores company, which joined the Continental Army at West Point in the fall of '79, when he became a soldier under the immediate command of the Father of His Country, of whom he always retained the highest respect and regard. He well recollected Gens. Putnam, Green and Gates, was present at the surrender of Gen. Burgoyne's army at Saratoga, and was honorably discharged from the Continental army at Tarrytown at the close of that memorable war. Mr. Spaulding was a man of industrious and temperate habits, social and kind as a husband, father and friend, and when called to die he grieved not only the firmness of a soldier and a man, but the hope of the christian, which hope he had indulged over 50 years, and when his family and friends stood around his dying bed, he said, "I go on and learn how to die."

His was one of the earliest settlers in Crown Point, and was buried where his industry made the first opening. He was the last of the revolutionary soldiers in town.

Peace to his ashes. Papers in New-hampshire and Ohio please copy.

Testimony of the Prof. of Obstetrics in Penn. College, Philadelphia.—"Dr. Hunter's Medical Manual."—The author of this work unlike the majority of those works who advertise to cure the diseases of which it treats, is a graduate of one of the best Colleges in the United States. It affords me pleasure to recommend him to the unfortunate, or to the victim of malpractice, as a successful and experienced practitioner, in whose honor and integrity they may place the greatest confidence.

JOSEPH LONGSHORE M. D.

From A Woodward M. D., of Penn. University, Philadelphia—It gives me pleasure to add my testimony to the professional ability of the author of the "Medical Manual." Numerous cases of diseases of the Genital Organs, some of them of long standing have come under my notice, in which his skill has been manifest in restoring to perfect health, in some instances where the patient has been considered beyond medical aid. In the treatment of Seminal weakness, or disarrangement of the functions produced by Self-abuse, or Excess of venery, I do not know his superior in the profession. I have been acquainted with the Author some thirty years, and deem it no more than justice to him as well as a kindness to the unfortunate victim of early indiscretion, to recommend him as one, in whose professional skill and integrity they may safely confide themselves. ALFRED WOODWARD, M.D.

"This is, without exception, the most comprehensive and intelligible work published on the class of diseases of which it treats. Avoiding all technical terms, it addresses itself to the reason of its readers. It is free from all objectionable matter, and no parent, however fastidious, can object to placing it in the hands of his sons. The author has devoted many years to the treatment of the various complaints treated of, and with too little breath to puff, and too little presumption to impose, he has offered to the world at the merely nominal price of 25 cents, the fruits of some 20 years most successful practice."—Hornbl.

No teacher or parent should be without the knowledge imparted in this invaluable work. It would save years of pain, mortification and sorrow to the youth under their charge."—People's Advocate.

A Presbyterian clergyman in Ohio in writing of "Hunter's Medical Manual," says: "Thousands upon thousands of our youth, by evil example and influence of the passions, have been led into the habit of self pollution without realizing the sin and fearful consequences upon themselves and their posterity. The constitutions of thousands who are raising families have been enfeebled, if not broken down, and the do not know the cause or the cure. Anything that can be done so to enlighten and influence the public mind as to check, and ultimately to remove this widespread source of human wretchedness, would confer the greatest blessing next to the religion of Jesus Christ, on the present and coming generations. Intemperance for the use of intoxicating drinks, though it has slain thousands upon thousands, is not a greater scourge to the human race. Accept my thanks on behalf of the afflicted, and believe me your co-worker in the good work you are so actively engaged in."

THE MARRIAGE STATE;

Shall Happiness and Health, or Misery and Sickness, attend it?

MOST STARTLING CONSIDERATIONS !

Reflections for the Thoughtful.

Strange that countless human beings exist and drag through life as do the beasts of the field, or the insects of the earth, evincing no more thought or reflection than though the noble faculties of mind were not vouchsafed to them.

Many such are husbands and fathers, upon whom are dependent the health, the well-being, and the happiness of a confiding and affectionate wife, with perhaps a family of children.

HOW OFTEN IT HAPPENS THAT THE

WIFE LINGERS FROM YEAR TO YEAR

In that pitiable condition as not even for one day to feel the happy and exhilerating influence incident to the enjoyment of health.

She may not be an invalid confined to her bed, or even to her room ; as her pride, ambition and energy induce and nerve her to take personal charge of her household, even when her health will not admit of it ; but she is nevertheless perceptibly sinking from day to day, and always ailing.

Thus, day after day, and month after month transpire. Her health daily sinks, till finally even the hope of recovery no longer remains. And thus

THE BLOOMING BRIDE,

But a few years ago in the flush of health and youth, and buoyancy of spirits, rapidly, and apparently inexplicably, becomes a feeble, sickly, debilitated wife, with frame emaciated, nerves unstrung, spirits depressed, countenance bearing the impress of suffering, and an utter physical and mental prostration.

Sometimes this deplorable change may and does arise from organic or constitutional causes. But oftener, by far oftener, to gross and inexcusable ignorance of the simplest and plainest rules of health as connected with the marriage state, the violation of which entails disease, suffering and misery, not only to the wife, but often

Transmitting CONSUMPTION, SCROFULA, HYPOCHONDRIA, INSANITY, GOUT, KING'S EVIL, and other diseases,

as a

from the Parents.

And must this continue ? Shall we be wise in all that concerns the cattle of our fields, our horses, our sheep, our cows, our oxen, the nature and character of the soil we possess, the texture and quality of our goods and merchandise ; but in all that concerns ourselves as human beings, with human functions and passions, subject to great derangement, involving our future peace and happiness—in all that concerns the health and welfare of the wife of our affections, and the mother of our children ; in all that concerns the mental and physical well being of those children, we should be immersed in the darkest and most

BENIGHTED IGNORANCE,

AS CULPABLE AS INEXCUSABLE !

How long shall this ignorance prevail so productive of its bitter fruits ? How long shall the wife and mother be ignorant of the nature, character and causes of the various womb and sexual complaints, embittering her days by suffering—suffering often prolonged to years, eventuating in a complication of diseases utterly and hopelessly incurable ? Shall we for ever close our eyes to the results of physiological science by which we may arrive at an understanding of ourselves as men and women, subject to serious life-long enduring diseases, and perpetuating them to our children.

LET EVERY WIFE AND HUSBAND PONDER!

No husband or wife need be ignorant of what concerns them most to know to secure their health and happiness. That knowledge is contained in a little work entitled

The latest and most approved Trusses ; Female Supporters ; Do. with shoulder braces attached ; spinal elevators for curvature of the spine and projection of the shoulder blade. Suspensary shoulder braces. This instrument is so constructed that it not only acts the part of shoulder braces, but carries the heft of the ladies' skirts on their shoulders ; and, hence remedies the evil consequent to carrying them on the hips and sides. For gentlemen, it not only serves for a shoulder brace, but acts the part of suspenders.

As to the importance and usefulness of the above named instruments, and their beneficial effects, their peculiar mechanism and superiority over other instruments of the same name, I need not say anything. They are so well known, by physicians, and the multitude of persons that have had occasion to test them in this northern section of country, that I deem it not important to introduce a long catalogue of certificates ; yet I have abundant evidence in my possession to justify me in all I claim or affirm, and deem it a privilege to give references to any who wish to make inquiries.

Henry's Invigorating Cordial,

PURELY VEGETABLE IN ITS COMPOSITION.

This invaluable Cordial, is extracted from Herbs and Roots, which have been found after years of experience, by the most skillful Physicians, to be possessed of qualities most beneficial in the diseases for which it is recommended, and hence whilst it is presented to the public, as an efficacious remedy it is also known to be of that character on which reliance may be placed as to its safety. In cases of Impotency, Hemorrhages, Disordered Sterility, Menstruation, or Suppression of the Menses, Fluror Albus or Whites, or for arising from any cause, such as weakness from sickness, where the patient has been confined to bed for some time, for Females after Confinement, Abortion or Miscarriage, this Cordial cannot be excelled in its salutary effects ; or in loss of Muscular Energy, Irritability, Physical Prostration, Seminal Weakness, Palpitation of the Heart, Indigestion, Sluggishness, Decay of the Procreative Functions, Nervousness, &c., where a TONIC Medicine is required, it will be found equal, if not superior to any Compound ever used.

DEBILITY

TO FEMALES.

Henry's Invigorating Cordial, is one of the most invaluable Medicines in the many Complaints to which Females are subject. It assists nature to brace the whole system, check excesses, and creates renewed health and happiness. Less suffering, disease and unhappiness among Ladies would exist, where they generally to adopt the use of this Cordial. Ladies who are debilitated by those obstructions which females are liable to, are restored by the use of a bottle or two, to bloom and to vigor.

YOUNG MEN.

That solitary practice, so fatal to the existence of man and it is too young who are most apt to become its victims, from an ignorance of the danger to which they subject themselves, causes

NERVIOUS DEBILITY.

Weakness of the System, and Premature Decay. Many of you may now be suffering, misled as to the cause or source of disease. To those, then, who by excess have brought on themselves Premature Impotency, Involuntary Seminal Emissions, Weakness and shrivelling of the Genital Organs, Nervous Affection, or any other consequences of unrestrained indulgence of the sensual passions, occasioning the necessity of renouncing the felicities of lessening both mental and bodily capacity. Hold! Henry's Invigorating Cordial, a Medicine that is purely Vegetable, will aid nature to restore those important functions to a healthy state, and will prove of service to you. It possesses rare virtues, is a general remover of disease, and strengthener of the system.

AS A TONIC MEDICINE,

it is unsurpassed. We do not place this Cordial on a footing with quack medicines, and, as is customary, append a long list of Recommendations, Certificates, &c., beginning with "Hear what the Preacher says," and such like; it is not necessary, for "Henry's Invigorating Cordial," only needs a trial to prove that it will accomplish all we say.

THE GENUINE "HENRY'S INVIGORATING CORDIAL."

is put up in 8 oz. Pannel Bottles, and is easily recognized by the Manufacturer's signature on the label of each Bottle, (to counterfeit which is forgery) as well as his private Seal on the cork of each Bottle.

☞ Sold for $2 per Bottle ; Six for $8 ; $16 per dozen Prepared only by S. E. COHEN, No. 3 Franklin Row, Vine Street, below Eighth, Philadelphia Pa ; C. V. Clickener & Co., N. E. Bourne, Esq., Cashier National Bank, Providence, R. I.; A. W. Spencer, Esq., Cashier Lime Rock Bank, do do Rev. William Phillips, Rev. J. B. Richmond, C. S. Jones, editor Providence Gen. Advt., Wm. Field, M. W. G. M. Cyrus Fisher, M. E. H. P. James Hutchinson, G. S. Dea., V. J. Bates, Doct. Benj. Colby, and one hundred others of the most respectable families of Providence.

This certifies that I have for a number of years been acquainted with the composition and mode of manufacture of Morse's Compound Syrup of Yellow Dock Root. I have also been acquainted with its modus operandi in disease, and can say that in all respects it is admirably calculated to remedy that class of Diseases for which it was designed. It is especially valuable in Indigestion and all its attendant symptoms, it excites to healthy action the Liver, removes Torpor, and inactivity of the organ, and stimulates healthy action in all the system. As a Depurator or purifier of the Blood it has no superior.

Passed July 21, 1853.

The People of the State of New York, represented in Senate and Assembly, do enact as follows:

§1. The first and third subdivisions of the sixth section, and the ninth and tenth sections of the said title, are hereby amended to read as follows:

§ 1 They shall insert in the first column of their assessment rolls the name of each incorporated company in their respective or wards liable to taxation on its capital or otherwise; and under its name they shall specify the amount of its capital stock paid in, and secured to be paid in, the amount paid by such company for real estate then belonging to such company, wherever the same may be situated, the amount of all surplus profits or reserved funds, exceeding ten per cent of their capital after deducting therefrom the said amount of said real estate, and the amount of its stock, if any, belonging to the state and to incorporated literary and charitable institutions.

§ 3. In the fourth column they shall enter the amount of the capital stock of every incorporated company paid in, and secured to be paid in and of all such surplus profits or reserved funds as aforesaid, after deducting the sums paid out for all the real estate of such company, wherever the same may be situated and then belonging to it, and the amount of stock, if any belonging to the people of this state and to incorporated literary and charitable institutions.

§ 9. If the president or other proper officer of any incorporated company named in the assessment roll shall show to the satisfaction of the board of supervisors, at their annual meeting, within two days from the commencement thereof, by the affidavit of such officer, to be filed with the clerk of the board, that such company has not been during the preceeding year in the receipt of net annual profits or clear income equal to five per cent on the capital stock of any such company paid in or secured to be paid in, after deducting from the amount of their capital stock the assessed value of their real estate, such company shall be entitled to commute for their taxes on such capital stock by paying directly to the treasurer of the county in which the business of such company is transacted, a sum equal to five per cent on such net annual profits or clear income, and also such further sum as shall be assessed on such roll as the taxes on the real estate. And the assessment of every moneyed or stock corporation authorized to make dividends on its capital, from which no such affidavit shall be received as aforesaid, shall be conclusive evidence that such corporation was liable to taxation, and was duly assessed.

§2. The seventh, eleventh, twelfth and thirteenth sections of the said title are hereby repealed.

FRAUD!

ALL who want Axes of the real Collins & Co. make should be particular to notice the stamps, as there are various counterfeits and imitations stamped Collins and labelled much like ours, which are fraudulently sold in some parts of the United States as our manufacture. They are made in different parts of the country by various axe-makers, and are generally of very inferior quality. The genuine Collins axes, which have acquired such an extensive reputation are invariably stamped "COLLINS & CO. HARTFORD," and each axe has a printed label with my signature.—It is now more than Twenty-five years since we commenced the business with the stamp of "Collins & Co. Hartford," and I do not know of any other axe-maker by the name of Collins in the United States.

"He Aspires No Higher."

'Good morning, Mr. G.'

'Good morning, good morning, sir - happy to see you. When did you arrive in town?'

'Arrived last evening.'

'Well, I am happy to bid you welcome to your native place; it is a long time since we have seen you here.'

'Yes, it is ten years since I was last here and I find great changes have taken place, not only in the appearance of the town, but I see many new faces, and but few familiar ones.'

'Old things and persons have passed away, and behold 'all things are become new,' applies emphatically to our town.—Ten years work great changes.'

'I see, judging from appearances, that enterprise holds dominion here. Your stores and public buildings would do honor to a large and more assuming town, and I saw, during my walk around town this morning, some private mansions which with their surroundings, were beautiful, surpassingly so. For instance the one across the street; who is owner of that?'

'Richard B., second son of the Judge.—You were acquainted with Judge B.'s family?'

'Richard B.; indeed! I had supposed him dead—had heard nothing of the family for several years, though formerly well acquainted with them.'

'The Judge is dead, and has left his property among his children. Richard is a merchant here and is doing a heavy business—is prospering, as his place indicates. James, next younger, is a lawyer, and an ornament to the profession—following in the footsteps of his father, who, you remember, was an able lawyer, and had few superiors either at the bar or the bench, or in private life as a citizen. Isaac, the youngest, is preaching in one of the Southern cities, and is very popular, both as an orator and writer.'

'But what of Emerson? you have forgotten him. He was a fine fellow, though he had a great many eccentric notions. I thought the most of him of any of the boys—so honest, kind, companionable, and he new something, too; yet he had not one aristocratic notion about him, which could not be said of his brothers. Where is he?'

'You remember Judge B. owned a farm down the river. When the property was divided, Emerson chose that for his portion, married Sarah F., who worked so long for Squire A., in his dairy, took possession of his property, and removed on to it immediately, and is there now, a farmer—aspires no higher.'

'What! Emerson B. a farmer! aspires no higher than that, and married Squire A.'s dairy maid?—Why, sir, he had talents of the highest order, a mind well disciplined, and I thought higher aspirations than that! A farmer, indeed!'

'And yet sir, I assure you he is to be envied. He has a most charming home and charming wife and family—one of the happiest families within my acquaintance—accomplished and refined, intelligent and sensible. They are not afraid any of them to do any kind of farm work, and do do it.—And yet you could not visit them without leaving with a desire to visit again.'

'You surprise me, Mr. G., and really, I have curiosity to visit my old friend if he is nothing but a farmer.'

'Very well; then I will call for you with my carriage early in the morning, and we will take them by suprise.'

'Good morning, friend B., I fancy I would like some of those strawberries and Mrs. B.'s 'fixins' for breakfast; but I have the pleasure of introducing an old schoolmate, and mutual friend, Arthur C.'

'Why, my old friend Arthur! How do you do?' said a noble looking man with a spade, as he extended his hand. 'Walk in; I have been manufacturing an appetite this morning, and have been successful. Mrs B., my old friend Mr. C., who has spoken for some strawberries, &c., for breakfast.'

The gentlemen were so greeted by the lady, that their most fastidious notions of politeness were met. Breakfast, such as only a farmer can offer, was soon over, family worship performed, and the gentlemen were roaming over the farm, (the farmer's parlor,) enjoying the morning air, and in earnest and interesting conversation.—Common topics of the day were discussed, which politics and religion bore a prominent part.

'My friend Emerson, I was talking with our friend G. yesterday, and he told me you was a farmer, and aspired no higher! Why this choice? I was supprised that this should be the summit of your ambition.'

'Well, friend G. knows as much about my aspirations as any of my friends, perhaps,' said Mr. B., Glancing at Mr. G.,—He knows I do not aspire to measure tape behind the counter, without a tho't beyond the relation of cost and profit. He knows I do not aspire to become a pettifogging, quibbling lawyer, to try to aid in criminations or clearance of arraigned men, whether guilty or not—to try to treasure up and enforce the wise and unwise laws which our rulers see fit to enact. He knows I do not aspire to become a political hero—to have my name raised by one party (if I should become popular, for themselves by my promotion to office,) and to spend my time cultivating my mental powers at the expense of health, and consequently happiness, in this life. I believe physical education is of as much importance as mental, if the equilibrium is preserved—that mentally physically, and morally, man is to progress—a perfect combination is necessary to make a perfect man—that all were given man for cultivation, and he who cultivates one and neglects the other, is acting contrary to God's design. But he knows I do aspire to be a farmer—to breathe pure God-given air—enjoying the sunshine, listening to nature's thousand music notes, and drink in the warbled melody of her myriad feathered dependents—study her book, always open, treasure up and think upon the lessons she teaches. He knows I do aspire to secure a home in Heaven—to keep my mind pure and unspotted from the world—to rear my family uncontaminated with the selfishness, within-yourself feeling which is so perceptible in our large towns—to teach them the highest duty of man, to honor and adore their Maker. This is why I choose to be a farmer—why I aspire to no higher earthly vocation.'

Ocean Scenes.

Grace Greenwood publishes in the little Pilgrim a journal of a trip to Europe in 1852. During the voyage across the Atlantic a Butterfly lit upon the mast of the vessel, upon which she thus prettily writes:

One day much to my supprsie, I spied a real live butterfly, on one of the spars of the vessel. It had been blown out from the shore the captain said. But its wings were wet with spray and torn by the winds, and it did not live many minutes after it lit.

I thougt to myself that perhaps this poor little creature had been born in some secluded cottage-garden, brought up on the sweetest honey and the purest dew, cradled by night in a jasamine-flower and rocked by sost summer winds, or cosily couched in the heart of the rose, and sung to sleep by a merry cricket. That perhaps she had always been happy and contented till some grasping locust or vagrant humming bird had filled her ears with fine stories of grander gardens over the sea, and she had been seized with a foolish longing for foreign travel, strange sights and adventures. That from this time she had found her garden home dull, her honey and dew insipid, her rose-bed uncomfortable, the song of her cricket-nurse harsh, till she could stand it no longer, but bravely flew off from shore, right over that beautiful sparkling sea. Then the strong wind took her, and whirled her on and on, through the salt ocean spray, all day and all night, till it left her at last, not in a foreign, fairy garden, but on a great ship, which smelt of tar instead of roses, and where she sunk fluttering down on to the deck, and the small gold stars died out of her azure wings, and she was soon only a little heap of shining dust. However, I did not feel in such good spirits about my own travels, after thinking of this story of the butterfly.

A Female Husband.—A few days previous to the sailing of the last steamer, a quiet-looking elderly woman solicited the assistance of Mr. Broderip, one of the London police magistrates, under the following circumstances. She complained that her daughter, a girl of seventeen, had gone through the ceremony of marriage without being blessed with a husband. It was, of course, at the time of the nuptials, supposed that she was being united to one of the other sex, and they went to York to spend the honeymoon; but her daughter to her great surprise, discovered that she had been married to a woman in male attire, and the mother of three children. Mr Broderip, after stating that there were other cases of a similar character on record, and learning that the marriage was solemnized at Highgate church, referred complainant to the magistrate of the district. Before leaving the court, however, the mother made the following most extraordinary statement:—She said that the pseudo-husband was first introduced to her in female attire, under the name of Mrs. Panton, but, after an intimacy of some months, suddenly appeared in the costume of a gentleman, announcing himself as Mr. Albert Guelph, and declaring that he was issue of George IV. and Queen Caroline but that for certain reasons his existence had hitherto been kept a profound secret, but that his love for her fair daughter had wrung it from his heart, and induced him to appear in the becoming habiliments of his own sex, in lieu, of the feminine attire he had been disguised in for years, by direction of a very benign old lady, who met him periodically in Park lane, and supplied him with cash edlibitum. As he dressed very fashionably, and always had plenty of money, the mother, believing the story, consented to their nuptials, particularly as the soi-disant Mrs. Panton and her daughter had upon the occasion of little visits slept together before; and so Miss Robbins changed her name for Mrs. Guelph, on the 12th of September, 1832, by license, at Highgate church; but alas! soon discovered that Mrs. Panton was but a woman after all!

Old Advertisements.—In 1741 the newspapers of Boston contained the following advertisements. They read oddly enough now, and show what a man of all work the printer was in those days:

"To be sold by the printer of this paper, the very best Negro Woman in this town, who has had the small pox and the measles; is as hearty as a horse, as brisk as a bird, and will work like a beaver."

"To be sold by the printer of this paper, a Negro Man, about 30 years old, who can do both town and country business very well, but will suit the country best, where they have not so many dram shops as we have in Boston. He has worked at the printing business 15 or 16 years; can handle axe, saw, spade, hoe, or other implement of industry as well as most men, and values himself and is valued by others, for his skill in cookery."

Think of a colored slave in Boston in 1741, a printer for 15 years, fond of visiting dram shops, and valued for his skill as a cook!

☞ The following is from the pen of Mr. A. Hildreth, the recently appointed Postmaster of Lowell, and is far beyond anything in the letter of Mr. Bronson, which caused his removal;—

"The writer is an enormous hypocrite and scoundrel, and the person he writes to is a paltry, peddling, huckstering knave. * * * But this interference with State legislation, is a matter which must be immediately corrected, or there is no independence likely to be left. We are ready to co-operate with slaveholders and abolitionists, hards and softs, anybody and everybody, to get rid of such a monstrous tyranny as this. * * * But Cushing is a hypocrite as well as a tyrant. There is not a democrat in the State more deeply implicated in the coalition with freesoilers than he is. He broke with the hunkers on this very ground."

We suppose Mr Hildreth's head will now come off.

The President's Message will be sent to Postmasters of the most important cities in advance, to be given to the newspapers the moment it is presented to Congress.

——A Western editor, speaking of the venerable appearance of a stump orator, said that he 'he stood up like one of 'em with his bald head and hands in his breeches pocket!'

Whigs, 15; Dem., 3.

The compliment to Col. Calkins is generous, and well merited. The Col. is a right down good fellow. The re-election of their old Clerk secures capacity and experience in that office; with Mr. Brainard for Janitor, and a board of ability and working habits, there is nothing wanting to insure the faithful transaction of the public business. The selection of Mr. Brainard for Janitor was honored by the appointment of a Committee to notify him of his election, and it was made the subject of some pleasantry by suggesting that the Committee notify him from day to day! His selection was also understood to have some significance which was well known there and need not be repeated here.

The Supervisors of a County in this State have become an important body, about equal to the Vt. Legislature. Every year increases the importance of sending the best men.

It will be seen that owing to the storm the vote this year is less than half that of last year, and that owing to the strife of the democratic factions their vote was out in greater proportions than that of the whigs, who are proverbial for apathy except on great occasions and this year particularly they seemed to rely upon the divisions of their opponents for success.

To Whigs and Hunkers the result of this election is particularly gratifying. There was a friendly feeling among whigs towards Mr. Watson. He has received a complimentary vote and all classes are glad of it. The poor softs have become terribly nervous. They dont contemplate the result with any sort of complacency.

The end is to be their annihilation.—There will never be any compromise with Van Burenism by whigs or hunkers. It is war to the bitter end. As to the vote on Senator, we will not add to what we have heretofore said. The comments of the people are carried on in a spirit of good humor, but with a full appreciation of the merits of the candidates and the course they pursued in the election and in their hands we leave the subject.

Navigation.—The Saranac has gone into winter quarters, the line making but one trip a day, and must be altogether closed in Comparitive Vote between Hards and Softs.

As there is a good deal of curiosity to know the comparitive vote between the two wings of the Democratic party, we subjoin the result as far as received, deferring our full comparative Table until more officials are received:

☞We understand that the Rutland and Burlington R R. under the pressure of temporary embarrassments, has passed into the hands of the Second Mortgage Bond holders. The Company, will offer at auction, at Boston, on the 30th inst., $180,000 of their second mortgage bonds. The earnings of the road for the year ending last May, were ample to pay the entire interest of both mortgages and leaves a balance of $56,900, and the gross earnings of this year are stated by the Treasurer to be at the rate of 50 per cent increase over last.—[Troy Whig.

☞For the past few days there have been curent in the street rumors prejudicial to the financial standing of the Rutland and Washington R. R company. These rumors, we understand, have arisen from the fact that certain creditors, (among them Merritt Clark, Esq., late President of the Co.') took measures to secure their debts by attaching the furniture of the Road.—We understand that a meeting of the Directors was held at Albany a day or two since, and that an assignment is talked of. The Rutland and Washington Road is a principal link in the "Albany and Rutland Road."—[Troy Whig.

The Hard Democracy of Livingston have prepared an obituary, which they intend to have inscribed upon the tomb of freesoilism. Here it is:

OBITUARY.

The Van Buren or Freesoil Party;
Born of respectable colored parents, at Buffalo, N. Y.,
August, 1848:
Died at sunset, November 8, 1853.
Aged 5 years and 3 months.

A post mortem examination proved the immediate cause of death to be cholera infantum, produced by too strong meat being forced into its weakened stomach, causing immediate death.

Spicy Compliments.—Commend us to the Cleveland Plain Dealer for a 'first-rate notice.' Speaking of the New York Herald, it declares in a burst of enthusiastic admiration, that there is no paper in the United States which can equal Bennett's journal 'in a cool, deliberate, downright lie.' It says that 'the Herald is among liars what Michael Angelo is among sculptors. Titian or Rubens among common chickens, or Dick Turpin among highwaymen.'

Now, that's what we call rather fulsome flattery! Bennett must blush the deepest scarlet, at finding the praise laid on so thick.

False Prophets.—All through the late election croakers would have it that whigs would not vote together, and that a part at least of the Locofoco (Van Buren) ticket would be elected. The result has proved that the great body of the whigs of the State were true. It is now asserted with renewed zeal that the whigs will quarrel and divide within six months. We trust there is wisdom enough in the Legislature to avert such a catastrophy and prove this phropesy false also. The enemy is already busy with his plots and stratagems, and upon no string of his bow does he play harder, or longer than upon the jealousies of the Woollies and Silver Greys. To the Silver Greys, he says, 'you are hewers of wood and drawers of water' to the Woollies. To the Woollies he presists that the Silver Greys are traitors. And he spares neither logic, nor device to excite suspicion.

It is to be hoped that whigs will not be duped by this artful device, but keeping these disinterested locofocos at a suitable distance, and stamping their suggestions under foot, confiding in whigs and looking to them for counsel, with a wise prudence and a becoming zeal for the public weal, avoiding hobbies and schemes of ambitious fools, —whigs may retain the State for years to come.

☞On her trip North on Thursday, the America encountered one of the severest gales experienced on the Lake this season. After passing Split Rock she was compelled to head directly in the wind, and this course run her into Smith's Bay, where she lay all night. The America weathered the blow in gallant style, and Capt. O'Grady and his crew spared no pains to make the passengers comfortable and "at home."

Speaker.—The Speaker of the next Assembly is attracting some attention.—Without dilating upon his merits for that post, which are well known to be rare, we have to suggest the name of Judge Mitt. Let us have something in Northern New York at least.

Horace Greeley.

The following beautiful passage closes Horace Greeley's oration, lately delivered at the Indiana State Fair:—

"As for me, long tossed on the stormiest waves of doubtful conflict and arduous endeavors, I have begun to feel, since the shades of forty years fell upon me, the weary, tempesst-driven voyager's longing for land, the wanderer's yearning for the hamlet where in childhood he nestled by his mother's knee, and was soothed to sleep on her breast. The sober downhill of life dispels many illusions while it developes or strengthens within us the attachment, perhaps long smothered or overlaid, for that 'dear hut, our home.' And so I, in the sober afternoon of life, when its sun, if not high, is still warm, have bought me a few acres of land in the broad still country, and, bearing thither my house-hold treasures, have resolved to steal from the city's labor and anxieties at least one day in each week, wherein to revive as a farmer the memories of my childhood's humble home. And already I realize that the experiment cannot cost as much as it is worth. Already I find in that day's quiet, an antidote and a solace for the feverish cares of the weeks which environ it. Already my brook murmers a soothing evening song to my burning, throbbing brain; and my trees, gently stirred by the fresh breezes, whisper to my spirit something of their own quiet strength and patient trust in God. And thus do I faintly realize, but for a brief and flitting day, the serene joy which shall irradiate the Farmer's vocation, when a fuller and truer Education shall have refined and chastened his animal cravings, and when Science shall have endowed him with her treasures, redeeming Labor from drudgery, while quadrupling its efficiency, and crowning with beauty and plenty our bounteous beneficient Earth."

A Scene at the National.—Madame Rumor tells funny stories sometimes. She gives the following account of an interview between Prince John Van Buren, on his recent visit to this city, and Colonel Beverly Tucker, the Sentinel of the Hards. The scene was at the National Hotel, where the Prince stopped, and where the gallant Colonel met him, and thus accosted him:

Why, John, how are you? What the devil brought you here? Have the Hards driven you out of Gotham or has Guthrie called you down here to give an account of yourself? How's the election?

P. J.—God bless you. Bev., how do you do? As for the election, I know nothing about it. Guthrie is all right; I go in for the resolutions of '98; hold that 'the blood of the martyrs is the seed of the Church,' and my business here is to buy a nigger!

T.—Buy a nigger! Good gracious, Prince, now you surprise me!

P. J.—Yes, buy a nigger! I consider a nigger the great panacea, the ornament of the christian, the emblem of faith and fidelity in the politician, and altogether something very important to mankind generally. Just see how Bronson has been puffed into a star of the first magnitude by galvanizing a short lecture to Guthrie upon niggers—they have nearly made a great man out of Dickinson—more than half humanized Charley O'Connor, and even raised poor Cooley to the precints of notoriety. Since miracles have ceased, no such wonders have been performed before, and all by nigger. Nothing in Edmonds about spirit rappings begin to come up to it. I tell you, Bev., I must have a nigger—my fame requires it, and my personal wants demand it!

T.—Nonsense, John; but do you really want a nigger?—because, if you do, you must have one.

P. J.—Why, certainly I do. Everybody seems to doubt everything I say about niggers. I tell you, Bev., I have changed my mind upon that subject, and though I did not think so once, I now regard 'the Wilmot' with the same abhorrence I do the Maine Law. It's sumptuary, merely—a check upon pleasure—upon personal comfort—upon all the arts and all the sciences—upon greatness—upon chivalry—and, therefore, any man that can't see this, and hasn't got a nigger in his eye in these days, is no man at all.

T.—Why, John, you talk like a saint! Give us your views in the Sentinel, and then you will be considered orthodox.—They are as sound as a nut. I thought you would come right at last.

P. J.—Sound! Why I am as sound on niggers as the stump candidate was on the goose question. The only trouble is to make the world believe it. I want to 'crush out' unbelief and the Sentinel isn't strong enough for that. I must have a nigger—a real hard nigger—an ordained Adamantine—such a one as Dickinson would delight to chose, and as would make a fit companion for Cooley. I tell you, Bev., that I must get ahead of the whole batch, and

"Niggers! niggers! niggers are the cards Wherein to catch the conscience of the Hards."

suppose we agree on the Maine Law.

T.—Ah! John, therein we do harmonize perfectly, and * * * *

The colloquists then retired into a corner. It is shrewdly suspected to converse about the printing of Congress.—Washington Star.

Vermont U. S. Senate.—In all probability there will be no election of U. S Senator by the present Legislature of Vermont. Neither Whigs nor Democrats are disposed to make any concession in this office to the Free Soilers, and, still, neither can effect anything without the aid of the latter. The Free Soilers, though but a handful, in their turn will grant no favors, and consequently there is no concert of action. The Green Mountain Freemen, the State organ of the Free Soilers in its last issue, says:

From the present appearances, there will be no Senator chosen this session, the Whigs, in the Senate, throwing their votes for nearly as many different candidates as there are Whig members in that body, in order to prevent the election going into joint assembly, fearing an election against them be made. We have received several communications on the subject, which, though approving of the co-operation which has taken place in State offices, think no compromise should be made by our friends on Senator by which any but a Free Democrat would be elected. As far as we can learn, no such compromise is thought of by our friends in the Legislature.

☞Nebraska has stood at the door of the Union seven years. At every session of Congress a bill to 'organize the territory of Nebraska' has been taken up—and laid down again. Her inhabitants will renew their application at the coming session, and it may be a subject of debate.

The objection to Nebraska—for there is but one—is a simple one. By the terms of the 'Missouri Compromise' all territories formed out of the country north of latitude 36° 30' are to be free from 'involuntary servitude.' This, the South not only agreed to, but proposed, twenty-five years ago. The proposition was adopted, and has been adhered to. But now it is intimated that the law must be rescinded, or Nebraska cannot come in.

It is to be noticed that in this case, if there is to be 'aggression,' it must come from the side of Slavery. If the Union is again put in danger, it must be by some proposition from the South side of 36° 30'. The advocates of the admission of Nebraska do not seek for a new 'Wilmot Proviso.' They do not want any legislation for Freedom. They only occupy the ground the 'Hunkers' and 'Union Men' have always taken. They stand by past 'Compromises and the Constitution.' They are in favor of Gen. Cass's 'non intervention' principle. They do not go beyond the principles laid down at Castle Garden in 1850, when the 'Union' was most in 'danger.' They do not agitate the Slavery question, and all they ask of their opponents is, that they shall not agitate it. Let us see who will.—[Albany Journal.

On Dits at Albany.—A correspondent of the New York Mirror gives the following on dits at Albany:

The most prominent candidate for Speaker of the House is Littlejohn of Oswego, a gentleman of experience and conceded talent. Mr Pruyn, of Albany, is also said to be a candidate; but as the Clerk of the House will probably be selected from this city, of course he will not be pressed by his friends.

Lewis Benedict Jr., and Hugh J. Hastings, are mentioned as prominent candidates for the clerkship. The former was some years since Surrogate for this County and the latter the editor and proprietor of the well known and influential Whig newspaper, the Albany Knickerbocker. W. S. Gregory, of New York, is mentioned for Sergent at Arms of the House, W. G. Weed for the same position in the Senate. Mr. Bogart of Ithica, and L. S Hammond are mentioned in connection with the office of Clerk of the Senate. David S. Barnes may be appointed Superintendent of the Hall, although George Jackson is a candidate for the place, George Brainard or Alderman Watkins will be placed in charge of the Capitol. These latter positions are worth more than people generally suppose; pay and perquisites amounting to from $1,200 to $1,500 each per year, the incumbent having a fine residence in the building, fuel, light, &c., free. More anon.

Yours. Speed.

The brevity of Mr. Soule's speech to the Queen of Spain did not forbid the introduction of nonsense into it none the better for being stereotyped. He speaks of Mr. Pierce as 'the chief who presides over the destinies of the republic.' Now the destinies of this republic are quite independent of the Chief Clerk at Washington for such is Mr. Pierce and nothing more, the qualities of his office really silted. This rococco foolery in speaking of the President, whose work is dwindling every day with the wealth and importance of the States, should be dropped by every sensible man.—It might pass in a fogy politician with one foot in the grave, but for young America—proh pudor!—it shows that the man does not know his trade nor the new tongue of the new apostles.—N. Y. Tribune.

☞The Young Men's National Democratic Club, of New York, publish an 'Address to the National Democracy of the Union.' The election has given them confidence to speak more plainly of their purposes, than heretofore. They say they will sustain the President if he will select new advisers, but otherwise, they turn to the immediate Representatives of the people in Congress and ask them to protect the true Democracy from attempts to diminish its just influence.' And they call upon the young men in the State and Union, to begin forthwith to organize for the next Presidential campaign. They admit that they may have to struggle unsuccessfully till 1856, but consider even that alternate preferable to any association with their enemies. This looks very much as if they were in earnest.

A Novel Marriage Ceremony.—The Rochester Union of Nov. 15th, says the Rev. Antoinette L. Brown, this morning, as the officiating clergy-man, united a happy couple in the bonds of holy wedlock—thus probably becoming the pioneer in this interesting department of Woman's Rights. The parties were Delocs Allen and Eliza W. DeGarmo, both members of the Society of Friends. Those present state that the Rev. Miss Antoinette went through with the ceremony with marked propriety—omitting, however, all allusion to the primeval injunction. This is a progressive age—when man can be married by a girl as well as to a girl; and when girl doctors and girl divines undertake the cure of both body and soul.

Look out for a New Counterfeit.—Ones of the Market Bank of Troy altered to Tens have appeared. The genuine Tens read "Market Bank of Troy," in a circle over the centre engraving. The altered ones read "Market Bank of Troy," in a straight line beneath the centre engraving. The alteration consists in substituting in the left hand upper corner an 'X' for the figure '1;' also altered to read 'Ten,' wherever the genuine reads 'One.' The plates of the genuine and Ones are altogether different. The genuine Tens has an ox's head and horns in the left hand margin; the counterfeit has the Coat of Arms of New York State.

The Legislature.—The official returns render it pretty certain that the next Legislature will stand as follows:—Senate, Whigs 22; Hards 8; Softs 2. House Whigs 81; Hards 25; Softs 22;

CHAIRMAN OF THE BOARD OF SUPERVISORS.—It was generally understood previous to the meeting of the board, that this honor was to be conferred upon Hon. John C. Hammond of Crownpoint, or A. Wilder, Esq., of Lewis. Thes gentlemen, however, taking more pride in conferring than in receiving honors, proposed Col. Calkins, of Ticonderoga, and the suggestion had only to be made to meet with a cordial reception. The former gentlemen lose nothing by this kindness, and they bring into notice of the finest young whigs of the county. Long may they all wave.

The WEATHER.—On Wednesday, in N. Y., Albany and Troy, an overcoat was burdensome. On Thursday, daylight opened upon a cold, frozen, snow-covered earth, with a north-easter that blows right through a person.

A VERITABLE DOGBERRY.—A mayor of one the Communes in France lately made the following entry upon his register.

"I, mayor of———,found yesterday, in the forest of——, a man by the name of Rollin, committing an act against the laws. I commanded him to surrender, whereupon he set upon me, heaped me with insult and contumely, calling me a ragamuffin, an ass, and a precious dolt, and a scarecrow —all which I certify to be true."
